Outbreak Of Caterpillars Is Hitting State

Forest tent caterpillars will be with us again this year, the Department of Natural Resources reported.

They began hatching in Carlton County the week of April 27, and noticeable defoliation has already occurred in Becker county, said foresters.

Results of an egg mass survey conducted by DNR forest pest specialists this past winter indicate that heavy defoliation will occur again in part of northern Minnesota.

Heavy defoliation is expected in the following counties: St. Louis, eastern Carlton, Lake, eastern Roseau, Lake of the Woods and several townships in southeastern Becker.

Extensive defoliation had not been predicted for Pine county but a recent survey shows substantial populations of caterpillars. The caterpillars can be expected to cause defoliation outside the predicted area, say foresters, but it will be less severe and more scattered.

Defoliation usually becomes noticeable by the end of May, but recent weather conditions have resulted in earlier damage. Completely defoliated trees will refoliate by mid-July.

Trees usually suffer no serious overall effect except slight reduction in growth, so control is not necessary in the forest. However, trees which have suffered complete defoliation for three or four years may suffer some branch mortality.

On ornamental trees, small numbers of caterpillars can be picked off by hand but often large numbers of caterpillars migrate in from surrounding areas over a period of several weeks making any control difficult.

An average outbreak of the forest tent caterpillar lasts three to four consecutive years. Some parts of northern Minnesota have now suffered three years of heavy defoliation, and others have already suffered heavy defoliation for four years.

Hopefully, said officials, this year may be the last of this outbreak. Adverse weather, starvation, disease, parasites and predators eventually will control the forest tent caterpillar.

Sarcophagid fly, a parasite of the caterpillar, is expected to be very abundant in northern Minnesota this summer.

Senior Citizens To Be Honored At State Fair

Special ceremony honoring Minnesota's senior citizenry will be held at the 1980 Minnesota State Fair on Thursday, Aug. 28. Two persons will be named the state's outstanding senior citizens during the ceremony. Outstanding senior citizen program is sponsored by the Minnesota State Fair, the Minnesota board on aging and the Minnesota federation of county fairs.

Selection process will begin at County fairs and winners will advance to the statewide recognition program. Persons who live in counties with fair dates after the State Fair (Aug. 21 through Sept. 1) are also eligible.

Criteria include contributions to the community and activities as a senior citizen (age 65 and over). All Minnesotans 70 and over are eligible for the program and may be nominated by any group or individual.

Entry information and nomination forms are available through the Minnesota Board on Aging, Metro Square Building, St. Paul, Minn. 55101, phone (612) 296-2770; the Minnesota State Fair, Falcon Heights, Minn. 55108, phone (612) 642-2200; or Minnesota county fairs (names and addresses available from the State Fair). Entries for the statewide program must be postmarked by Aug. 1, 1980.

PROVIDING ENTERTAINMENT for Oakland Park residents and visitors during the final day of Nursing home week celebrated Friday at the home is "Mr. Music Man," Paul Grenier, a resident of Crookston who has been entertaining Oakland Park residents for the past three years with his music machine — one of the many instruments he has revised himself to accompany him on his musical tours throughout the area. Oakland Park residents, Henry Grondahl (foreground) and Effie Johnson (back) share in the afternoon "Pioneer Days" activities.

School's Out - Be Cautious In Summer Driving

With area schools closing for the summer, motorists need to be especially cautious as youngsters take to the outdoors for several months of fun in the sun, the Minnesota state automobile association (AAA) advises.

Engrossed in play, vacationing students can forget their traffic safety rules — something drivers should keep in mind.

Mishaps can occur in a split second as children scurry from behind parked cars, dart across streets in pursuit of adventure or take to playing games in or near the streets.

Minnesota AAA urges drivers to slow down especially during the first few days of summer vacation. "Motorists should be extra careful when backing out of a driveway, no matter what time of day," warns Barbara Mittelstadt, traffic safety coordinator. "Stop and look both ways before entering the traffic flow. A skater, bicyclist or young pedestrian may be hidden from view."

Other areas where drivers should be alert for youngsters include recreational sites and residential areas. Curves and driveways can create blind spots for drivers.

"A rolling soccer ball may have a prospective athlete in pursuit," cautions Mittelstad, "and should be a warning to motorists."

Minnesota AAA urges parents to instruct their children in pedestrian safety, emphasizing the importance of being careful and playing only in supervised areas. Children should be instructed to cross streets only at corners after looking carefully both ways for oncoming cars and to proceed across the street at a walk, not a run.

Remember, it's up to drivers to be alert for youngsters enjoying the warm weather. It is the responsibility of parents to instruct their children in traffic safety.

Littering Is Costly Whether Caught Or Not

Minnesota transportation commissioner Richard Braun reminds Minnesota motorists of the stiff penalties for littering.

Anyone convicted of littering is subject to a fine and-or jail sentence, or the judge may order the offender to pick up litter along public roads.

Motorists are urged to put litter in the containers provided in rest areas, service stations or other designated areas.

Motorists paid about $800,000 in 1979 for collecting 5,500 truck loads of litter along state highways.

Employment Rate In April Is Unchanged

Minnesota's unemployment rate in April was six per cent, unchanged from March and up 1.4 per cent from April of 1979, commissioner Rolf Middleton of the Minnesota department of economic security reports.

The comparable national unemployment rate for April was 6.6 per cent.

Compared to April a year ago, the size of the Minnesota civilian labor force increased 5.3 per cent; the number employed increased 3.7 per cent; and the number of unemployed increased 38.9 per cent.

Minnesota's labor force in April was 2,140,800 persons, up 41,300 from March and up 107,300 from April of last year.

The number of persons employed in April was 2,012,200, up 39,400 from March and up 71,300 from April a year ago.

The number of persons unemployed in Minnesota in April was 128,600, up 1,900 from March and up 36,000 from April a year ago.

Production workers in manufacturing were paid average weekly earnings of $292.99 in April for working an average of 39.7 hours at $7.38 per hour.

In April of 1979, production workers were paid average weekly earnings of $263.35 for working an average of 38.9 hours at $6.77 per hour.

Rabies Clinic At Goodridge

A vaccination clinic will be held on Monday, June 2 from 5 to 7 p.m. for distemper and rabies vaccination of dogs and cats. Clinic is sponsored by the Lions Club of Goodridge and will be held next to the fire hall.

Encourage family members to look for and report accident or fire hazards. Plan for emergencies.

Vacation Plan Should Include Home Planning

Even though your house will be empty, it should appear as though it is lived-in, suggests the Thief River Falls police department. One or more lights should be connected to an automatic lamp timer which turns them on at dusk and off at bedtime, creating the impression that someone is inside.

Outdoor lights that turn on in the evening also add to the lived-in look and put a spotlight on attempts to break in, the department noted in making suggestions for vacation planning.

Shades and drapes should be left in their normal positions, not pulled tightly shut. All deliveries, such as milk and newspapers, should be discontinued.

Arrangements should also be made with a neighbor to keep the grass mowed and to remove circulars and handbills left on the porch. Mail can be held at the post office or removed from the mail box by a friend until your return.

The garage should be closed and locked whenever you are away. This protects you in three ways. First, it protects the tools, ladders, mowers, etc., which are kept in the garage, from being stolen. Second, it prevents these tools and ladders from being used to break into the home itself. Finally, it keeps the would-be burglar from knowing that the car is not there, which is an indication that no one is home.

Whenever you plan to be away for several days be sure to notify the police department. Tell them when you will leave, when you will return and there they can obtain a key in case of emergency. It is advisable to leave a key with a relative or friend who will check the house occasionally, water the plants and take care of any minor difficulties which may arise.

While it is advisable to notify the police and one trusted neighbor about your planned absence, be careful not to tell everyone in town. Don't leave notes on the door or in the milk bottle and don't mention your trip to the newspaper until after you return.

Musk Oxen Popular State Zoo Exhibit

As the old bull musk ox rumbles down the slope in a cloud of dust, the young males of the herd scatter before him. There is no doubt who is the boss. He may be menacing another with his long, curving horns or merely sauntering through the herd, his brown, shaggy "skirt" swaying around his ankles. Either way, all members of his domain move aside in respect when the old herdmaster passes by.

The male musk ox grows to about 800 pounds, (half the size of the American Buffalo) despite the fact that his natural habitat, the tundra, provides a scanty diet of sparse, dwarfed, often frozen vegetation. His stocky, hardy breed — actually more mountain goat than ox — has thrived on the wind-swept slopes of the high arctic since the ice age, one million years ago.

One reason for his survival in that cheerless environment is the ox's remarkable two layer coat. The undercoat, a dense, wooly fur, is covered by an outercoat of long, course hair, which nearly sweeps the ground.

Another reason is that musk oxen are threatened by few animal predators. They have an efficient method of fending off wolfpacks, the most serious threat to the herd. In this maneuver, the adults circle up shoulder to shoulder, with the calves safe in the middle of the ring. Wolves thus face a formidable wall of horns and usually retreat.

Not impervious to gunfire, however, the herds of arctic Canada and Greenland had become severely depleted by mid-nineteenth century. This ancient but unprolific species, now protected by the United States and Canada, is making a gradual comeback.

A single calf is born to the female musk ox every other year. Rutting season is in July or August, when bulls, to determine herd leadership gallop toward each other at a reckless pace and collide head to head with a resounding crack.

At that moment, when the air echoes with the crash of horns and the earth trembles, you are grateful that you are watching the action from behind a solid barrier at the Minnesota Zoo. To be sure, things will be lively on the slopes of the Zoo's musk ox territory during the late summer months. But don't wait 'til then to walk the Northern Trail or to take some of the other exciting zoo trails. Each represents a different region of the world, and as you walk them you are almost certain to see animals, birds and plants that you've never seen before.

Minnesota zoological garden is located south of the Twin Cities in Apple Valley. Admission prices to the zoo are: Adults 17 and over, $3; ages 12-16, $1.50; ages 6-11, $1; seniors 62 and over, $1.50. Children under five are admitted free. For further information call 432-9010.

"Views On Dental Health"

By Donald R. Goodrich, D.D.S.

DENTAL X-RAYS

For a dentist to conduct a complete dental examination without using dental x-rays, is like watching TV with your eyes closed. "Why", you may ask, "can't the dentist use his eyes and trusty mirror to do the same diagnosis?" Because, as the "unsinkable" Titanic discovered, like icebergs, most serious dental trouble is beneath the surface and out of view.

Dental x-rays often reveal beginning decay between the teeth or beneath a filling or at the bottom of a narrow pit or groove in the chewing surface. The amount of bone supporting teeth that has been destroyed by periodontal disease, the development of root abscesses and cysts, the presence of unerupted teeth or broken root fragments or impacted teeth can only readily be determined by x-rays since these abnormalities are normally hidden from view.

With modern, shielded equipment and high speed x-ray film, only a very small amount of x-ray radiation is required to take a complete set of pictures. It's less than we normally receive from illuminated watch faces. The X-ray camera is one of the dentist's most valuable diagnostic tools.

A public service to promote better dental health. From the office of: DONALD R. GOODRICH, D.D.S., Professional Bldg., Thief River Falls. Phone: 681-4506.

Rezoning Request Denied, Variance Granted By City

Planning commission recommendations brought before Thief River Falls city council members at their regular meeting last evening included the denial of Sid Bruggeman's request to rezone his business (Sid's Motors) from R-2 (residential) to C-2 (highway commercial).

"Planning commission feels that the area should be left residential," Jack Quinlivan, city planner, said. "These are also the feelings of the property owners in the area of the business."

Also, a variance was granted to Art Stordahl of Stordahl Truck Lines to permit Woodland construction to construct in his backyard, which would result in a rearyard setback of 12.5 feet rather than the required 35 feet.

Julie Chase, chairperson representing the Ripley Alliance for Battered women in Thief River Falls, appeared before council members with her request for the alliance to use the city's copy machine.

"Right now, we are not in a financial condition to purchase our own," she said.

Final resolution on the matter, introduced by alderman Bill Penning and seconded by alderman Clayton Restad, granted the use of the copy machine to the Alliance at three and one-half cents per copy (or the price consistent with the city's cost for copies) with a maximum of 500 copies per month.

Update on the status of the Thief River Falls fire hall mural was brought before council members by Royce Yeater of Foss Engelstad Foss in Moorhead.

Discussion involved the deduct change order removing the responsibility of the mural from Stan Ranum of Ranum construction, contractor of the project, to Bob Kurkowski, artist. City will make the direct payment of $2,500 to Kurkowski (instead of the initial $1,500) upon his satisfactory completion of the mural.

Roll call vote on the issue included five "yes" votes and one "no" vote from alderman Penning (alderman J. J. Womack was absent from the meeting and alderman Dr. Don Goodrich left momentarily) to accept the change order and grant the $2,500 to the artist upon completion of the mural on the west side of the fire hall building.

In other council action, recommendation by Duane Noel, Thief River Falls fire chief, to hire Richard A. Jensen, Thief River Falls, as volunteer firefighter to replace Leighton Hamre effective June 1, was accepted by council members.

In regular and special bills, Ken Froschheiser's recommendation for the city to pay the revenue sharing funds budgeted for the indoor range for the law enforcement center for the amount of $4,000 was accepted by city council members following the introduction of a resolution by alderman Restad and a second by alderman Ambrose Wysoski.

At a May 21 meeting between the street committee, Jim E. Walker, city engineer, and the owners of the Valley 24 grocery store located on First street and Pennington avenue in Thief River Falls, it was resolved that a second driveway would be constructed in the parking lot on the west side of the store. Also, an easement was granted for the city to move the proposed signal light off the sidewalk in front of the store nearer to the store.

Downtown parking assessment district project meeting was scheduled for 7:30 p.m. June 3 with the next regular city council meeting scheduled for June 9 instead of June 10 to allow city council members the opportunity to attend the League of Cities conference in Duluth June 11.

Avoid Power Lines To Stay Alive, Healthy

Springtime is a happy time for people, but this time of year also has its danger signals. Otter Tail power company would like to remind the public to "look up and live." In other words, make sure you don't come in contact with power lines when doing home work projects!

Every year tragedy strikes around the nation when do-it-yourself people are killed after coming in contact with overhead wires. Most of the victims are people who wrestle on rooftops with awkward radio and TV antennas. All too often antennas are blown against power lines, and the result is electrocution, serious burns or crippling falls.

Parents should make certain they instruct youngsters not to climb trees that are within the range of power lines. Climbing trees is a cherished childhood tradition, but tree climbing and coming in contact with power lines is also one of the highest causes of electrocution.

Another danger is related to kite flying. Following a few basic tips can save lives: Use wood and paper kites — never those made of wire or metal. String should be used, not wire or anything metallic. Fly kites only in open areas, where there are no power lines. If a kite becomes entangled in wires, do not try to rescue it yourself — call the power company.

A final warning: Stay away from downed power lines. Don't try to move a power line that is down, even with a stick. If the stick has moisture in it, or dirt on it, the stick will serve as a conductor and will become energized. If you are in a car and see that a snapped line is in contact with your vehicle, remain in the car. You can be electrocuted if you step from the car and touch the ground while you are still in contact with the vehicle. Wait until help comes.

If you have any other questions regarding electrocity and home safety, contact your nearest Otter Tail Power office.

Cattle, Hog Feeders Hurt By Low Price

Financial condition of U.S. cattle feeders and hog producers has deteriorated this year. Choice steer prices in late March were down about $5 from a year ago and hog prices were down almost $15.

But production costs have been sharply higher than last year because of rising interest rates and energy costs, reports the Minnesota department of agriculture.

Livestock prices have decreased because of large total red meat and poultry production and a weakening general economy. Total red meat production was up four per cent in the first quarter of 1980 and poultry output was up nearly nine per cent.

Low fed cattle prices and uncertain future price expectations have made cattle feeders reluctant to sell cattle they have in feedlots and purchase replacement feeder cattle. The slow marketing pace has continued to result in high average dressed weights.

These heavy weights contributed to a larger meat supply and lower wholesale beef prices. Even though weights were up, beef production in the first quarter was five per cent below the same period in 1979. Production in the second and third quarters should be near year-earlier levels.

Choice 900-1,100 pound steer prices averaged $67 in the first quarter and should average in the high $60's to low $70's in the second and third quarters. Higher interest rates and increased costs for most inputs continue to discourage cattle feeders from placing cattle on feed, putting additional downward pressure on feeder cattle prices. Yearling feeder cattle prices should average below year-earlier levels for the next two quarters.

Pork production was 21 per cent below year-ago levels in the first quarter and should remain near record levels for much of the year. The March 1 inventory of hogs and pigs in the 14 states surveyed was up seven per cent from a year ago and was the largest March inventory since 14-state records began in 1970.

Hog slaughter during the next two quarters will be drawn primarily from this inventory, so slaughter may be up eight to 10 per cent in the second quarter and four to six per cent in the third.

Hog prices averaged $36 in the first quarter of 1980, down from $52 last year. Prices in the second quarter should range from near $30 at the beginning of the quarter to the upper $30's at the end and average near $35. Hog prices may average in the upper $30's during the second half of the year.

Important Agriculture Legislation

Congress is beginning to take action which should improve the economic climate for the farmer and those who depend on agri-business. If approved, legislation passed by the House Agriculture Committee will also help the economy of the Seventh District and other rural areas throughout the nation.

Listed below are several bills recently approved by the House Agriculture Committee:

—On May 7th, the Committee approved H.R. 7364, a bill designed to increase the loan rates for grains placed into the farmer-owned reserve program and to raise the levels at which the grain can be taken out of the reserve for the 1980 and 1981 crop years. Under this legislation, the loan rate will be $3.30 for wheat and $2.40 for corn. Farmers will also be eligible for advance storage payments which are produced under existing reserve regulations. This bill will also set the "release price" for grain in the reserve at not less than $4.00 per bushel of wheat and $3.00 per bushel for corn. The Secretary of Agriculture would also be authorized to raise the "call" price and increase the minimum resale price for government-owned grain at 5 per cent above the reserve "call" level. It also eliminates a current ceiling on the amount of wheat which can be entered in the farmer-owned reserve.

—On May 8th, the Committee approved H.R. 7121, a bill to increase the loan rate for 1980 and 1981 soybeans to $5.02. The current rate is $4.50 per bushel.

—The Committee also approved on May 8th H.R. 2968, a bill to authorize the Department of Agriculture to provide grants to states and regional planning efforts to determine the need for the best location for grain subterminal facilities on main rail lines and viable branch lines. This legislation authorizes up to $3.3 million for three fiscal years beginning October 1, 1980. Also authorized would be government insured and guaranteed loans through the Farmers Home Administration to finance construction or improvements of subterminal facilities included in approved state or regional plans.

Other important agriculture legislation has recently been signed into law. These bills include:

P.L. 96-734 (signed into law April 11, 1980) — This bill allows farmers who did not comply with the 1979 set-aside program to put crops into the farmer owned grain reserve. Farmers placing grain in the reserve are eligible for long-term government price support loans on their crops, which means a new source of credit for producers. According to preliminary data, approximately 80 per cent of the U.S. crop was produced on farms not in compliance with the 1979 program.

—P.L. 96-220 (signed into law on March 30, 1980) — This legislation extends until September 30, 1981, the emergency loan program of the Farmers Home Administration. It authorized an additional $2 billion for the direct or guaranteed loan to farmers and ranchers providing they were unable to find credit elsewhere.

These bills will help the farmer, but they do not really go far enough. We need to develop a strong farm policy that will allow the farmer to earn a profit. Congress cannot be expected to approve a bill or program that guarantees a profit, but I think we need a farm program that will reward the farmer for doing a good job. We also need to develop a farm policy which encourages and assists young people to become farmers, and we must examine the current inheritance taxes which, frequently make it difficult for young farmers to take over the family farm. In general, Congress must review the current state of agriculture and determine what must be done to insure a stable and prosperous future for agriculture.

Closed School Buildings Being Kept In Use

by Jeanne Hanson
'U' M News Service

Will abandoned schools house senior citizen centers, welfare offices and dental clinics instead of students? Will teacher shortages become severe? Will home computers lead students out of their classrooms?

In 10 years, declining enrollments in Minnesota's schools could result in changes like these, according to Charles Sederberg and Van Mueller, professors of educational administration at the University of Minnesota.

With fewer and fewer students, the school buildings themselves are becoming brick and mortar white elephants. Some districts are learning to use them creatively.

Roseville is turning an elementary school into a community center — a good plan in an urban area, Mueller said. St. Louis Park has opened a senior citizen center in one of its closed elementary schools. Other surburban schools now house Montessori schools, early morning-late afternoon drop-off centers for the children of working parents, and municipal offices. One Minneapolis school is being converted into housing.

South St. Paul has welfare programs in one wing of its junior high school, Akley has a senior citizen tutoring program in one partly open school, and Crookston has a Head Start program in a school, according to Fred Christianson, school facilities planning and operations director at the state department of education. Most closed schools in the state are being used for county and other public services, Christianson said.

An article by Fred Hechinger in the "New York Times" suggests that more could be done. Rather than tear down or board up schools, districts could rent them to health care services like dental clinics and preventive health depots, especially if some form of national health insurance is enacted by Congress.

Schools could house field offices for teacher training institutions, private enterprise job-training sites where students develop and sell products and services, and art centers, Hechinger wrote. Charles Stewart Mott foundation has published a book on uses for closed school buildings, he said.

Some proposed uses can cause problems. Bloomington wanted to sell a school to the Metropolitan Transit Commission (MTC) but had to change its plans when neighbors complained about the traffic it would create, Mueller said. Zoning problems can be tricky, Sederberg said, citing one district that had to turn down the highest bid for a school from "an Arabian Nights version of the YMCA." Commercial enterprises and flophouses might also run into local opposition, he said.

Some small towns don't need another community center, Mueller said. So some schools end up torn down or boarded up and mothballed until the slight baby boom expected in the mid-1980s, Mueller said. And a community resource is lost.

Teachers are being lost, too, as enrollment declines. Spring layoffs are an annual trauma in many districts, though extended leaves of absence for teachers and incentives for early retirement are offered throughout the state.

This teacher reduction may be working too well, Mueller said. "By the mid to late eighties, there is a good chance of a general teacher shortage," he said. Inflation and the promise of future cutbacks are encouraging teachers to move to other jobs. And teacher training institutions are now graduating about half as many elementary and secondary school teachers as they were a decade or so ago.

So far, teacher shortages already exist in some science and math fields and in home economics and girls' physical education. And the demand for special education teachers still has not been met. Some 40 small schools in the state don't even have a licensed high school principal, Mueller said.

Computer hardware cannot replace teachers but will cause major changes in the schools in the next 10 years, according to Mueller. He foresees more terminals in each school as computers come to be used for extra drills and practice and for games in subjects from spelling to economics. "Students need computer literacy and, as home computers become cheaper and more common, schools will have to adapt," he said.

Competition among electronics companies and TV satellite systems will force change on the schools, added Art Harkins, educational futurist at the university. He predicts that students will learn at home part time with their home computers and drop in at neighborhood centers for extra help. "A lot of kids don't need all the classroom time they're getting," he said. This way will save energy and money too.

State Tourism Attractive To Minnesotans

"The vacation spotlight is on Minnesota once again," according to Cary Moss, outdoor editor with the Minnesota State Automobile association (AAA).

"The world of travel and leisure has undergone phenomenal changes in the last six years," Moss said. The old marathon, cross-country vacations are being replaced by "destination vacations." This means that people go to one spot and use it intensively.

"Minnesota, with its natural beauty and numerous resorts, is ideally suited to this type of vacation. And, with the high cost of gasoline, Minnesotans are rediscovering their own state," said Moss. "In the past month I've talked with resort owners from around the state that have told me they're now getting inquiries from guests that they haven't heard from in 15 or 20 years," he added.

The record number of people that headed out to their favorite fishing spot during the fishing opener last weekend is proof of the enormous interest in one of Minnesota's top recreational attractions — fishing, Moss noted. Minnesota department of tourism estimated that over a million people turned out for the opener.

Reservations for summer family vacations at Minnesota's resorts are running ahead of last year, especially in the central part of the state, according to Arnold Hewes, executive vice president of the Minnesota hotel and resort association. He also noted that many of the reservations are from Minnesotans.

Although driving fewer miles is an excellent way to save on driving costs, Minnesota AAA reminds motorists that there are many other ways they can save gasoline.

Whether driving an automobile or a recreational vehicle, keeping it well-tuned can increase mileage by nine to 15 per cent. And when you fill up, check the air pressure in the vehicle's tires. Underinflated tires can increase gas use by one mpg.

Try not to overload your car: the more weight your vehicle carries, the more gasoline it uses.

Good driving habits — staying within posted speed limits, avoiding fast starts and excess idling, and keeping a steady foot on the accelerator — can all increase your mileage.

Examine your everyday driving habits. It may be possible to cut down on family, work and social driving by combining trips, riding with friends or car pooling.

Schools Adapt To Change When Classes Shrink

by Jeanne Hanson
'U' M News Service

The little red schoolhouse bell may ring again soon as elementary schools gather their few remaining students into one room. High school teachers may become "specialists," and students may spend a few days each week studying at home. Voucher systems may allow parents to choose any public school they want their children to attend.

Each of these things could happen in the next 10 years as Minnesota schools adjust to declining enrollment, a trend shared by 37 other states. Although there will be small population rallies, schools will probably never again see as many students as they did in 1970, said Van Mueller, professor of educational administration at the University of Minnesota.

Some 53 Minnesota schools — mostly elementary schools — closed last spring alone, according to state department of education figures.

"Instead of sitting around waiting to go down the tubes, schools can adapt to the change creatively," said Charles Sederberg, professor of educational administration and director of the center for educational policy studies at the university.

Mueller and Sederberg offered several predictions and ideas.

An ungraded elementary school similar to the old-one room school may evolve again, Sederberg said. "It's the most promosing approach to keeping elementary schools open in small districts."

There are few around now, even in more modern buildings, partly because the "mass production, assembly line" approach to education stresses specific work tasks in specific subjects for students of each age — all with different teachers and measured against performance standards, Sederberg said.

But when schools are faced with 10 children per elementary grade, they may choose to maintain a few rooms in their own district rather than be forced to merge with a neighboring district.

In the junior and senior high schools, we may see "learning centers" in the future, Sederberg said. All grades of math students, for example, might meet in one classroom with one math teacher. Teacher would be trained as a complete specialist and would supervise student work in everything from algebra to trigonometry.

Individual programmed math instruction, some student-to-student teaching and some outside enrichment resources such as guest speakers from computer companies could be used to supplement the teacher's efforts.

A learning center could be set up in any large classroom for any subject, and would be feasible until enrollment in grades seven through 12 dropped to 140 to 150 students, Sederberg said. After that, schools would have to share centers.

For very small districts in very remote places, teachers of the future may have to become "extension agents," providing study materials for students to do at home a couple of days each week. Such a plan would mean fuel savings for school districts like the one that now sends a bus every day to the end of the Gunflint trail near Grand Marais to pick up two students. But home study is most appropriate for places like Alaska, Sederberg said. Too much individual study has been called the "lonely curriculum."

Traditional school programs have to change, though, when enrollments drop below about 300 students in grades 7 through 12, Sederberg said. Even below 375 students, quality begins to suffer as teachers for subjects like art and music come to be seen as expensive frills and class sizes rise. Mass production model breaks down.

Class sizes now vary from district to district but are at an all-time low in most schools, Mueller said. He expects this trend to continue, though there will be some large classes in bigger districts that are able to combine classrooms and drop teachers a bit more easily.

Result of smaller classes could be more indivualized treatment for students. Or it could be a "voucher system" in which families would help arrange enrollment by choosing which public school their children attend at public expense, Mueller said. Transportation costs for this plan would not be excessive, he said, because studies indicate that most families choose the neighborhood school anyway.

Also, more districts might arrange split-grade classes, he said. A school that now has 36 fifth graders, 24 sixth graders and the four teachers required to teach them could take 12 children out of each grade to make one class with both fifth and sixth graders. Then only three teachers would be needed. Although it might seem awkward, this method might be more palatable to parents than merging whole schools.

It is also one step forward — and backward — to the one-room school house.

State Tennis Tournament Gets Underway Today

Thief River Falls' quest for a state championship began today (Wednesday) at 12 noon when the Prowlers tackled Edina West in a first round match in the 1980 Minnesota Class AA state high school tennis tournament being played in Bloomington.

The Region 8AA champion Prowlers entered the match as the No. 1 rated team in the state coaches association poll. Thief River Falls has held that position since the first preseason poll was announced in late February. The Region 6AA champion Cougars were ranked No. 9 in the latest poll after starting the year No. 3.

In other first round Class AA matches today, it was Region 2AA champion Hutchinson vs. Region 4AA winner Anoka; Region 1AA titlist Austin vs. Region 3AA representative Henry Sibley; and Region 5AA victor Minneapolis Southwest vs. Region 7AA entry Virginia.

Semifinals and finals will be played Thursday. In the 9 a.m. semifinals it'll be the Thief River Falls-Edina West winner vs. the Minneapolis Southwest-Virginia winner, and the Hutchinson-Anoka winner vs. the Austin-Henry Sibley winner.

Championship and third place matches will get underway at 1 p.m. Thursday.

Thief River Falls' familiar line-up will feature senior Bill Jury, No. 1 singles; senior Mitch Rustad, No. 2 singles; junior Paul Koppang, No. 3 singles; senior Tom Bjorkman and senior Mark Collins, No. 1 doubles; senior Bill Holmes and junior Mark Lundin, No. 2 doubles.

Rustad is currently ranked as the No. 5 player in the state and Jury is No. 7. At the start of the year Jury was No. 2 and Rustad was No. 7. Chris Coombs of Edina West, Jury's opponent today, has been ranked No. 1 in the coaches' poll all year.

Individual portion of the Class AA state tournament — featuring singles and doubles entries from regional qualifying meets — will be played Friday and Saturday. Rustad, the Region 8AA runner-up to Casey Merickel of St. Cloud Apollo, will play singles in that one for the Prowlers while Jury and Koppang, the Region 8AA champions, will compete in doubles.

First round singles matches start Friday at 10:30 a.m. Doubles get underway at 12 noon that day. Quarterfinals in both singles and doubles are scheduled for 4:30 p.m. Thursday.

Singles and doubles semifinals start at 9 a.m. Saturday. Championship and third place doubles matches will begin at 12 noon that day. Championship and third place singles matches start at 2 p.m. Saturday.

First round Class A team pairings, which were scheduled to start at 2 p.m. today, featured Rochester Lourdes vs. St. Paul Academy, Blue Earth vs. Granite Falls, Blake vs. Roseau and Wadena vs. Gilbert.

In opening round individual play Friday, Rustad will meet Mike McCraw of Hutchinson while Jury and Koppang go against Bob Tassman and Ken Hiedelberg of Osseo.

State tournament matches will be played at the 98th Street Tennis Club in Bloomington. In the event play is forced indoors the matches will be split between two Bloomington sites — the 98th Street Tennis Club and the Southdale Tennis Club.

WITH A REGION 8AA championship trophy already in hand, Thief River Falls, the No. 1 rated team in the state, go after bigger and better things this week in Bloomington as the Prowlers compete in the 1980 Minnesota Class AA state tennis tournament. Edina West of Region 6AA was the first round Thief River Falls opponent today (Wednesday) at 12 noon. Members of the Thief River Falls team, shown after picking up the Region 8AA team trophy last week following a 3-2 win over St. Cloud Apollo at Brainerd, include, front row left to right, Bill Holmes, Bill Jury, Mark Lundin and Tom Bjorkman; back row left to right, Paul Koppang, Mitch Rustad, Mark Collins and coach Whitey Olson.

Cougars Tip Prowlers 3-2

Edina West eliminated Thief River Falls in first round competition today (Wednesday) in the 1980 Minnesota Class AA state high school tennis tournament with a 3-2 decision at the 98th Street Tennis Club in Bloomington.

The match, which started at 12 noon, included Edina West wins at No. 1 singles, No. 3 singles and No. 1 doubles. The Prowlers' lone points came from Mitch Rustad at No. 2 singles and from No. 2 doubles, staffed by Bill Holmes and Mark Ludin.

A more detailed report will be carried in Monday's edition of the Times.

Region 8AA Title Won By St. Cloud

St. Cloud Apollo routed Moorhead 11-2 Tuesday in the 1980 Region 8AA high school baseball championship game played at Moorhead.

Apollo, the South Half Region 8AA champion, will take a 16-4 record into next week's Minnesota Class AA state baseball tournament, scheduled to be played Thursday and Friday, June 5-6 at Parade Stadium in St. Paul.

The Eagles will meet either Benilde-St. Margaret's or Osseo in a first round state tournament game at 3 p.m. June 5. The Knights and Orioles will meet today (Wednesday) in the Region 5AA championship game.

Fertile-Beltrami and Roseau were opening round winners Tuesday in Region 8A tournament play at Red Lake Falls.

The Rams opened with a 6-1 victory over Bagley and defending champion Fertile-Beltrami followed with a 3-2 extra-inning win over Red Lake Falls by scoring the winning run on a bases-loaded single with two out in the bottom of the eighth.

Region 8A championship game will be played tonight, with the Rams and Falcons meeting at 7:30 p.m. for a berth in the 1980 Minnesota Class A state baseball tournament, scheduled to be played Thursday and Friday June 5-6 at St. Cloud.

Thief River Falls, as the No. 1 rated team in the state, had to be considered a favorite heading into today's (Wednesday) first round Minnesota Class AA state high school tennis tournament matches.

But for the Prowlers to win their first ever tennis title, they would have to overcome a Twin Cities domination of the sport that has found metropolitan area teams winning 11 of the past 14 state tennis tournaments. Eight of those trophies went to Edina schools, and Thief River Falls drew Edina West as an opening round foe today.

Since 1966 the only non-Twin Cities schools to win state tennis championships were Austin in 1969, St. Cloud Tech in 1976 and Blue Earth in 1977.

Edina East, beaten 3-2 by Edina West in the Region 6AA finals this spring, won the top prize four of the past seven years. The Hornets won a year ago with a 5-0 championship match victory over Virginia, a 3-2 first round state tournament winner over Thief River Falls.

The Prowlers have collected a lot of hardware over the past four years when current seniors Bill Jury, Mitch Rustad and Tom Bjorkman broke into the line-up as freshmen in 1977. They've won 30 straight regular season dual meets since then; were Section 8 champions in 1978; Region 8AA champions in 1979 and 1980.

Biggest prize, however, awaits them this week. And although work schedules, travel distance and time will keep the Prowlers from having a large fan delegation in Bloomington, they have thousands of people in this city who have taken a lot of pride in the team's accomplishments.

MSHSL Acts On Hockey Rules

Action by the Minnesota State High School League board of directors has altered the ten-goal rule for high school hockey games next winter, but left the two-minute penalty in effect.

Used for the first time during the 1979-80 season, the ten-goal rule, much like the ten-run rule in baseball, put an early end to the game whenever someone had a lead of ten or more goals after two periods of hockey had been completed.

But according to an MSHSL survey, problems were created when a superior team displayed demeaning tactics in trying to prolong playing time in a one-sided game. Therefore, MSHSL officials argued, there was a need to shorten the playing time of a lopsided game as well as maintaining the option to terminate the game.

So by action of the MSHSL board of directors, games may be shortened after two periods or during the third period by using running time when a team leads an opposing team by six or more goals. This shortened game procedure will apply to all regular season and section tournament games in 1980-81, but will not apply to the state hockey tournament.

There was quite a bit of discussion about the penalty time, lengthened two years ago from 1½ to two minutes in Minnesota high school hockey. A MSHSL survey showed 31 coaches in the state in favor of the 1½ minute penalty and just 15 in favor of the two minute charge. A Minnesota hockey coaches ballot during the 1980 state tournament showed a 65-18 margin in favor of the return to the 1½ minute penalty.

However, in the MSHSL survey, officials working high school hockey games in Minnesota favored the two-minute by a 22-4 margin.

Those favoring the 1½ minute penalty said: "time proportion should be 1½ minutes for a 15-minute period; two minutes does not serve the purpose; there is not enough practice time to develop double units; it's hard to develop two sets of penalty killers and two sets of power play units; two minutes forces you to use players with lesser skills in special units; teams can take risks; gives the opponents' power play unit too much time to set up; two minutes is too long for accidental minor; goal should be more ice time, not less; third line does not get to play enough; two minutes is too severe; teams required to protect themselves too long; playing short is detrimental to hockey.

Those favoring the two-minute penalty said: "it discourages cheap penalties; requires coach to develop penalty killers; requires coach to develop power play units; makes penalty more meaningful; requires greater discipline; requires better coaching; should cut down on penalties; coach with discipline has advantage; causes players to be more cautious; put burden on cleaning up the game on coaches; two minutes gets rid of the hacking; coaching has become more important; rewards better coaching; teams work toward fewer penalties; coach will stress reducing penalties; makes 'em play the game the way it was intended to be played; a shorter penalty may be interpreted to mean sanction for rough play."

That same MSHSL survey showed that 20 per cent of all minor penalties result in a power play goal scoring in the last 30 seconds of the penalty.

Heartland Trail Receives Rave Notice By Public

A recreational trail established by the Department of Natural Resources from Park Rapids to Walker and Cass Lake has made a big hit with trail users and area residents, according to DNR officials.

To accommodate the increasing numbers of persons using the trail, the DNR has created "day use" areas at the town of Nevis, Dorset and Akeley and on Kabekona Bay of Leech Lake.

The areas have picnic tables, shelters, wells and outhouses and the Kabekona site will also feature a boat launching facility which will be constructed this summer.

The department has developed 27 miles of the trail for snowmobiling, hiking, bicycling and horseback riding. Development work on the remaining 21 miles of trail will begin this summer.

Private enterprises to rent bicycles and service other needs of trail users are springing up in the small towns along the trail.

Department officials said that some local residents, who at first expressed doubts concerning the cost of the trail and the amount of use likely to be made of it, now say they are surprised how popular it is.

In addition, a survey taken of landowners along the trail showed that 91 per cent think the DNR is doing a good job of management.

Weed Control In Lakes, Rivers Require Permits

Those planning to control vegetation in lakes, streams or other public waters are reminded by the Department of Natural Resources that permits are required for most such work.

DNR also said that all such permits are issued from the department's six regional headquarters located in Bemidji, Grand Rapids, New Ulm, Rochester, Brainerd and St. Paul.

Permits are required, said officials, because the unregulated use of chemicals or cutting of vegetation is a potential threat to public health and to the aquatic environment, including fish habitat.

A fee is charged for most permits, the amount dependent on the nature and extent of the proposed work. The minimum fee, where one is required, is $1 and the maximum is $50.

Lakeshore property owners do not need a permit for cutting or pulling of aquatic vegetation in a maximum area of 2,500 square feet. The control site may not extend more than 50 feet along the owner's lake frontage or one-half the length of the frontage, whichever is less.

Property owners may also include a 15 foot wide boat channel to open water but must not increase the 50 foot width limitation on shoreline frontage.

Such work is restricted to the use of hand or power operated cutters, rakes and similar tools but may not be done with draglines, bulldozers, hydraulic jets, suction dredges or other power operated earth moving equipment.

After cutting or pulling, the vegetation must be removed from the water.

Officials said that persons who are in doubt as to whether they need a permit should contact the nearest DNR fisheries office, including regional headquarters, or the DNR Ecological Services, Fish and Wildlife Division, St. Paul.

Applications for aquatic nuisance control permits and copies of commissioner's order 1938 spelling out the regulations can be obtained at the same location.

Input Sought On Wildlife Land Areas

Department of Natural Resources will be preparing an environmental assessment on construction projects involved in the creation and development of wetlands within state wildlife management areas, it was announced recently.

The evaluation will look at the effects that projects may have on the environment. Richard Carlson, the project coordinator, is requesting public input into this general assessment to determine public concerns.

Alternatives considered at this time include no action, level ditching, pond excavation or impounding water by dams and-or dikes.

This assessment, which is required by the national environmental protection act, will be available for review when completed.

Comments should be addressed to the Section of Wildlife, Minnesota Department of Natural Resources, 658 Cedar Street, St. Paul, MN 55155.

Fast Pitch Season Is Underway

Action Realty defeated Melvies 12-5 and Coca-Cola doubled Northland Pro 6-3 Tuesday as the 1980 Thief River Falls fast pitch softball league season debuted on the fairgrounds diamond.

A doubleheader is on tap tonight (Wednesday) as Northland Pro tests Schmidts at 7:30 and Action Realty tackles Schmidts at 9. A single game Friday will complete the opening week schedule as Coca-Cola goes against Melvies at 8 p.m.

Action Realty 12
Melvies 5

Wayne Smith hit a grand slam home run to highlight a 10-run third inning that carried Action Realty to a 12-5 season-opening win over Melvies.

Rick Kofstad's three-run home run supplied Melvies with a quick first inning lead and Karl Chromy's lead-off home run rebuilt Melvies' three-run lead after Action Realty struck for a single run in the bottom of the first.

But Smith's homer, on a 3-2 pitch, decided the issue in the third. Smith also drove in a run with a single and later drew a bases-loaded walk to finish the game with six RBIs.

Del Beito homered for the final Melvies' run.

Coca-Cola 6
Northland Pro 3

Coca-Cola snapped a 3-3 tie with three runs in the top of the sixth inning that produced a 6-3 victory over Northland Pro in Tuesday's doubleheader nightcap.

A walk, base hits by Gary Almquist and Mike Drury, two wild pitches and an error on Paul Walker's ground ball, accounted for the winner's sixth inning runs.

The two teams had traded second inning runs, and in the third Gordie Peterson drilled a two-out, two-run home run over the center field fence for a 3-1 Coca-Cola lead.

Northland Pro tied it in the bottom of the third on singles by Joel Carlson and Bob Lundbohm, a sacrifice bunt by Tim Engelstad and a throwing error on a ground ball hit by Mitch Dicken.

"We had some excellent efforts and times," pointed out Bill McGann, coach of the Thief River Falls boys team.

"It was really a good meet," explained Tom Schafer, coach of the Thief River Falls "It was really a tough meet. Those times were something else."

Lake Agassiz Meet Is Slated Sunday

Annual Lake Agassiz men's slow pitch softball tournament will be played Sunday in Thief River Falls beginning at 9 a.m.

Twenty-four of the 32 spots in the ASA-sanctioned tournament were filled as of this morning (Wednesday), according to tournament director Dennis Bendickson, who expects to add several teams yet tonight.

TRF Merchants will be on hand to defend their 1979 Lake Agassiz title. They took last year's 16-team, double-elimination event with a 13-0 championship game victory over Hobo Haus of Newfolden.

Also scheduled to be here Sunday is Gerrell's of Grand Forks, a 20-10 championship game winner over the TRF Merchants in a 24-team tournament last year that served as a second half of Thief River Falls' annual two-tournament offering.

Sunday's championship game on the slow pitch softball complex located on highway 1 east of Thief River Falls is scheduled to start at approximately 5:30 p.m.

Teams interested in filling out the tournament spots should call Bendickson at 681-6922 or 681-2181. Entry fee is $40.

Herbicide will be used to reduce competing vegetation in plantations of pine and other coniferous (needle bearing) trees and to prepare future planting sites.

The project will begin around July 14.

Counties in which spraying will take place are Aitkin, Becker, Beltrami, Cass, Clearwater, Cook, Crow Wing, Hubbard, Itasca, Kababec, Koochiching, Lake of the Woods, Mahnomen, Marshall, Pine, Roseau and St. Louis.

A CLOUD OF dust engulfed Moorhead's Dan Hertel on a stolen base attempt during Friday's North Half Region 8AA high school baseball tournament semifinal game against Thief River Falls at Detroit Lakes. The throw from catcher Jim Nyland came up short and bounced in front of Thief River Falls second baseman Jeff Mongoven in the sixth inning of the contest. Tom Drury, the Prowlers' regular second basemen who was playing shortstop because of the absence of Kelly Gutterud (who was attending his sister's wedding that day), backed up the play. The umpire tried to figure out where Hertel was as his head-first slide produced only a pair of visable legs during the hot, dry ball game. The Spuds scored four times in the top of the seventh inning to break a 1-1 tie in their 4-1 victory over the Prowlers. Thief River Falls finished the 1980 season with a 10-8 record.

A NUMBER OF FISHERMEN gathered on the Red Lake River near the Eighth street bridge Saturday evening during the Memorial Day weekend, as the weather remained warm, sunny and dry throughout the holiday.

FWS Agents Hit Taxidermists In 3 States

Special agents of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service (FWS) recently served four arrests warrants and 34 search warrants on 30 persons suspected of large scale involvement with the illegal commercialization of migratory birds in Indiana, Illinois and Wisconsin, the FWS reports.

Agents seized over 700 migratory birds, five polar bear hides, four guns, records and equipment used in the activities, according to FWS.

Migratory bird treaty act prohibits certain activities relating to the killing and possession of non-game birds and the sale or offer for sale of mounted specimens. The sale of properly marked waterfowl lawfully acquired from legally permitted waterfowl propagators, and mounted, is allowed under this rule, FWS officials explained.

Agents conducted over 100 undercover investigations in the tri-state area during the past year, a FWS source said. They purchased as evidence, 133 various hawks, owls and other non-game birds that were illegally offered for sale during the course of the covert operations, a federal agent said.

Those arrested were Edward Leep, Stanley Gawlinski and Mitchell Pakosz of Schererville, Ind.

Leep, a state permit holder and federally licensed taxidermist, owns and operates AAA Taxidermy from a large garage behind his home. During the course of the investigation, Leep is alleged to have illegally sold 29 owls, ducks and song birds to agents and offered to sell them more than 20 other birds.

Five polar bear hides that were allegedly imported unlawfully into the United States across the Canadian border, in violation of the marine mammal protection act, also were seized. The marine mammal protection act bans the import of polar bears into the United States. Special agents purchased one of the polar bear hides shortly before the search and arrest warrants were executed.

Agents seized 185 mounted and frozen birds and the polar bear skins from Leep. He was released on bond and his employees were released on their own cognizance.

A Lebanon, Ind., taxidermist, Donald Pratt, surrendered himself to U.S. marshalls in Indianapolis as a result of a warrant being issued for his arrest for the felony sale of migratory birds. Pratt offered for sale or sold 27 migratory birds to special agents. Special agents seized 19 birds from the shop under the authority of a search warrant.

Eight search warrants were served to seven other taxidermists in Indiana, and 129 birds were seized.

Many of 17 search warrants executed in the metropolitan Chicago area and in central Illinois were served simulatneously because, unlike the other states involved in this probe, some of the Illinois taxidermists allegedly supplied, bought and sold birds to each other. About 340 birds were seized under warrant in Illinois. Of those 340 birds, 139 were seized from a licensed McHenry, Ill., taxidermy shop and from the owner's unlicensed basement workroom at his residence near the Fox river. Agents are also investigating improprieties involving interstate shipment of deer. The basement contained mounted birds and two large freezers; one filled with several hundred assorted bird and animal carcasses, some of which were seized.

After serving six search warrants in Wisconsin, agents seized 118 migratory birds, including many hawks and owls. The cases were presented to a federal Grand Jury in Milwaukee.

During the execution of the search and arrest warrants, 29 federal agents were assisted by state conservation officers from the Illinois Department of Conservation, the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources and the Indiana Department of Natural Resources.

NORDEN . . .

Alex Yeschick was also an uncle of Duane Olson of Norden, Mrs. Leland Nelson of Sanders and Mrs. Nickie Drees of St. Hilaire. Let it also be clarified that immediately after the burial at Landstad, those attending were luncheon guests at the Leland Nelson home, a group of which also visited at the Burt Lane home later in the day.

New National Fish, Wildlife Protection Policy Is Planned

First step toward development of a national policy to assure effective protection of U.S. fish and wildlife has been announced by the Department of the Interior, which published a draft section to clarify federal-state responsibilities for these resources in the May 2, 1980 Federal Register.

Federal-state jurisdiction section is an effort to clarify management responsibilities for fish and wildlife resources on public lands. It recognizes the critical role played at state agencies in the conservation of resident fish and wildlife. The draft section is a first step toward forming a policy that will eventually encompass a number of fish and wildlife issues. Strategies for additional specific areas of wildlife management will be addressed in later proposals.

A national fish and wildlife policy would provide one document to guide management of resources. However, such a policy would be complemented by more explicit policies developed by federal agencies for their own management activities. For example, the U.S. Department of Agriculture has already undertaken the task of drafting a policy for its activities affecting fish and wildlife. It is anticipated that as the national policy matures, more agencies will develop internal policies reflecting the guidance of a strong national policy.

Department of the Interior plans to develop the policy by addressing one major issue at a time, producing a draft section for consultation and public review on each issue. Eventually, a series of sections will be completed which will comprise the body of the policy.

"Reaching the goal of a nationa, not federal, policy to which all interested parties can contribute depends on the cooperation of federal and state officials, as well as conservation advocates," assistant secretary of the Interior Robert Herbst emphasized. "A spirit of mutual cooperation and shared expertise is essential to develop realistic fish and wildlife management programs."

National fish and wildlife policy will address a wide range of topics including ecological, economic, esthetic and other values that affect fish and wildlife. Considerations which may be addressed include human attitudes toward wildlife which have an impact on its management; subsistence uses and native claims; and management strategies for maintaining natural ecosystems and their biological diversity.

Other important considerations are low enforcement to protect fish and wildlife; protection of endangered species; positive and negative aspects of non-native (exotic) species introductions; animal damage management; and international programs relating to species that migrate or move across national borders.

Department officials are seeking comments by interested parties on the proposed content of a national fish and wildlife policy (including topics listed above) and the order in which they should be addressed. In addition, the public is invited to comment on the draft section on Federal-State Jurisdiction by June 30, 1980. Comments should be addressed to Director, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Division of Program Plans, Washington, D.C. 20240.

Stuffed 'Pets' Don't Cry

The American Veterinary Medical Association urges you not to give your children rabbits, chicks or ducks for Easter. Excitement and enthusiasm over the gift often result in broken legs and crushed wings.

The injury or death of the animal is a traumatic experience for the child. Animals that survive generally end up in an animal shelter. It is impossible to place them all. Many have to be destroyed.

The veterinarians remind parents that these are outdoor animals. They cannot be housebroken and may cause serious housekeeping and health problems. Public health authorities warn that children and adults in close contact with these animals may be exposed to salmonellosis, a severe gastro-intestinal infection.

Salmonellosis is rarely fatal, but often requires medical treatment including hospitalization. Other pets as well as family members may become ill.

Because of the problems surrounding these animals, many communities have passed laws prohibiting the sale of rabbits, ducklings and chicks as pets.

Easter and the coming of spring should be a time of joy and rebirth, not a period of physical illness, psychological trauma and the needless deaths of young animals. The American Veterinary Medical Association urges parents to leave rabbits, chicks and ducks on the farm and give their children stuffed toys and chocolate bunnies instead.

Paying The Price

Farmers are in trouble. They know it, I know it, but apparently the Carter Administration has yet to discover this well known fact.

Inflation and the Administration's mismanagement of the economy is taking its toll on us all. In the first three months of 1980 the cost of energy, housing, food and medical care went up 23.7 per cent. We are looking at an 18 per cent inflation rate for this year and we have just seen 20 per cent interest rates.

Farmers are especially hard pressed to withstand these lethal economic blows. While other people in business can pass on the higher cost of doing business by raising prices, farmers are forced to absorb the effects of inflation. They have no ability to raise their prices as their costs go up.

To add insult to economic injury, farmers are now paying the price of United States foreign policy decisions. Last January, when President Carter imposed an embargo on the sale of grain to the Soviet Union he promised that farmers would not bear the full burden. Today, that promise has been forgotten.

President Carter is threatening to veto a Senate Agriculture Committee omnibus bill that was designed specifically to relieve this pressure on the nation's farmers. Without this legislation Minnesota farmers have little hope for a bright future. The Agriculture Committee's bill would authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to provide a set-aside program for 1980 and 1981. It would expand the Food for Peace program and alcohol fuel production, using a portion of the embargoed reserves. Also, it would require the Commodity Credit Corporation to purchase not less than 4 million tons of wheat and up to 10 million tons of corn to help boost farm prices.

There has been some breakthrough. In the last few weeks some of the excess commodities that are in storage, previously destined for the Soviet Union, are being purchased by the government. However, Minnesota has not fared well in the deal. Most of the embargoed wheat was "winter wheat" and Minnesota is primarily a "spring" wheat state. Notwithstanding, Minnesota still feels the impact at the pricing level where all wheats are interchanged. Initial government purchases went to the "winter" wheat states, such as Oklahoma while none was purchased from Minnesota.

Priorities should have gone to states with the largest surpluses, regardless of type. Joining with agricultural organizations and individual farmers, I appealed this decision to the Department of Agriculture. The government's latest purchase gave Minnesota farmers a better deal and was a more equitable solution for all.

The recent fiasco with the food stamp program is another example of the Administration's low priority for farmers. When money ran out for the food stamp program the new appropriation kept the program just barely alive. By August, farmers will be victimized by the Aministration's manipulation once again. With the recession deepening and unemployment growing, the food stamp program will be ont of funds. Secretary of Agriculture Bergland, who administers the food stamp program, will be back to Congress threatening to take money out of programs for farmers unless we approve more money for food stamps. That's the Administration's policy of pitting one group against another instead of finding a wise and fair solution.

There is some help on the way for farmers. Recent Senate action extended the Emergency Agricultural Credit Adjustment Act through September 30, 1981. It also increased the lending authority to the farm economic emergency loan program by $2 billion. But the farmers need more help. More and better financing programs are needed to help farmers obtain cash to plant and cultivate their 1980 crops without having to sell their 1979 production at depressed prices.

Offering more loan programs is not the only answer because too many farmers are already too far in debt for their own good. We need meaningful action by the Administration and Congress to balance the federal budget and to spend taxpayers money wisely. We must achieve a sound economic base to maintain Minnesota's rural vitality.

Census Bureau Shows Nursing Home Results

Ninety per cent of all residents in American nursing homes are satisfied with their care and surroundings, according to the U.S. census bureau's most recent survey of institutionalized persons.

Over 90 per cent of residents' next of kin also expressed satisfaction with the care and surroundings nursing homes provide their relatives.

Residents' survey was based on a statistically valid sample of 4,622 individuals over age 14 who were able to respond to the questions. Census Bureau and nursing home staff took all measures necessary to protect residents' legal rights to privacy and the confidentiality of their responses.

Residents were asked their opinions about eight categories: Buildings and grounds; Lodging, Accommodations, Meals, food service; Treatment; Staff members; Social activities; Relationships with (other nursing home) residents; and Relationships with (their own) family.

Responses ranged from a high of 91.8 per cent who said they liked the nursing home's staff members, to a low of 73.6 per cent who said they liked the nursing home's activities.

Negative ratings ranged from a high of 13.7 per cent (versus 82.8 per cent positive) who said they disliked the food, to a low of 3.0 per cent (versus the 91.8 per cent approval mentioned above) who disliked the staff members.

"Don't knows" ranged from 15.1 per cent on social activities (versus 73.6 per cent positive and 9.6 per cent negative) to 2.2 per cent on meals (versus 82.8 per cent positive and 13.7 per cent negative).

Next-of-kins' responses followed similar patterns to those of the residents when asked about similar categories. On the separate question of next-of-kin evaluation of the level of care provided by nursing homes to their relatives, the approval rating was 91.5 per cent versus a negative rating of 8.3 per cent derived from four categories of negative response.

American Health Care association, the nation's largest federation of nursing homes, representing half the licensed nursing homes in the country, believes that this independent, highly credible survey clearly demonstrates how consumers recognize what providers are doing to assure that America's nursing homes offer the best possible care available to the nation's elderly, convalescent, and chronically ill.

Title of the Census Bureau study is "1976 Survey of Institutionalized Persons." Residents' evaluations are listed on Page 228 and next-of-kin evaluations on pages 344-346 of the report.

This report was first issued in the summer of 1978 and its findings were publicized by the American Health Care association in a Washington news release dated Aug. 11, 1978. This undated release has been reissued for your background information and as a service to greater public understanding of the positive role nursing homes play in striving to provide the best quality care to their consumers.

Environment Is Important For Aquarium Fish

Glass tanks, dechlorinated water at 75 degrees, placed in a location away from extreme temperatures provides the best environment for fish in home aquariums, reported Dr. Louis Leibovitz of Cornell university, in the May 1 issue of the "Journal of the American Veterinary Medical Association" (JAVMA).

The best tanks are made of glass with a wide surface area at the top. The wider the top, the greater the rate of exchange of oxygen and gaseous wastes between the air and water, he said.

To clean tanks, best results can be achieved by using plain water or plain salt water with a 5 per cent commercial chlorine bleach solution as the disinfectant.

"Most public water supplies are tested for toxic substances and have been widely used in aquariums," he stated.

Tap water should be dechlorinated by allowing it to stand in a covered container for several weeks. This "conditioning" also allows time for the removal of sediment and disease-causing agents and wastes.

Most fish are adaptable to slight temperature variations and 75 degrees is good for a community tank with a variety of species. Liebovitz stressed, however, that abnormal temperature shifts will alter a fish's defense mechanisms and favor disease.

Aquariums should be placed in an area that is easily serviced, has adequate electrical outlets, and is away from drafts and extremes of heat and cold. Leibovitz also recommended flourescent lights at the top of the aquarium. "Illumination from the sides of bottom of the tank is unnatural and provides an additional stress as well as increasing the temperature of the aquarium," Leibovitz said.

Gravel and sand in the tank act as biological and physical filters in the operational aquarium.

Dear Cancer Answers:

What exactly is a thermogram? Can it be used as a substitute for a mammogram to diagnose breast cancer?

Mrs. D.W.

Dear Mrs. D.W.:

A thermogram is a diagnostic test that uses infrared light to show temperature patterns within the breast. Because malignant tumors tend to produce more heat than normal tissue or nonmalignant cysts, they appear darker on thermographic photographs.

Unfortunately, thermography has not proved to be as reliable in diagnosing breast cancer as mammography. Mammograms are accurage at a rate of about 85 per cent compared to about 40 per cent for thermograms. Therefore thermography is not recommended as a replacement for mammography.

Dear Cancer Answers:

Why are some cancers curable and others aren't? My dad just died of lung cancer only 6 months after it was discovered. But my brother who had Hodgkin's Disease 10 years ago is just fine. I don't understand this. Isn't cancer just one disease?

W.R.

Dear W.R.:

No, cancer is not one disease, but many diseases. There are over 100 kinds of cancer, and each kind and site has its own distinguishing characteristics. Depending upon the location of the cancer in the body, the cause, symptoms, growth, kind of treatment, response to treatment, and possibility of cure are different. Cancer may behave very differently in different people. Generally, cancers are divided into five main classifications, with many subdivisions in each group. The five classifications are:

Carcinomas: These are the most common cancers. The tumors start in tissues which cover a surface or line internal organs and passageways of the body. Skin, intestinal, uterine, and lung cancers are all carcinomas.

Sarcomas: These tumors begin in the connective tissue and muscle, cartilage, and lumph system.

Myelomas: These tumors start in the plasma cells which are in the bone marrow. The plasma cells produce some of the protein that circulates in the blood.

Lymphomas: These tumors form in the cells of the lymph system. Lymph is a waterlike fluid that drains from all the tissues of the body through clusters of small glands called nodes. The lumph system normally acts as a filter for impurities in the body. Lumph nodes are found in many places in the body, such as the neck, the groin, the armpits, and the spleen. These glands swell up when bacteria or tumor cells drain into them or when the cells of which they are composed become cancerous. Hodgkin's Disease, for example, is a lumphoma.

Leukemia: This is a cancer of the blood-forming tissues (bone marrow, lymph nodes, and spleen). It is characterized by the overproduction of certain kinds of white blood cells.

For various reasons, Hodgkin's usually responds more readily to treatment than does cancer of the lung. Therefore, the potential for curing your brother's cancer was greater than for your father's disease.

If you would like more specific information about these two types of cancer, please call the toll-free Cancer Information Service in your state. In Minnesota, call 1-800-582-5262. If you are calling from North or South Dakota, the number is 1-800-328-5188.

Dear Cancer Answers:

I had surgery for cancer of the ovary recently and am undergoing chemotherapy. I will be moving to Canada as soon as my course of therapy is finished but am wondering how to find a doctor in Canada for the frequent cancer checkups I'll be needing. Could you help me?

Wilma

Dear Wilma:

You should ask your current doctor to refer you to a cancer specialist near your new home. If he or she is unable to do so, you can contact the National Cancer Institute of Canada, 77 Bloor Street West, Suite 401, Toronto, Ontario, Canada M5S2 V7. The telephone number is 416-961-7223.

The Institute will be able to furnish you with a list of cancer specialists. As is true in this country, Canadian cancer treatment centers participate in cooperative studies of new as well as proven methods of treatment. The Institute can advise you of where these centers are located.

Dear Cancer Answers:

I heard that mold on food can cause cancer. Is this true?

Jan

Dear Jan:

To the best of our information, molds — with one exception — have not been found to cause cancer. In fact, molds are necessary in the production of some common foods. Cheese, yogurt and wine are produced with the controlled use of molds, and there is no known relationship between these foods and cancer.

The one exception mentioned earlier of a mold that is known to be related to cancer is aflatoxin. This particular mold is a fungus that grows on starchy foods such as peanuts and corn. Aflatoxin is not common in the United States and has never been linked with human cancer in this country.

Dear Cancer Answers:

The last couple of times I went to the dentist he examined my tongue and the inside of my mouth for cancer. He said it was a routine exam for mouth cancer. He also said that because I'm a pipe smoker it's especially important for me to have these exams regularly. Is it possible for me to do this exam myself? What should I do and what should I look for?

C.L.

Dear C.L.:

Yes, you can examine your mouth for signs of cancer. A complete examination includes several steps, but is easy to do. All you need is a mirror and good lighting.

1. Face — If you wear glasses, remove them. Inspect your face, neck and lips. Look for any changes in the color of your skin, any lumps or sores.

2. Outer cheeks — Press lightly against the outside of your cheeks feeling for any lumps or areas of tenderness.

3. Neck — Move your fingers lightly over both sides of your neck feeling for any lumps or areas of tenderness.

4. Roof of the mouth — Tilt your head back and open your mouth wide, checking the roof of your mouth for any lumps, sores or areas of discoloration.

5. Tongue — Checking for these same signs, extend your tongue and look at the top surface. Next, place the tip of your tongue on the roof of your mouth and look at the underside. Finally, using a piece of gauze, hold your tongue with your fingers and gently move it so that you can look at both sides.

6. Inner cheeks — Use your fingers to open the sides of your mouth so that you can examine the inside of each cheek. Look for any lumps, sores or patches that appear white, red or darker than the rest of the skin.

7. Lips — Pull your lower lip down and look for any of the above-mentioned signs. Use your fingers to feel for any lumps. Repeat with your upper lip.

Regular mouth self-examination is a good way to be sure that you find a cancer early if it should occur. If you notice any unusual signs, you should see your doctor promptly. You should, of course, continue to have regular checkups by your dentist or dental hygienist.

Dear Cancer Answers:

I read that there's a new blood test called "acid phosphatase" that can detect prostate cancer early. If this true? How often should men have this test?

S.J.M.

Dear S.J.M.:

The acid phosphotase test you read about is not being used routinely to check for prostate cancer. It is helpful, however, in determining whether cancer has spread to a patient's bones. An abnormal acid phosphatase test indicates bone destruction which can result from diseases other than cancer. Therefore, this test is not useful for detecting cancer.

At this time the best method for detection of prostate cancer is a rectal examination. Because the prostate is located deep within the abdomen, a doctor can feel it only by pressing internally against the wall of the rectum. The doctor can usually feel any changes in the shape of consistency of the prostate by this type of examination.

Every man over 40 should have a rectal prostate exam as part of his regular physical checkup.

Dear Cancer Answers:

Our business is farming, so my family is outdoors most of the time in the summer. I know that long-term exposure to the sun increases a person's risk for skin cancer. What can I do to protect my family?

Mrs R.L.

Staten Island Tennis Court

Tennis was introduced in the U.S. in 1874 by sportswoman Mary Ewing Outerbridge. The first U.S. tennis court was established on Staten Island, New York.

Australia's Rod Laver is the only player to win the "Grand Slam" of Tennis twice. In 1962 and 1969, he won the national championships of the U.S., Great Britain, France, and Australia.

In 1900, American player Dwight Davis donated the Davis Cup for international men's team tennis. Hazel Hotchkiss Wightman donated the Wightman Cup in 1923 for competition between U.S. and British women's teams.

Regulation tennis balls must weigh more than 2 ounces but less than 2-1/16 ounces. According to A-T-O Inc.'s Fred Perry Sportswear, there are no rules covering the weight and size of tennis rackets.

Dear Mrs. R.L.:

There are a number of simple precautions people who work outdoors can take to protect themselves. Remember that the sun's rays are strongest between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. If possible, try to spend less time outdoors during these hours. Wear comfortable protective clothing, including a broad-brimmed hat and loose, long sleeves. If you don't want to wear protective clothing, be sure to use a lotion, oil or cream that contains the sunscreen agent PABA (para-amino-benzoic acid). PABA keeps the harsh ultra-violet rays of the sun from reaching your skin. Check the label of any sunscreen product you buy to be sure it contains PABA.

Fair-skinned, blue-eyed people over 40 who spent a lot of time in the sun during their teens, 20s and 30s are at highest risk for skin cancer. These people should be aware of and watch for any of skin cancer's warning signs: a sore that doesn't heal, a change in the size or color of a wart or mole, a change in the color or texture of any area of skin.

It is also good to remember that, when found and treated promptly, common skin cancer is nearly always curable.

Dear Cancer Answers:

Does cancer ever disappear by itself without treatment?

R.W.

Dear. R.W.:

Cases in which cancer disappears without treatment are very rate, and the exact rate and number of these cases is unknown. Doctors call this phenomenon spontaneous remission. It seems to occur most often in people who have malignant melanoma, a cancer of the pigment-forming cells, usually of the skin or the retina of the eye.

Just as the causes of cancer are not fully understood, doctors don't know why some cancers simply disappear. Sometimes a spontaneous remission is associated with an infection. In other cases remissions happen after patients have had high fevers. Such cases seem to indicate that remissions which appear to be spontaneous may actually be related to an unknown vulnerability of the cancer to a specific condition in the body or to increased activity of the body's immune system.

There has been increasing interest in recent years in the role the body's immune system plays in fighting cancer. Medical researchers hope to find a way to stimulate these natural immunities in cancer patients.

Dear Cancer Answers:

Is there any new evidence linking flouridated water to cancer?

William R.

Dear William R.:

No. On the contrary, a recently completed, detailed statistical study on the relationship of cancer deaths and water flouridation failed to produce evidence linking natural or artifical flouridation of public water supplies to cancer.

The study compared the number of cancer cases diagnosed in two major metropolitan areas in the periods 1947-1948 and 1969-1971. The two areas were Birmingham, Alabama, which has remained largely unfluoridated during the periods covered by the study; and Denver, Colorado, which was flouridated soon after 1947-48.

No flouridation-associated differences in cancer risk were apparent between the two metropolitan areas.

The National Cancer Institute scientists also studied cancer death rates over a 20-year period in two groups of counties in the United States. On the basis of their findings, the scientists have concluded that there is no evidence that flouridation has increased the risk of cancer, either in counties long exposed to varying levels of natural flouride, or in counties relatively recently exposed to artificial flouridation. The NCI study therefore provides no support for the contention that consumption of flouridated water can be directly linked to an increased risk of cancer.

DES-Exposed Daughters — The Problem

Have YOU been exposed to DES — while pregnant — or before you were born? Have your children or grandchildren, other relatives or friends?

If so, you should be aware of possible effects of DES exposure on mothers who were given it during pregnancy and on their daughters and sons.

Diethylstilbestrol, or DES, as it is commonly called, is a synthetic estrogen hormone used in a variety of ways — in the "morning-after" birth control pill, to dry up milk in the breasts in new mothers, for certain menopausal symptoms and several types of advanced cancer.

During the 1940s and 1950s DES-type drugs also were widely used for pregnant women threatened with miscarriage or abortion. In the 1960s a small number of young girls developed a very rare type of cancer of the vagina or cervix. (The cervix is the narrow lower portion of the uterus and opens into the vagina.) This cancer, "clear-cell adenocarcinoma," can be cured, especially if detected at an early stage.

In 1971 physicians at Massachusetts General Hospital discovered a link between the extremely rare occurrence of this cancer in young girls and the administration of DES or DES-type drugs to their mothers during pregnancy. The Food and Drug Administration then warned physicians that these drugs should not be given during pregnancy. However, it has been reported that DES-type drugs continued to be prescribed for this purpose in some cases.

It is estimated that perhaps two million daughters have been born whose mothers were treated while pregnant with DES or similar drugs. The risk to the daughters of developing clear-cell adenocarcinoma of the vagina or cervix appears to be very small, but a medical checkup is important. Treatment of DES-related cancers has been highly effective, especially when the cancers have been detected at a time when they are still small.

Other changes frequently have been found, including noncancerous glandular tissue placed abnormally on the cervix or vagina. Depending on its location, this condition may be called vaginal adenosis, cervical erosion or ectropion. There is no evidence that confirms that this condition has progressed to cancer.

Thanks Dad, nks Mom

As a freshman I was too scared of flunking to think about what my parents had done to make college possible. As a sophomore trying to decide my major, I was too busy for gratitude. As a junior cramming for mid-years — there wasn't time for sentimental thoughts . . .

But with my senior year coming to its thrilling climax — there's nothing I want to say more than THANKS DAD, THANKS MOM.

Then during our baccalaureate service an awesome thought gripped me. Not only have my parents given me my education . . . they have given me my faith as well.

My quest for a college degree began in nursery school and kindergarten. It was just about that time when these same wonderful parents brought me to what would soon become OUR CHURCH.

My quest for a strong, sure faith began where it does so often — in the BEGINNER'S Department.

High Blood Pressure —The Silent Killer

Many people develop high blood pressure without realizing it. Often called the "silent killer," high blood pressure can creep up and cause damage to vital organs with no apparent warning to the victim.

"High blood pressure is the number one risk factor in heart attacks and strokes in adults," says Marueen Smith, R.M., staff member of a Twin Cities hospital.

Yet the majority of people who are admitted to that hospital's coronary and intensive care units with these problems don't even know what their blood pressures are, Smith said.

Regular check-ups with the doctor are one way to keep track of blood pressure changes. Then if high blood pressure is detected, treatment can be initiated immediately to stop the progression of the disease, she advised.

Blood pressure is the pressure exerted against the walls of the arteries by the blood running through. In a blood pressure reading, the top number is the measurement of the pressure exerted when the heart sends through a surge of blood. This is the systolic blood pressure. The bottom number is the measurement of the blood pressure when the heart is at rest between beats. This lesser pressure is called diastolic. For example, a typical blood pressure reading would be written — 120-80.

High blood pressure, also called hypertension, causes stress in the walls of the arteries. "Over time, that constant stress causes changes in the arteries that eventually produce problems in the brain, the heart, or the kidneys," Smith said.

Hypertension causes the heart to work harder to pump the blood through the arteries. "In time, the heart enlarges because of that chronic overwork," Smith said. "That can result in heart failure or other forms of heart disease."

A blood pressure reading of 120 over 80 is usually considered a normal blood pressure. But ranges of 100 to 140 for the top number, and 60 to 85 for the bottom number are considered within normal limits.

"If either number is elevated, regardless of age, it should be treated," Smith said.

Of course, most people's blood pressures are elevated during periods of stress or excitement. But, if the blood pressure is consistently above the normal level, it should be treated and checked every three months, according to Smith.

Long-standing hypertension that has affected vital organs causes symptoms such as chest pain (an indication of heart problems); headache, dizziness, and changes in vision (indications of brain damage); and less urine output (a symptom of kidney problems).

"For any of these symptoms, the person should definitely see a physician, right now!" Smith said. As a nurse educator in the hospital's intensive and coronary care units, Smith most often sees people after the damage has been done.

"Hypertension is rampant," she explained. "About 25 per cent of the adult population has high blood pressure. But even though it's a huge problem, people shouldn't be fatalistic. It can be easily controlled."

More than 95 per cent of the people with high blood pressure have hypertension of unknown cause, or "essential hypertension." Remainder have hypertension caused by some physical abnormality, which usually can be corrected with surgery.

Essential hypertension can be controlled through one or a combination of methods. But, control of hypertension always requires the cooperation of the patient.

Many people are able to bring their high blood pressure under control by losing weight. Mild exercise also is beneficial. Restricting salt intake is very important, because salt causes the body to retain fluids, which keeps the blood pressure high. Many people control their high blood pressure with medications.

Smoking is a dangerous habit for anyone, but particularly for people with high blood pressure. Chemicals in tobacco can cause the arteries to tighten, thus raising the blood pressure.

Some people with high blood pressure have been helped with biofeedback and relaxation therapy. "Anything that people can learn about stress management techniques is very valuable," Smith said.

Although there is controversy concerning whether stress is an important cause of high blood pressure, being in a constant state of stress will cause "wear and tear" on the blood vessels, according to Smith.

"It's worthless—to tell someone to relax," Smith said. "You've got to learn how to manage the situation you're in."

Hypertension, in most cases, is a life-long disease. Treatment programs control high blood pressure, they don't cure it.

"Because most people with hypertension don't feel bad, they don't see the need to take their medications," Smith said. "And sometimes people feel more tired or worse, so they quit taking their medications. This can have disastrous consequences."

High blood pressure won't go away by pretending it's not there. It's a progressive illness and it shortens lives if left untreated.

IF IT RAINS ON YOUR PICNIC

Picnic or not, it's easy to make real fried chicken right in the kitchen range oven. Convenient coating for chicken, crispy crumb recipe takes only 50 minutes as chicken fries in the oven with just a small amount of oil. Cleanup is at a minimum. Chilled potato salad, assorted relishes and a pitcher of iced tea complete the indoor/outdoor picnic scene.

PICNIC CHICKEN

1 packet Oven Fry coating for chicken, crispy crumb recipe
1/4 cup oil or melted shortening
1 egg
1 tablespoon water
2-1/2 pounds chicken pieces

Preheat oven to 400°. Empty packet of coating onto a sheet of waxed paper or into a shallow bowl. Spread oil in a 15x10x1-inch jelly roll pan. (A flat-bottom pan with sides not more than 1 inch deep gives best results.) In a large bowl, beat egg with a fork; add water and blend. Add all the chicken and toss gently to moisten each piece on all sides. Starting with large pieces, place chicken in coating, one piece at a time. Pile coating on chicken, then press firmly on all sides until the piece is thickly and evenly covered. Place chicken in pan, skin side down. Fry in oven 25 minutes, then turn and fry 25 minutes longer, until chicken is tender. Remove from pan immediately. Makes 4 servings.

No New Building On State Highways

Citing the combined effects of funding cutbacks and inflation, the Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT) will start no new construction projects on the state trunk highway system, announced commissioner Richard P. Braun.

Braun said the decision to eliminate 60 planned projects totalling approximately $130 million is based on the 21 per cent rate of inflation in road construction costs, greatly reduced funding from the 1979-80 sessions of the Minnesota Legislature and federal aid cuts imposed as an anti-inflation measure by the federal government.

Mn-DOT's funding situation became critical this year because only $28 million additional funds result from the two-cent gas tax instead of the needed $78 million gas tax revenues dropped because of decreased fuel consumption and the effects of inflation, Braun said. Although a two-cent per gallon increase in the gas tax was approved, the anticipated revenue is not adequate to offset Mn-DOT's overall income reduction.

This cutback is in addition to the August 6, 1979 drop of 61 construction projects totalling $122.5 million. Construction programs which remain inact are those involving the resurfacing program and the safety improvement program.

Braun said because of the funding cutbacks, Mn-DOT's primary emphasis will shift from new construction to preservation activities to save the state's existing highway system, now valued at $16 billion.

"What this means to Mn-DOT", Braun said, "is a major shift in emphasis from new construction to resurfacing, reconditioning and reconstruction of our existing roadway system."

Braun said the action places a moratorium on planning on all new four-lane segments, community bypasses and requests for new nine-ton and 10-ton routes. All construction projects under contract will proceed as committed but all proposed, unfunded projects will be reviewed for their level of future commitment.

Other areas of emphasis will be identification and construction of spot safety improvements, ridesharing and preserving the existing trunk highway system.

"Two years of inflation of 21 per cent each and no significant new revenue have created a real crisis," Braun said. "Promises made in better years cannot necessarily be met. There is no assurance that new funding will be available to expand the system. Without a shift in priorities to preservation of the existing system as well as as increasing commitment to preservation in future years, we may not even be able to maintain our current investment in a transportation system to move people and goods."

In addition to the loss of the proposed construction projects, the decision is expected to have considerable impact on the state's economy, including the loss of construction-related jobs.

Richard Keinz, Mn-DOT director of Program planning, said eliminating the projects will cost industry about 1,500 on-site construction jobs, 1,500 off-site jobs such as aggregate production and culvert fabrication and other jobs attributed to the "ripple effect" of losing the income of 3,000 construction workers.

Because of the cutbacks, it is anticipated that the equivalent of 200 construction-related employee positions will be eliminated. Braun said the department will attempt to reduce layoffs by reassigning some work done by seasonal and part-time workers and Mn-DOT will also examine having some work done by consultants assigned to Mn-DOT employees.

A hiring freeze was initiated by Mn-DOT April 24 to facilitate shifting some employees from construction to maintenance or other areas.

Luscious Cherries—They're Not Just for Dessert Anymore!

A long-time favorite for festive desserts, bright, delicious cherries can now perk up an otherwise ho-hum breakfast or ordinary brunch menu. What a lovely sight to behold—rich, red cherries crowning hot, cinnamony waffles topped with whipped cream. So tempting…and so delicious.

Next time you want to create something really special for early or mid-morning appetites, serve scrumptious, picture-perfect cherries and sweetly-spiced waffles. Add your family or friends (or both!) and you have the makings of a truly gala event.

CINNAMON WAFFLES WITH CHERRIES

- 1-3/4 cups sifted all purpose flour
- 3 teaspoons baking powder
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1-3/4 cups milk
- 2 egg yolks
- 1/4 cup butter, melted
- 2 egg whites
- Whipped cream or whipped topping
- 1-pound, 5-ounce can cherry pie or cherry fruit filling

Sift together dry ingredients. Beat together milk, egg yolks and butter; stir into dry ingredients. Beat egg whites to soft peaks; fold into batter. Bake. Makes 8, 4-1/2-inch square waffles. In a double boiler, heat cherry filling and serve over waffles topped with whipped cream.

Father's Day Facts & Fancies

Father's Day was originated by Mrs. John Dodd in Spokane, Washington, in 1910. She wanted to express her gratitude to her own father, a Civil War veteran who had single-handedly raised six children.

Father's Day today provides a chance for sons and daughters to express their gratitude to Dad with such gifts as the Remington Triple Head rechargeable electric shaver. Advanced technology was used to create this electronic solid-state built-in charger and it's the least expensive rechargeable shaver on the market. That'll show Dad he did teach you the value of a dollar after all.

Father's Day, though not an official holiday, was celebrated individually in ancient China where great age implied great prestige. A popular gift was a longevity robe: costly silk embroidered with the characters for "long-life" by a young person likely to live long.

The following item was taken from the Minneapolis Star May 16, 1980:

The Rev. David H. Rokke has been elected executive director of the board of trustees of the American Lutheran church, the top business position in the 2.4 million member denomination.

Rokke, 49, selected from 33 candidates, is the board's assistant executive director. He will succeed Dr. George S. Schultz, who will retire March 31, 1981.

A graduate of Augsburg college and the former Augsburg seminary, Rokke was ordained by the former Lutheran Free church, now merged into the ALC. He once served as associate pastor of St. Luke's Lutheran church, 3751, S. 17th Av., Minneapolis.

David, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ingvold Rokke, is a home town boy having made his home here while in grade school.

In 1903, President Theodore Roosevelt appointed his private secretary, George B. Cortelyou, the first Secretary of Commerce and Labor, according to a publication of the U.S. Department of Labor.

Donors Are Vital

Want to be the most important person in the world? Then make a donation of blood when United Blood Services conducts a blood drawing campaign in Thief River Falls. To the person who receives your life-giving gift, you will be the most important person in the world!

Blood donations are being taken today and Thursday at the CNC chapel at Northwestern hospital services. Most of the donors have scheduled appointments but other willing donors can be accommodated. And if you can's make it today or tomorrow, contact the blood bank laboratory at the hospital and put your name down to be contacted the next time blood is being drawn here.

Because of discoveries and advancements made in blood use, your vital gift may even help several people. Blood can be separated to provide platelets (given to Leukemia and cancer patients;, cryoprecipitate (containing the clotting factor needed to help keep hemophiliacs alive and in good health), plasma (when kept in frozen state can be later given to those on dialysis and those awaiting organ transplants) and red blood cells (given to those with low hemoglobin or iron content in their blood).

There is no substitute for blood, and there is no way for people who need it to get it unless you give it. People are counting on you.

Graduation Time

Commencement exercises for high schools and colleges around the country mean different things to different people, but the festivity combined with seriousness of the events seem to be shared universally.

We would like to add our congratulations to the many being extended to graduates of the two post-secondary schools in Thief River Falls — the AVTI and Northland community college — and to graduates of Lincoln and the other high schools in our circulation area. Not to be forgotten are the many young people from these communities who are completing their formal education at colleges and universities nationwide.

Because of the nature of our newspaper work, we probably feel closest to the graduates of Lincoln and a relatively few outstanding individuals with whom we have become acquainted at area schools. There are some exceptional individuals in this collective class of 1980 who should go on to become leaders and valuable citizens in their chosen communities in the future.

It has been a privilege to watch the growth and development of these youngsters as we have seen them in sports events, music concerts, 4-H club work, church activities, Boy scouts or Girl scouts or other groups. We can only hope that they will continue to grow and develop to the fullest of their potential, for potential unrealized is a tragic waste.

And our best wishes go with five members of the Class of 1980 who will not be present for commencement exercises Thursday night. They will be in Bloomington, making a bid for the Minnesota Class AA high school tennis championship. To Tom Bjorkman, Mark Collins, Bill Holmes, Bill Jury and Mitch Rustad — and to their junior teammates Paul Koppang and Mark Lundin — congratulations on a great season and good luck in the state tourney.

Flag Etiquette

Memorial Day should have been a reminder to all of us that patriotism is never old-fashioned and that our nation's flag is a symbol which we should all understand better. Many Americans are unaware — and perhaps too many do not care — of the proper attention, care and respect which are due to the flag of our country.

Here are some questions about flag etiquette according to Public Law 829. See if you know the proper answers to each before consulting the list of answers below:

If you were asked to handle decorations for a patriotic event or holiday, would you know how to properly display the United States flag?

To test your knowledge of flag etiquette according to Public Law 829, try answering the following true-false questions. They are based on information in Scott, Foresman and Company's new Civics for Americans, a practical citizenship textbook.

1. The flag must be displayed only in good weather and only from sunrise to sunset.
2. The union, or blue field, must always be at the top. If the flag is hung on a wall, the union must be on the observer's left.
3. If several flags are displayed together, the United States flag must be on the same level as state and local flags, always on the observer's right.
4. When flown from the same halyard with other flags, the United States flag is hoisted first and lowered last.
5. Displayed with a flag of another nation, the visiting nation's flag is placed higher as a sign of courtesy.
6. If flown at half-staff, the flag should be hoisted to the peak momentarily, then lowered to mid-point.
7. A flag should be lowered into the grave after taps are played.
8. To honor a visiting dignitary, the flag should be dipped in passing or displayed with the union down.
9. If worn on uniforms, a flag patch should be placed on the right arm.

ANSWERS:

1. False. For a special patriotic effect, the flag may be displayed around-the-clock if properly lighted. When weather is bad, an all-weather flag should be used.
2. True.
3. False. The United States flag must be in the center and at the highest point.
4. True.
5. False. They are flown from separate staff of the same height.
6. True.
7. False. The flag should never be lowered into a grave or allowed to touch the ground.
8. False. It should never be dipped to honor anyone or anything. The union down signals dire distress.
9. False. A flag patch should be worn on the left lapel, near the heart.

A Striking Example

Following editorial is from the Washington Report:

Strikers like to portray themselves as victims of oppressive management, whether corporate or governmental.

But there are often others who are the real victims of work stoppages called without regard to their impact on the larger economy.

The illegal strike earlier this month by New York City transit workers offers a good example.

The New York Times reported early in the strike that it appeared to have hit the community "where it is weakest" — in the struggling manufacturing sector and "the people whose pocketbooks can least afford it — the city's working poor."

Losses to the city's economy were estimated at approximately $1 billion, much of which was sustained by the garment industry that once flourished in New York City but is now struggling to remain alive there. The inability of garment workers to reach their jobs was a major factor in that loss.

The transit workers wound up with a 20 per cent wage increase over two years, which will bring the hourly wage of bus drivers and subway motormen to nearly $10 an hour.

But the settlement is far from the end of the story. New York City still must negotiate contracts with unions representing its 238,000 regular employees. The transit settlement will certainly spur labor leaders to seek similar substantial pay increases.

New York City, whose financial situation still borders on the brink of disaster, will be faced with the necessity of still more tax increases, which will drive out still more taxpaying businesses, shrinking still further the opportunity for jobs for its citizens.

The transit and other unions keep winning larger and larger wage settlements while the base of individuals expected to pay the increasing sums continues to dwindle.

That might be good union politics in the short run, but is an economic situation that can have only one ending — in New York City or anywhere.

Borrowed Nonsense:

First Burglar: "I think I need glasses."

Second Burglar: "What makes you think so?"

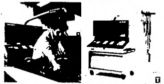
First Burglar: "I was twirling the knobs on what I thought was a wall safe when I tuned in an all-night FM station."

"Are Mr. and Mrs. Miller here?" asked the master of ceremonies at a large banquet. "We're the Millers," responded a young couple near the head table. "You're son is on the phone," the emcee advised. "He wants to know where you keep your fire extinguisher."

They were two veteran anglers, hunched motionless in the small rowboat for several hours. Finally one spoke: "Darn it, Sam, that's the second time you've shifted your feet in the last half hour! Did you come out here to fish or dance?"

NEWS OF TECHNOLOGY

CAR CARE COMPUTER



A new computer can help fix your car faster.

There are an estimated 115 million cars in use in the U.S. and about 500,000 mechanics qualified to repair them. That averages out to 230 cars per mechanic. Fortunately, there are computers that can help those mechanics fix those cars faster.

One such company can perform a total of 15 tests on a vehicle's four major systems: cranking, charging, ignition and emission. Additional tests cover electric fuel injection, battery load, timing and general purpose functions, and do it all in less than ten minutes.

The unit is both fully automatic and fully manual or anything in between. With the manual mode, the operator can skip tests, advance or go back to any previous test, allowing engine adjustments during any test. In addition, the microprocessor-based engine analyzer automatically gives the operator or mechanic highly precise specifications. With the help of this 454 from Siemens Corporation, a mechanic can adjust a car for optimum performance and reliability, fuel economy and emission control all at once.

It is particularly useful in newer vehicles that are becoming more difficult to maintain. Tough government standards and sophisticated options mean cars are more complex, more sensitive and more difficult to adjust and service.

Now, however, a car dealer or service station mechanic can find out just where your car needs fine tuning, quickly and easily, and check on his work just as fast. That can mean a bigger volume for your service station and a more quickly fixed car for you.

Putting Small Business Into The Export Market

The Small Business Committee, of which I am a member, has introduced legislation designed to put small business into the mainstream of the export market. I cosponsored this legislation because I think it not only vital that we increase our exports from this country, but that we include small business in this process.

Because of our declining balance of payments, we need to increase our export markets and products. In 1979, the U.S. ran a deficit of $24.7 billion in its balance of trade. This is down somewhat from the deficit of 1978, but it is still not good enough. A nation with our capabilities and creativity should have no deficit, but rather should have a surplus.

Most often when we think of exporting products, our attention is turned to the large corporations with thousands of employees. In volume this has been the case as a small number of firms account for the bulk of the U.S. exports. However, it is also true that 70 per cent of the U.S. firms involved in exporting have fewer than 100 employees and are truly small business.

Many of the new ideas and creative innovations developed in this country come from small business. So, we must turn to small business and encourage those firms to export the new products if we are to help balance our trade deficit.

The legislation developed by the Small Business Committee would help and encourage small business to get into the export market. Small business obviously cannot send their own representatives overseas or hire the people necessary to understand and comply with foreign laws and regulations.

To give small business that helping hand, the Small Business Expansion Act of 1980 has been drafted and passed the committee. This measure would help small business interested in the export market in a number of ways.

—The Small Business Administration would be allowed to make or guaranty loans to help small business develop foreign markets and for pre-export financing.

—Establish an office of International Trade. Specialists working in this office would participate in seminars to study export programs and examine small business needs for exporting information.

—The Secretary of Commerce would be authorized to make grants to encourage the development and implementation of a Small Business International Marketing Program.

—Establish a National Export Council composed of government officials, congressmen and senators and private citizens, at least five of whom are small business persons involved in export trade.

—Assign commercial attaches, ministers and counselors overseas as employees of the Department of Commerce. These people would work to develop new markets and outlets for exports from the United States, particularly those produced by small businesses.

Small business in the United States produces a wide variety of products. There is no reason that these goods cannot be exported to other countries if we have the cooperation of the government in expanding markets. Helping our small businesses into the export market will not only help in our balance of payments — it will also require more production which will require more employees.

There are a number of small businesses in Minnesota which would be well suited to exporting their products to other countries. This legislation would authorize the Federal government to work with these businesses in developing the markets they need.

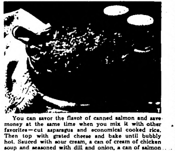
INFLATION-FIGHTING FOOD IDEAS

Serve A Surprising One-Dish Meal



You can savor the flavor of canned salmon and save money at the same time when you mix it with other favorites—cut asparagus and economical cooked rice. Then top with grated cheese and bake until bubbly hot. Sauced with sour cream, a can of cream of chicken soup and seasoned with dill and onion, a can of salmon goes a long way.

SALMON SUPREME

1 can (15-1/2 or 16 ounces) pink salmon
1 can (10-3/4 ounces) condensed cream of chicken soup
1/2 cup sour cream
1/3 cup minced onion
1/2 teaspoon dried dill weed
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
3 cups cooked rice
1 can (14-1/2 ounces) all-green asparagus cut spears and tips (drained)
1 cup grated Cheddar cheese

Drain, bone and flake salmon; reserve liquid. Heat soup, salmon liquid, sour cream, onion, seasonings, and rice. Fold in salmon. Turn into a greased, shallow 2-quart baking dish. Arrange asparagus over salmon mixture. Sprinkle with cheese. Bake at 350 degrees for 20 minutes. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Senator Marv Hanson

ASSISTANT MAJORITY LEADER
Senator 1 District
Rural Route 1
Hallock, Minnesota 56728

SPECIAL LEGISLATIVE REPORT Part 1

This is the first of a four part report of my legislative activities and major legislation enacted during the four years I have served as State Senator from District 1. I would ask for your ideas and views of state government as we look to the future, and if you would like further information on any of the legislative matters discussed, please contact me.

WARREN SIGNAL LIGHTS

There is a dangerous railroad crossing on Highway 1 east of Warren that does not have signal lights. A number of residents there asked me to see if signals could be installed. A hearing was arranged in Warren, and the local concern shown at the hearing led to the Department of Transportation ordering the installation of signal lights. I am pleased that by working together, these signals were finally going to be placed at this crossing.

PUBLIC TV AT BEMIDJI

Extreme north central Minnesota (from Bemidji north to the border) does not have access to Public Broadcasting television. An active group of interested citizens requested area legislators to help in establishing a PBS broadcasting station. I was the main sponsor in the Senate for this bill, and with strong support from all area legislators, an appropriation of $440,000 was provided in state funds to set up this broadcasting facility. Construction is progressing now, and we are looking forward to having the Public Broadcasting System programs come into our area.

INHERITANCE AND GIFT TAXES

The 71st Session (1979-80) of the State Legislature made significant changes in the Minnesota inheritance and gift taxes substantially reducing taxes for surviving spouses and their families. In fact, we changed from an inheritance tax to an estate tax structured similar to that of the Federal Estate Tax.

I had proposed that the inheritance laws recognize that wives were equal partners in the building of an estate and saving for the future. The new estate tax goes a long way in recognizing that fact. Because of this law, a spouse in Minnesota can receive $450,000 without paying any estate tax, and all annuities received are totally exempt. This is substantial reform of prior law.

Also included in this law is that the gift tax is totally repealed. This will encourage estate planning for gifts to reduce the size of estates which will lower the estate tax. This will greatly aid all families in planning for the future.

Farm families will be able to use an alternate valuation for determining land values. That method will use the farm's productive capacity or income producing ability based on average farm rentals. This will significantly reduce valuations of farm estate from the estimated sales prices used now which we know are greatly inflated by speculative factors. This change will greatly aid farm families in planning for the transfer of the farm to upcoming generations.

FLOODING

My great-grandfather was flooded out in 1882 and saw all the logs he had cut for a new home, barn, and other buildings float north with the Red River. Needless to say, flooding problems have been with us for too long a time. We were able to budget, here in Minnesota, $1,000,000 for this need in the 1979 legislative session. This is the first step taken by our state to provide an appropriation from state funds alone, and we hope to institute a full fledged on-going program in 1981.

Paid by the Hanson State Senate Volunteer Committee, Fran Stromberg, Chairwoman, Thief River Falls, MN 56701; Don Murray, Treasurer, Donaldson, MN 56720

FANCY THAT!

In America, in the Roaring Twenties, "Thoroughly Modern Millies" of the decade believed the most up-to-date of beauty treatments, the permanent wave, wouldn't take if they were menstruating.

Today's "Thoroughly Modern Millies" know that they can have their hair permed at any time. And, because of advances in sanitary protection such as o.b. Tampons (which were developed by a woman gynecologist to be naturally inserted and highly absorbent), they can maintain their regular, active life style.

Dr. Patricia Schreiner-Engel, psychologist and consultant to o.b. Tampons' education program, notes that the attitude of mother and daughter on the first day of menstruation can set the tone that will last a lifetime. She recommends open discussion of the process in order to instill the idea that this should be an exciting, happy event in a girl's development.

DEPENDABLE, PROVEN WILD OAT CONTROL.

AVENGE® wild oat herbicide is not a test product. AVENGE has been proven in wheat and barley fields all over the northern part of the country. Commercially proven.

The reason AVENGE is so effective is because AVENGE lets you treat when the time is right to get your wild oats: from the 3 up to the 5-leaf stage when 95% of the wild oats have germinated. There's no crop loss, and you get a better yield and cut dockage to the bone.

Nothing controls wild oats better than AVENGE. You can depend on it.

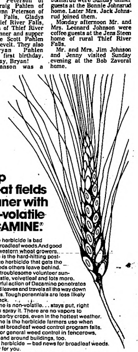
Use herbicides effectively.
Read and follow label directions carefully.



Keep wheat fields cleaner with non-volatile DACAMINE®

Dacamine herbicide is bad news for broadleaf weeds. And good news for western wheat growers. Dacamine is the hard-hitting post-emergence herbicide that gets the tough weeds others leave behind. Including troublesome volunteer sunflower, thistle, velvetleaf and lots more. The powerful action of Dacamine penetrates waxy weed leaves and travels all the way down to the roots. Tough perennials are less likely to grow back.

Dacamine is non-volatile... stays put, right where you spray it. There are no vapors to damage nearby crops, even in the hottest weather.

Dacamine is the herbicide farmers use when their normal broadleaf weed control program fails. It's great for general weed control in fencerows, roadsides and around buildings, too. Dacamine herbicide — bad news for broadleaf weeds. Good news for you.

Ask us for Dacamine. We're your local Diamond Shamrock dealer.

Will you have peace of mind at thunderstorm time?

Everyone who's ever planted a crop knows the worry that comes when storm clouds roll in. And everyone who's had good insurance protection knows the peace of mind good coverage can bring.

Farmers who carry crop hail insurance through Production Credit Association have peace of mind plus. They know that when they have a claim their PCA representative will have an interest in seeing that they receive a fair settlement.

PCA members have a choice of policies, standard or deductible. Rates are realistic, based on probability of hail in your area.

Take away risk, worry and tension with crop hail insurance available from PCA. Then you can enjoy summer weather and have peace of mind at thunderstorm time.

Crime Remains Among Nation's No. 1 Problems

Upswing in crime continued through the end of the decade as crime index offenses soared eight per cent in 1979, according to Attorney General Benjamin R. Civiletti.

All city and county population groups, areas, and regions in the United States shared in the increase in the uniform crime reports' preliminary annual statistics released recently by William H. Webster, director of the Federal bureau of investigation.

Webster noted that there has not been such a dramatic increase since 1974's unparalleled 18 per cent crime surge, which was followed by a 10 per cent upswing in 1975.

"The 1979 increase clearly indicates that crime remains one of our nation's most serious problems," Webster said. "I am, of course, troubled by this trend. Every American should be troubled. Crime, after all, diminishes freedom; it casts an intimidating shadow across our free society. All of us — not just law enforcement — all of us should do what we can to reduce crime."

Crime figures are based on the crime index offenses reported by law enforcement agencies across the country. The index is comprised of the violent crimes of murder, forcible rape, robbery and agravated assault and the property crimes of burglary, larceny-theft and motor vehicle theft. Statistics for arson, a newly established index crime, are not yet available.

Greatest increase for the year was experienced in cities outside metropolitan areas where crime climbed 11 per cent. Cities over 50,000 population registered an eight per cent upturn, while in both the suburban and rural areas crime increased nine per cent.

Violent crimes as a group rose 11 per cent nationwide. Forcible rape and robbery each jumped 12 per cent, while murder and aggravated assault each rose nine per cent. Only decrease in crime indicated in the preliminary statistics was for murder in rural areas — down two per cent.

Collectively, the property crimes rose eight per cent with gains of 10 per cent for motor vehicle theft, nine per cent for larceny-theft, and six per cent for burglary.

Geographically, all regions showed increases over 1978 figures. The South, the most populous region, experienced the greatest increase, 10 per cent. Northeast, West and North Central regions followed with rises of nine, eight and seven per cent, respectively.

Final crime statistics will be available later this year in the detailed uniform crime reports' publication, "Crime in the United States."

HOW SUPERMARKETS SERVE THE PUBLIC INTEREST

The Supermarket Invention

We take supermarkets for granted, but others consider them wonders of the modern world!

Not many people consider supermarkets an invention. People think of inventions as devices—like the "better mousetrap"—rather than easier or cheaper ways to do things.

Yet, the man who first thought of getting the butcher, the baker, the candlestick maker — and the dairyman, canner, miller and fisherman—to send their wares to a central warehouse for parceling out to neighborhood stores did invent something important: that's why he called it a *super*market.

The idea of arranging all the goods on open shelves so people could help themselves, take as long as they wish and compare brands, then of putting wheels on baskets to make shopping easier, deserves the name invention!

That's why an American supermarket frequently heads the list of things that foreign visitors, including queens and prime ministers, want to see.

And the marvel is that this convenience in one-stop shopping translates into lower cost. When supermarkets were first invented, their owners promised customers they could reduce their food bill by 25 per cent. And because they did it, the Food Marketing Institute points out, supermarkets multiplied in neighborhoods all over the country.

Furthermore they keep changing. As automobiles became popular, they added parking lots. As people moved to the suburbs, they moved. As women increasingly went into the work force, they lengthened shopping hours.

Today, the supermarket business is still investigating innovative ways to help shoppers save.

Some Relief Given By Folk Medicine

by Jeanne Hanson
'U' M News Service

Willow and birch tree barks yield a natural aspirin. A modern asthma drug is related to the amni seeds used by Bedouins for centuries to treat asthma. Many of the "chewing stocks" long used to clean teeth in Africa and some Moslem countries contain natural antibiotics, anticavity ingredients and even some fluoride. Grandma's lemon and honey remedy for colds coats the throat and provides some vitamin C.

Folk medicines, used for everything from arthritis to teething pain, have been around as long as human culture, said Nina Etkin, professor of anthropology at the University of Minnesota. "After all, you didn't just sit around and watch your family die without trying something," she said.

Earliest clear evidence of folk medicine use dates back 1,000 years or so, when people living in Nevada ate chenopodium seeds to avoid intestinal worms. Earlier use of folk medicine is difficult to trace because leftover seeds, bark and other components could just as easily have been used for food, Etkin said. Etkin studies the general ways people through time have worked with their environment, concentrating on the study of their medicine, food and religion.

Ancient medicine cabinet expanded through trial and error, religious influence, and the "doctrine of signatures," Etkin said. "Signatures" are characteristics of one substance that suggest another — heart-shaped leaves eaten for heart problems, red plants for blood trouble, or sometimes parts of an unusual animal such as a black chicken for other ailments.

Experimentation with folk medicine continues today, Etkin added. In Africa, the Housa tribe recently began experimenting with a new tree introduced by the government into their area because it showed promise — it was bitter like many of their stomach medicines. Hausas try new plants cautiously, but the results are sometimes impressive, Etkin said. Living and farming on the savannah, where Etkin studied their practices, the Hausa are threatened by alamaria during the rainy season. Yet when they do succumb, they get only mild cases.

During the danger period, they eat many wild leafy plants instead of grains and legumes, as food and medicine. Laboratory chemical analysis on these plants suggests that they raise the level of oxygen in red blood cells enough to interfere with the development of the malaria parasite. Grain food that they avoid during this period does the opposite.

Generally, the most effective folk medicines are those used for specific pains, woulds, skin infections, coughs and sore throats, toothaches and other simple ailments, Etkin said.

Whether the evidence supporting their use is scientific or not, almost any folk medicine can work if people believe in it strongly, she said. Tribal medicine is often a matter of faith and is dispensed by a magical or religious leader (usually a man or woman whose family member held the position before or who became an apprentice to the previous shaman).

Modern medicine is also a matter of faith, to some extent. "When we take a pill ordered by the doctor, we rarely understand what's in it," she said. Study after study has shown that many patients improve after having taken a placebo.

Some modern patent medicines are based on old remedies. Some contain herbs like camphor. Heart medicine digitalis was derived from the foxglove plant, part of the Eruopean and early Greek and Roman folk medicine tradition.

Folk medicines are not as dangerous as they sound, Etkin added. "Few things are so poisonous that a taste at the tip of the tongue will kill you although I don't recommend doing it," said Etkin, who rarely takes any medicine, either folk or prescribed.

An even more dreaded disease, cancer, has been treated with at least 3,000 different plants. A disease as old as humanity, cancer has been found in the bones of at least one Egyptian mummy. Some of the folk medicines tried so far — grapes, spotted wintergreen, poke and cider added to vinegar — appear to be ineffective according to research results published in "Medical Botany".

Effectiveness of others such as garlic, alder tree extracts and laetrile (from apricot pits) has not yet been determined. Extracts from the periwinkle plant have been developed for use as an anti-leukemia drug and sold by Eli Lilly.

Other folk medicines can be quite harmful, Etkin said. Cyanide has been detected in many plants, especially those in the pea and grass families. Sassafras barn, used in some root beers, is now known to be carconogenic.

More than 100 plants growing in the American Southwest include different forms of coumarin. Some of these, like peanuts, provide an environment for aflatoxin mold, a potent carcinogen. Others contain estrogens powerful enough to cause infertility in the cattle and sheep who eat them, according to the research of Richard Raichelson, from Memphis state university.

But because of their potential, plants should be guarded from extinction, according to "Medical Botany". Many compounds that remain undiscovered in plants are beyond the imagination of even our best scientists, the magazine article states.

CAR CARE CORNER

HELPFUL TIPS TO SAVE YOU MONEY

CORROSION AND MOISTURE PROTECTION

Almost every car owner has felt frustration at one time or another with moisture getting into the ignition system or with corroded battery terminals resulting in his or her car not starting or when he or she has had a flat tire and had difficulty removing the tire because of rusted or frozen lug nuts.

A product called "CML" spray, a lubricant for just such emergencies, has been developed by the Kendall Refining Company. CML will help protect metal surfaces, penetrate corroded parts, drive out moisture, eliminate squeaks in places like door hinges, accelerator pedals, latches and numerous other spots. Besides being an outstanding car care product, CML is an easy-to-use lubricant which also protects tools and other equipment such as mowers, guns and fishing gear by penetrating, protecting and lubricating.

Resume Hearing On Storage Of Nuclear Waste

Minnesota energy agency will resume public hearings to determine whether to increase the storage capacity for nuclear waste at the Prairie Island nuclear plant in Red Wing. The hearings were suspended earlier this year as a result of procedural and legal challenges.

The hearings will resume at 10 a.m. on June 16 in the Red Wing public library, 225 Broadway, Red Wing. They will continue in Red Wing at 9 a.m. on June 17, 18 and 19. The public hearings will then reconvene in St. Paul at 9 a.m. on June 23 at the federal courthouse, room 584, 316 North Robert street.

Most of the time is expected to be devoted to hearing evidence presented by the Minnesota Pollution Control agency, the supply and demand analysis staff of the energy agency, Northern States Power company and Prairie Island project (PIP). PIP is a coalition of citizens opposing the expansion of the nuclear waste storage capacity at the plant.

Hearing examiner, Myron Greenberg, has also announced that certain sessions of the hearings will be limited to public testimony only. Those sessions are scheduled for the afternoon and evenings of June 17 in Red Wing and June 24 in St. Paul. Afternoon sessions will begin at 1:30 p.m., and evening sessions will commence at 7 p.m.

Northern States Power, operator of the Prairie Island facility, is seeking a state permit to increase the number of spent nuclear fuel rods stored at the plant. The request was originally made last year.

When Prairie Island was built in 1973, the nuclear waste from the plant was to be shipped out of the state to a reprocessing center. No such center was ever constructed, and the spent fuel rods have been stored in a pool of water at the plant.

Arthur Adlarte of the energy agency will assist citizens who wish to participate in the public hearings. He can be contacted by writing the Energy Agency, 980 American Center Building, St. Paul, Minnesota 55101, or telephoning 612-296-8279.

Governor Signs Review Policy On Environment

A bill designed to eliminate confusion and costly delays in Minnesota's environmental review policy was signed into law by Gov. Al Quie.

"This bill repeals several vague provisions of Minnesota's environmental policy act and substitutes a more specific process for environmental review," the governor said in a bill signing ceremony at the State Capitol.

Quie said the new law will:

+ Establish clear criteria and firm deadlines for environmental review since the environmental quality board (EQB) will establish categories of projects for which an environmental study will or will not be required;

+ Broaden the definition of "environmental" to include economic, employment and sociological factors;

+ Restore local governments to their "proper role" in resolving local environmental issues (the bill specifies that a "responsible government unit" — often a city or county — will be responsible for making the decisions. All such responsibilities are now concentrated within the EQB); and

+ Allow the responsible governmental unit to determine the scope of the environmental review and require concurrent permit reviews with the environmental impact statement.

"Most important," the governor said, "all these changes are made while maintaining and strengthening the safeguards of the process. Ultimate appear may still be made to the courts by any party to an environmental review."

The bill also requires the EQB to draft new rules for the implementation of this act. The rule-making process must be completed by January 1, 1981.

The governor said that the new environmental policy act was written with the assistance and guidance of environmentalists, industry groups, state departments in addition to key legislators.

"The final result speaks well for these individuals' efforts," he said. "It is my hope that this spirit of cooperation will continue throughout the rulemaking process. If it does, we will have a greatly improved environmental decision-making process that will benefit all Minnesotans."

Gold Therapy Aids Victims Of Arthritis

Since long before recorded history, gold has been used by man for trade and decoration. In this century it has found another use, this time a medical one. Arthritis foundation reports that gold salt therapy can relieve symptoms for many victims of rheumatoid arthritis.

According to the foundation, gold is especially effective in the early stages of rheumatoid arthritis in reducing inflammation and retarding further joint damage. Gold is not effective in osteoarthritis, where inflammation is not the problem.

Gold therapy can have serious side-effects, a foundation spokesman cautioned, and is administered only under a doctor's supervision. Regular tests provide the doctor with signs of side-effects, which can be reversed by stopping the drug.

The Arthritis foundation has a special message on gold therapy for rheumatoid arthritis that may be heard during May by calling the foundation's toll-free number, 1-800-552-1278. Literature on gold therapy is free to callers, and answers to other questions about arthritis will be provided.

This free information and referral service is one of the many services of the Arthritis foundation, made possible in most Minnesota communities by the support of the United Way.

4 Students Participate In Teen Mission Program

by Bonnie Reed
Times Reporter

FOUR STUDENTS from Thief River Falls have been accepted for the Teen Missions International program for this year. Students include Dwayne Lewis, 16, son of Dillmond and Donna Lewis; and standing, left to right, Deanna DuChamp, 18, daughter of Arden and Darlene DuChamp; Wendy Erickson, 16, daughter of Gary C. and Cynthia (CoCo) Erickson; and Leah Peres, 18, daughter of Rev. Don and Patty Peres.

During the month of June, four Lincoln high students will be leaving their Thief River Falls homes to spend their summers in various sections of the world to perform missionary work.

The students — Deanna DuChamp, 18, daughter of Arden and Darlene DuChamp; Wendy Erickson, 16, daughter of Gary and Cynthia (CoCo) Erikson; Dwayne Lewis, 16, son of Dillmond and Donna Lewis; and Leah Peres, 18, daughter of Rev. Don and Patty Peres — members of Teen Missions International, have been accepted to tour various sections of the world performing missionary duties on either evangelistic or work teams.

Both Wendy and Dwayne will leave June 8 for Merritt Island — a 40-mile island east of Florida — where they will begin a two-week session of boot camp before beginning actual missionary work at their selected sites. At boot camp, students are taught all things they will need to know in their line of duty once they begin their missionary work, Wendy said.

Following boot camp, Wendy, a member of Our Saviour's Lutheran church, will leave for Haiti — a country in the west Indies on western Hispaniola, where she will work until August 12 with a team of 30 other students from all over the United States and Canada, ranging in ages from 13 to 21, building a clinic for the people of Haiti.

Time not spent working on the clinic will involve attending churches and participating in Bible meetings in Christianville, Haiti, where Wendy will be stationed while on her work team. The city is south of Port-au-Prince, the leading city, port and capital of Haiti.

Following her work duties, she will become involved in a debriefing session in Christianville — a session all missionary students on Teen Missions International participate in to provide them with a period of relaxation and fellowship before beginning their journeys home.

Dwayne, a member of the Evangelical Free church, will leave from Merritt Island following his two-week session at Boot camp where he will fly to New York and then to Glasgow, Scotland. From there he will travel by bus to England, and cross the Irish Sea to reach his site for missionary work — Emerald Isle, Ireland. The trip will take him approximately one month, he said.

In Emerald Isle, he, along with his 30 other teammates — members of the Southern Ireland Bike Evangelistic Team — will travel by bicycle visiting villages and conducting open meetings with the people of Ireland.

His meetings will include songs, messages and testimonies, he said. His debriefing session will be in Glasgow, Scotland, before he returns to the United States.

Dianna, a member of the Silver Creek Lutheran church, will also attend boot camp on Merritt Island, she said, although she will attend the camp during the second session in June (two sessions are conducted to accommodate all students desiring missionary work, she said).

Her 30-member work team will begin work in Nazareth, a city in northern Israel, where students will construct a boys' home. Five and one-half days will be spent working on the home, she said, while the remainder of the time will be spent doing other missionary work with the people of Israel such as attending meetings and visiting with various groups of people. Her debriefing session will be spent in Greenfield, Ohio.

Washington, D.C., will be the site of Leah's missionary work once she completes her second session of boot camp with Deanna on Merritt Island.

Her work will include answering telephones five or six days a week for Dial-A-Teen, an organization set up to help those people with problems, or those that just need someone to talk to. When Leah is not involved in telephone correspondence, (the line is open 24 hours a day, with each volunteer taking different shifts throughout the day and

Viking Diamond Jubilee Set For June 27-29

Steering committee of the Viking Diamond Jubilee met on May 19 to check on the progress made for the Viking 75th anniversary to be held June 27, 28 and 29.

Events will begin with talent night on Friday at 8 p.m. Mylo Carlson of Angus will be master of ceremonies, some entries have been received, but the talent committee is seeking additional entries. Talent awards will be made.

Several entries for the parade have been received, but more are needed and will be appreciated as well. Application information is placed elsewhere in this issue for both parade units and talent numbers. When applications are received the various committee members will in turn contact interested parties.

There will be a special kiddie parade preceding the regular parade. This is open for children through the sixth grade. Ronald McDonald will be present and there will be candy and balloons given to the children.

Following the parade there will be a free pork barbecue for which Bob Fincher informs all plans have been made. Dinner is free to all persons wearing a Diamond Jubilee button.

Saturday afternoon will feature a ball game and horseshow pitching. An added feature will be a flea market. Interested persons may contact Virgil Hjelle, publicity chairman, Viking.

Kidney Fund Donation Here Hits $5,734

Kidney Foundation of the Upper Midwest will receive $5,734.72 as a result of the 1980 fund raising campaign in the Thief River Falls community, according to W.G. Maves and Ruth Nepper, co-chairmen.

The total is a new high mark for the campaign which raised $5,550 in 1979. Principal contributor to the total is the Kidney Foundation auction held at the sports arena which produced $3,902.40 this year in the same of donated items.

Lt. Governor To Address Graduates

Lieutenant Governor Lou Wangberg will give the commencement address when the Thief River Falls area vocational-technical institute holds its graduation ceremonies Friday at 7:30 p.m. at the Northland community college gymnasium.

Processional will be played by Sherry Hanson and the invocation given by Rev. Don Knudson, associate pastor at Redeemer Lutheran church. Musical number will be presented by Linda Hesse, Kathy Stark, Sue Stigen and Cathy Sugden, practical nursing students.

Dr. William Corliss, superintendent of schools, will introduce Lt. Gov. Wangberg for the main address. Arnt M. Aune, director of the Thief River Falls AVTI, will present the 1980 graduating class and Lawrence McDowell, chairman of the board of education, will award the diplomas. Singing of "America the Beautiful" by the audience and benediction by Rev. Knudson will precede the recessional played by Sherry Hanson.

A reception will be served in the college-AVTI joint commons following the commencement exercises. Including the 1980 class graduates as of July 1 this year, the AVTI will have awarded graduation certificates to 4,471 students during its history.

Order Design On New High School

Thief River Falls board of education has ordered architect Ken Skold to proceed with preliminary designs for a new high school to house 1,200 students in action taken at a regular meeting of the board last Tuesday. The resolution also calls for planning of the school to be located on school district property near the present area vocational-technical institute.

The authorization is the first step toward more definitive cost determination and prospective bond issue election. Consideration of district building needs and preliminary investigation of alternatives has been underway for some time, including study and recommendation by a citizens' committee.

At the Tuesday meeting the board also hired Michael Novak of Paynesville as assistant principal for Lincoln high school to replace Terry Solne. The appointment is for one year during Solney's sabbatical leave for continuing education.

Novak is a 1962 graduate of Minneapolis Roosevelt high school and holds BS and MS degrees plus a specialty in administration from Mankato state university. He taught for eight and one-half years before serving as principal for three years at Zumbrota and the past three years at

by Marvin Luncin
Times Editor

"NORDHAGEN, Wayne Oren, OF, No. 20. Born July 4, 1948, in Thief River Falls, Minnesota. Height: 6 ft., 2 in. Weight: 195 lbs. Bats and throws right. Married Carrie Lee Millar. Lives in Valencia, California."

This is the way the 1980 media fact book produced by the Chicago White Sox introduces their current designated hitter. With 111 at bats in the American League this season (through Friday of last week), Nordhagen was 18th in the league with a .315 batting average. He had 35 hits including four home runs, 21 runs batted in and 11 runs scored. His avergae was second on the club to Bob Molinaro's .344 average in 90 at bats.

"Thief River Falls," Nordhagen mused while sitting in the Chicago dugout prior to a game with the Minnesota Twins last Wednesday evening. "I don't think I've been back there since 1959, but I'd really like to go there again. I have quite a few relatives around there."

Wayne is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Oren Nordhagen who now live in Glide, Ore. His mother is the former Dorothy Vanous of Strathcona. Oren graduated from Lincoln high school, married Dorothy and lived in the Rosewood area where Wayne was born on the Fourth of July in 1948. The family moved to Minneapolis, Devils Lake, N.D., California and then to Oregon while Oren was employed in trailer sales and rental businesses. Wayne said the family moved from Thief River Falls in 1951.

He is the nephew of Les Nordhagen, who operates Les's Sanitation service in the Thief River Falls area, and Mrs. Floyd (Lillian) Rux of Thief River Falls.

Uncles on his mother's side of the family include Rudy, Joe and Edward Vanous of the Middle River community.

"Les and family usually make it to one of the series we have with the Twins every year," Wayne said during the dugout interview. "They stop by and we get a chance to do some family visiting. I sort of expected to see them this series, but things must be too busy back home."

Nordhagen seemed to be enjoying himself with the White Sox, his first major league club after 10 years of bouncing around the minor leagues. It appears the present Sox management intends to give him a lot of appearances at the plate, and he has been responding well to the challenge.

"Yes, I would say my strength is in my offense," Nordhagen admitted. "This club has a lot of guys who can run, and I mean really run. They can catch up to just about anything hit in the outfield. I used to be able to run a little a few years ago. But I weigh 220 now and the speed isn't there any more. Playing pretty regular as a DH has helped. I hope to get 400 to 500 at bats this season and prove that I can hit the ball."

In his four prior years with the White Sox, Nordhagen compiled a .286 major league average. He hit .189 in only 53 plate appearances in 1976, raised that to .315 in 124 appearances in 1977, hit .301 in 206 trips in 1978 and belted out 54 hits including seven homers in 1979 for a .280 average in 193 at bats. He has 20 major league homers.

One of the four round-trippers this season came Tuesday night against the Twins. His two-run shot into the left field seats midway through the game provided all the offense the Sox needed in a 2-0 shutout victory.

Do such heroics get to be old hat to the professional ballplayer? "Never," Nordhagen says. "The thrill is always there. Just putting on the uniform every day and realizing that you're good enough to play with the best professional baseball players in the country is a thrill."

In his high school days Nordhagen was a shortstop, third baseman and pitcher. Moving to American Legion junior baseball he played mostly third base. Because he liked to run and throw, his coach encouraged him to develop as an outfielder and that was his position when he moved to Oregon as a sophomore in high school. He later enrolled at Portland (Oregon) state college, but transferred to Treasure Valley junior college in Ontario when Portland wanted to redshirt him as a freshman.

"I didn't want to wait a year; I wanted to play baseball," Nordhagen says. "As it turned out, our team at Treasure Valley won some tournaments and I got accepted to attend Arizona State university as well as drafted by the New York Yankees. I used the Arizona State acceptance to get a little better contract with New York." at the age of 20, he began his professional baseball career with Johnson City, Tenn., in the Rookie league.

In 1973 he was hitting .331 at Syracuse when he was acquired by the Atlanta Braves and sent to Richmond. In 1974 at Richmond he appeared in 112 games and collected 108 hits in 374 at bats for a .289 average and hit 16 home runs. He was named

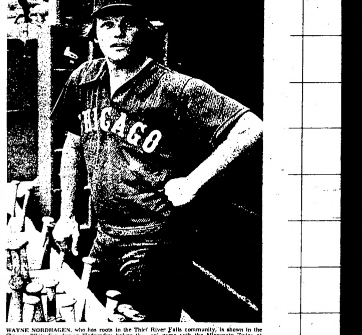
READY TO HIT against the Minnesota Twins' Pete Redfern, Wayne Nordhagen has the bat cocked as he concentrates on the pitch. Nordhagen singled to left center to start a two-run White Sox rally in the fifth inning.

LEADING PITCHER for the Minnesota Twins this season is right-hander Pete Redfern, shown here delivering a pitch to Wayne Nordhagen, designated hitter for the Chicago White Sox. Nordhagen was born in Thief River Falls.



WAYNE NORDHAGEN, who has roots in the Thief River Falls community, is shown in the Chicago White Sox dugout Wednesday before the Sox' game with the Minnesota Twins at Metropolitan Stadium. Wayne is the son of Oren and Dorothy Nordhagen who lived at Rosewood when Wayne was born on the Fourth of July in 1948. They now live in Glide, Ore., and Wayne lives in California. Nordhagen is currently hitting .315 for the White Sox in his fifth season in the major leagues and still gets a thrill out of playing baseball.

SOCIETY and CLUBS

Betty Raye Skyberg And Verne Lee Sletten Wed

Miss Betty Raye Skyberg and Verne Lee Sletten exchanged marriage vows on Saturday, May 10, at 4:00 p.m., at the Grace Lutheran church at Grygla.

The bride is the daughter of Conrad Skyberg of Newfolden. Parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy Sletten of Grygla.

Rev. Owen Christianson officiated at the double ring ceremony witnessed by approximately 250 relatives and friends. At the organ was Mrs. Barb Erickson. She played the traditional wedding marches and also accompanied the bride's cousins, Rachel Tvelton and Daniel Trontvet as they sang "Wedding Song," "God, A Woman and Man," and "The Shepherd Song."

Forming the chancel setting were two floral arrangements on the altar featuring yellow daisies, and pink, blue and green carnations. Ribbon bows in coordinating pastel colors marked the pews.

The bride was escorted to the altar and given in marriage by her husband. She was attired in a gown of white qiana with Alencon lace outlining the Queen Anne neckline. Matching lace traced the empire waistline, marked the gored seaming on the skirt, edged the hemline, and enhanced the wide cuffs on her full, sheer sleeves. Her double tiered, fingertip and chapel-length veil flowed from a lace profile headpiece. She carried a cascade of yellow and white daisies interspersed with pink roses, and blue, green and pink carnations, accented with babies' breath.

Donna Skyberg, Newfolden, attended her sister as maid of honor. Other attendants were Kim Peterson, Thief River Falls, a friend of the bride, and Karen Nelson and Shirley Dahl, both of Salol, sisters of the groom. Their identical gowns of dotted Swiss with white daisy print, were of light blue, pink, green and yellow, respectively. The gowns, styled in sundress fashion, were topped by matching long sleeved jackets trimmed with lace. In their hair they wore a cluster of daisies corresponding the the color of their gowns. Their long-stemmed carnation sheaves were of the same color.

Miniature bride was Ericka Dahl, Salol, a niece of the groom. She wore a floor-length gown, similar to the bride's, and carried a white basket filled with the same flowers that were in the bride's bouquet.

Attending the groom as best man was Gary Sletten, Grygla, a brother. Groomsmen were Kenny Thomas, Grygla, a friend of the groom, and Arnie Nelson and Schell Dahl of Salol, brothers-in-law of the groom. The ushers were Marlow Skyberg, Puposky, brother of the bride, and Duane Sletten, Grygla, brother of the groom. The groom and his attendants wore black tuxedos, accented by ruffled shirts corresponding with the colors worn by their female attendants. Their carnation boutonnieres were the colors of their shirts. The groom's boutonniere corresponded with the flowers in his bride's bouquet.

Honor guest at the wedding was the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Myrtle Skyberg of Newfolden. She was attired in an aqua floor-length gown with a rounded, high collar and matching sheer lace sleeves, gathered at the wrists. Her corsage was of pink carnations. The mother of the groom wore a light blue floor-length gown with long, full sleeves. Matching lace trimmed the high collar and traced the slit neckline. To complement her gown, she wore a corsage of blue carnations.

A reception in the church parlors followed the ceremony. Serving as host and hostess were Mr. and Mrs. Bernard St. Peter of Puposky, the bride's godparents. Michelle Sletten, Salol and Suzette St. Peter, Wadena, registered the guests as Phylis St. Peter, Puposky, ladled the punch.

Centering the serving table was a three-tiered wedding cake baked and decorated by Janice Peterson of Grygla. To correspond with the bride's chosen colors, pastel hearts graved the sides of the cake. Topping the second tier were wedding bells and a cluster of flowers, similar to the flowers in the bride's bouquet. A miniature bride and groom topped the upper tier. The cake was cut and served by Betty St. Peter, Wadena, and Bernice Sistad, Grygla. At the coffee service were Rose Nelson and Clarice Trontvet, Thief River Falls, aunts of the bride.

Waitresses were Carol and Jody Sistad, Grygla. Julie Nelson, Thief River Falls, a cousin of the bride, was the bride's personal attendant.

Those from a distance attending the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Ed Holmes, South St. Paul; Mr. and Mrs. James Bjornstad, Ada; Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Olson, Bemidji; Mr. and Mrs. Bernard St. Peter, Wadena, and Mr. and Mrs. Arne Bock, Mr. and Mrs. Dan St. Peter and Mr. and Mrs. Ben St. Peter, all of Puposky.

The bride is a graduate of the Woodrow Wilson high school, Fargo, N.D., and was employed in this city by Barberio Cheese House. The groom is a graduate of Marshall County Central high school, Newfolden, and is employed by E.M. Nelson Construction, Newfolden.

Carelessness Major Cause Of Poisoning

Two young children were playing at home with what they probably thought were little pieces of candy. As any children would be expected to do with a handful of goodies, they ate them. Eight hours later, the younger child, only two years old, was dead. The "candy" turned out to be their mother's iron pills.

The child was a victim of one of the most common and most preventable, causes of death and injury among children: accidental poisoning. More than one million children in the United States are victims of accidental poisonings each year. Nearly 200 of them die. Perhaps the saddest statistic is that most accidental poisonings — 70 per cent among children ages one to five — could have been prevented if the parents had safely stored medicines, household cleaning products and other poisons out of their children's reach.

Solution, according to Dr. Tom Rolowicz, staff pediatrician and member of the toxicology team at St. Paul Ramsey hospital, is to store all such substances in locked metal cabinets. And, he adds, this should be done "today, not tomorrow."

Speaking before the staff of the Minneapolis Children's Health Center, Dr. Rolowicz stressed that even parents who closely supervise their children may find that they still manage to get into trouble. This is particularly true in the early morning hours when the parents are still asleep. For example, a child awakes just after dawn and decides it's time to get up and explore. If someone has left a bottle of aspirin out, no one is around to prevent the child from swallowing them.

Another substance commonly ingested by toddlers during the early morning hours is alcohol, according to Dr. Don Uden, clinical pharmacist at the Minneapolis Children's Health center.

"Sometimes the parents give a party and leave the cleaning up for the next morning," he said. "What happens is that the child gets up before the parents do and gets into some of the leftover drinks, which is dangerous because children are particularly sensitive to the effects of alcohol. An ounce or two can cause severe problems in a two-year-old." Same goes for any drug, prescription or otherwise, Dr. Rolowicz said, recalling a child who took some LSD someone had left in the home after a party.

Vitamins are the most common cause of accidental poisoning in children, Dr. Uden said, particularly vitamins with iron, and vitamins in the shape of cartoon characters or monsters — which children easily mistake for candy. Vitamins are particularly troublesome now, he said, because of the health food fad. People don't realize that too many vitamins can be harmful.

Poisonings are most likely to occur when the parents' attention is focused on other things: when they're cooking a meal, when someone is not feeling well, when the family is moving or vacationing, when there is a guest in the home or when a parent is taking a nap.

Parents' attitudes can be crucial in preventing accidental poisonings, Dr. Uden said.

"Sometimes a parent who brings a child into the emergency room says that the child should have known better, and that maybe the child has learned a lesson. But we're talking about two-year-olds. We can't expect a two-year-old to know better. It's really the parents' fault. They're not putting the poisons safely away."

Parents may wonder why a child who won't go near green beans would drink something as foul-tasting as furniture, polish or lighter fluid. According to Dr. Uden, things that taste bad to adults don't necessarily taste bad to children. It's not known whether this is due to an actual physical difference in children's taste buds or whether it's because children have not yet learned that certain tastes are considered awful. Many children like liver, for example, until they learn its reputation as a bad-tasting food. Same may be true for toxic substances.

A surprising number of children who suffer accidental poisonings do so more than once. One out of every four victims has been poisoned at least once before. Many repeaters are what Dr. Rolowicz called accident-prone — "the so-called accident walking around waiting to happen." Or, the child may be a "difficult" child, a trouble maker, the kind that does anything and everything a parent says not to do.

Many poisonings result from poor household situations, in which there is a lack of parental concern for what the children do. Or the cause may simply be poor storage of toxins. Children in single-parent families may become repeaters because of a lack of supervision. When a child goes from day care to babysitter to home, "a lot can happen in all the traveling around," Dr. Rolowicz said.

Finally, repeat poisonings may be due to suicide attempts or attention-getting. According to Dr. Rolowicz, 70 per cent of poisonings in children six to 18 are "suicide gestures," or cries for help. He emphasized the importance of following up on the intoxication cases.

"We can't just sober them up and send them home. An example of this was a 12-year-old who came in stone drunk, practically in a coma. After he was sobered up, we tried to find out what was going on in his family. The father roared into the emergency room, stating to the emergency room physician that 'Kids will be kids.' He took his 12-year-old and left. Certainly anyone in their right mind realizes that it is not in the normal activity of a 12-year-old to get stone drunk on anything."

Dr. Uden, who frequently visits grade schools and high schools to promote poison prevention, agrees that drugs are a major concern among children. Most of the questions he's asked have to do with alcohol and drugs, particularly marijuana. Curiosity about drugs extends all the way down to the first grade, he says.

Women Should Be Alert To Eye Problems

Women should be alert to certain eye problems not shared by their male counterparts, according to Dr. Raymond C. Croissant, president of the Minnesota association of ophthalmology.

"Birth control pills, pregnancy and menopause can cause eye-related problems in a small percentage of women. The underlying culprit is the overabundance or shortage of the hormone estrogen," Dr. Croissant said.

"It is a medically established fact," said Dr. Croissant, "that a small percentage of women experience changes in the vascular system as a result of taking birth control pills. These changes can be reflected in serious eye problems. For example, clotting of small blood vessels in the retina or optic nerve can cause loss of vision. Fortunately, there is usually an early warning signal of blurred vision. This condition may be reversible if it is detected early."

Problems can also arise during pregnancy, Dr. Croissant noted. As a result of changes in the eyes during the last trimester of pregnancy, some women may have difficulty wearing contact lenses during that time. Any eye problems during pregnancy should always be described to the obstetrician, he said.

"Dry eye syndrome can be a problem for post-menopausal women," Dr. Croissant said. "Some women in their 50s and 60s experience a dry, burning feeling in the eyes caused by insufficient tears. This condition is sometimes referred to as Sjogren's syndrome. Some of the remedies include applying artificial tears, protecting the eyes from the wind with side shields on glasses and keeping the air moist in the house with the aid of a humidifier. Unfortunately, the condition is somewhat difficult to treat and can be extremely debilitating for about one per cent of women.

"Women have been somewhat luckier than men as far as eye injuries are concerned," said Dr. Croissant. "But they are prone to other problems such as scratches from long fingernails and irritation from cosmetics. Some women experience an allergic reaction to eye shadow or mascara. Others cause problems by inadvertently scratching the eyeball with a mascara brush. Teens sometimes get into the bad habit of sharing eye makeup. This can lead to eye infections, as demonstrated by a recent outbreak of trachoma in one high school.

"One problem women have had in the past is waning. Tiny ulcers can result from accidentally getting hair spray in the eyes, but this problem has diminished as aerosol sprays have been removed from the market."

Generally speaking, women are not as exposed to chemical burns as men, except for injuries involving various household cleansers. Drain cleaners, oven cleaners, ammonia and bleach, when accidentally splashed in the eyes, can cause chemical burns. These injuries can be painful and dangerous. In case of such an injury, Dr. Croissant said the eyes should be immediately and copiously flooded with clear, cool water and then a physician should be consulted.

Effects Of Light On Plants Studied

Smithsonian News Service

It's easy to write a story about a major scientific breakthrough.

After all, everyone loves to read about a cure for cancer, a new source of energy or a better mousetrap.

Fact is, most scientists work along, rather undramatically, sometimes trying to confirm other research findings, sometimes going off on a tangent to pursue an interesting idea, but in all cases searching for something called "the truth."

Often, research is nothing more than a matter of setting the past record straight. Welcome, then, to the laboratory of agricultural engineer John Sager, a researcher at the Smithsonian's radiation biology laboratory in Rockville, MD.

Sager is studying the effects of pulsed, or intermittent, light on plant growth.

"We're trying to find out whether plants grow more efficiently with intermittent radiation or with continuous radiation," he explains. "If plants do grow more efficiently with intermittent light, pulsed-light systems could have far-reaching applications."

Sager can enumerate these many applications — increased crop production is a major one — but before he does, he pauses to explain that past claims for intermittent light have been "extravagant."

"Many scientists have claimed that intermittent light works wonders — that it can make plants grow bigger and better for less energy," he says. "I'm not convinced this is true."

"If there really is no effect from intermittent light," he continued, "it could be a very costly mistake. Already, some intermittent flourescent light systems have been developed which are capable of being incorporated into plant growth systems. These systems use a lot of energy — and that means money."

The record that Sager is trying to correct is an old one. Ever since Edison invented the electric light bulb 100 years ago, scientists have been searching for ways to use artificial light to spur plant growth. During the past 75 years, many studies have been carried out comparing the effects of intermittent and continuous light on the efficiency of photosynthesis, the process by which plants transform carbon dioxide and water into chemical energy — the Earth's food supply — and oxygen, a key component of the Earth's atmosphere.

"Some researchers have reported that the rate of photosynthesis doubled when intermittent light was substituted for continuous light, even though the amount of energy in the light was the same," Sager says. "This would be good news indeed; unfortunately, we have found this to be an area fraught with possibilities for misinterpretation."

Many factors can be misleading, he says: flaws in the design of the experiments, inaccurate instrumentation and incomplete or inappropriate analysis of the data collected.

Sager has designed and carried out new experiments which should eliminate these problems. The key involves carefully controlling each aspect of every experiment so results can be attributed solely to the effects of intermittent light and not to other factors.

His laboratory is carmmed full of plants — plants of all shapes, sizes and colors, growing chockablock in specially built chambers under carefully controlled conditions of light, temperature and humidity.

Resembling large refrigerators in size and shape, the chambers maintain and comfortable temperature of 75 degrees Fahrenheit and 70 per cent relative humidity. Plants are grown from seed in gravel with water and nutrients, and Sager selects only the most uniform species for final testing. Supply of carbon dioxide, needed for photosynthesis, is controlled continuously.

In a typical experiment, Sager might grow lettuce plants under a daylight flourescent light for 16 hours of light and eight hours of darkness. All plants receive the same mean light intensity and equal amounts of energy.

Only difference in the various chambers if the flash rate of the light. Some plants are exposed to light flickering so rapidly — once every 5 thousandths of a second — that the human eye cannot detect the pulse. Other plants are grown under slower pulse rates — once every five seconds, for instance — giving the impression of strobe lights in a disco. Still others are grown under a continuous light which serves as an experimental control.

At the end of 28 days, Sager "harvests" the plants. To gather information on the relative growth due to different light, he measures plant height, leaf area, and the fresh and dry weights of leaves, roots and stems. The rate of photosynthesis is determined during the course of experiments by measuring the amount of carbon dioxide taken in by the plant.

Photosynthesis in lettuce, it turns out, proceeds very well under short pulse rates — 5 thousandths of a second to five seconds — but equally well or better under continuous light conditions. It hardly grows at all, however, when exposed to light pulses of one minute.

Similar experiments have been carried out for spinach, tomatoes, corn, rye, cucumbers, beans and other plants.

"There is no question from these experiments that many plants grow better with short pulses than long pulses," Sager says. "But we have not yet found any case in which the rate of photosynthesis was higher with intermittent light than with continuous light. At best, plants exposed to short pulses do as well as those grown in continuous light."

Moreover, Sager is convinced that even past studies do not support the contention that photosynthesis is increased with intermittent light. Using new evaluation methods, Sager and Walter Giger Jr., a colleague at the U.S. Department of Agriculture, re-analyzed data from 14 studies conducted from 1905 to the present. They found no evidence that the rate of photosynthesis was greater with intermittent light.

There may be a "distribution effect," however, accounting for the increased growth of some plants under short-pulse light conditions. This effect is seen primarily in plants with large leaf areas, or canopies, like lettuce.

To help determine the extent and nature of the effect, sager has begun additional experiments using a new, sophisticated instrument — a spectroradiometer — to measure the light distribution and absorption of light on leaves while the plants are growing.

Despite the less-than-dramatic findings, the potential payoff of this work is still very high.

"If we find that pulsed-light systems really do increase plant growth," he says, "they could be used in commercial greenhouses to grow flowers and, more importantly, crops — either in place of, or as a supplement to, natural sunlight." Or plants could be grown in totally controlled environments, similar to Sager's chambers. The main beneficiaries of such developments would be the 500 million people worldwide who suffer from hunger and malnutrition.

In the future, controlled agricultural environments could be used to supply food in places where there is not enough space or natural light for normal agricultural practices.

Sager envisions such environments providing food to the crew of underwater submersibles engaged in deep ocean mineral mining or to workers in manufacturing plants located in orbiting space stations.

But Sager, the realist, prefers to stick to the present.

"Even if we eventually find an increase in growth with intermittent light," he says, "we would still have to determine whether the cost of growing crops under artificial light conditions would merit the expensive energy that would be needed."

For now, it truly is a matter of setting the record straight.

CLASS WELCOME presented at graduation ceremonies for Lincoln high school seniors Thursday evening at the Thief River Falls sports arena was given by Kathy Paulson, daughter of Bentley and Phyllis Paulson of Thief River Falls, who now resides with Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Melin of rural Red Lake Falls. Within the welcome, Paulson summarized memorable events throughout the school year and discussed possible future plans of students at the school.

Debra Hoversten

Former Local Woman Writes Four Books

Debra Hoversten, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Erwin Ferber of Thief River Falls and a Title I teacher in the Anoka-Hennepin school district, has written and illustrated four children's books for use at the kindergarten and first grade levels.

Debra presented her books, which correspond to vocabulary words introduced in the reading series used by the Anoka-Hennepin district, at a recent district-wide in-service day emphasizing children's literature. Several hundred of her books were distributed to classroom and Title I teachers for use with their students.

Due to the reported need for such materials in kindergarten through third grade, Debra will likely be employed by the district this summer to write more supplementary books for classroom use.

In addition to her school projects, Debra has done a considerable number of pen and ink drawings of wildlife, animals, pets and scenery which have been sold by referral and on consignment through a Twin Cities shop.

State Parks Staffed By Naturalists

Visitors to Minnesota state parks this summer will find that more than half are staffed with naturalists. Their goal is to make a trip to the park more enjoyable and to simulate visitors interest in natural resources.

Park naturalists offer a variety of programs explaining the unique historical and natural features of Minnesota, one of which is interpreting evidence of Indian culture prior to the white man's arrival.

Early villages of the Dakota Indians, built long before the first white person entered Minnesota, are interpreted at Mille Lacs Kathio state park. Schoolcraft's discovery of the source of the Mississippi river at Itasca state park and the historic grist mill at Minneopa state park are good examples of a fascinating history of early exploration and settlement.

Vast areas of the state were once covered with prairie grasses and flowers which served as food for great herds of buffalo and remnants of this prairie can be found at Blue Mounds state park and Buffalo river state park.

Wild fires and their effect on natural areas make for an interesting program at William O'Brien state park.

At Interstate state park are many unusual holes, called "kettles," in the rock formations.

The geology of Whitewater state park is interpreted by an excellent display of rocks found in that park.

Naturalists use a variety of ways to interpret parks including hikes, canoe trips, and guest speakers. Slides and movies are shown. Sometimes, demonstrations such as soap making are given. Naturalists offer programs at night, too, for those interested in activities such as group campfires and star gazing.

Programs are designed for people of all ages from preschoolers to senior citizens. They begin around June 1 and end the first week of September.

Some of the larger state parks have programs seven days a week while small parks, which do not have naturalists, often have "self-guiding" activities to help visitors learn more about these parks.

Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

The fifth annual Kidney Foundation auction sale was held on May fourth.

Once again this community shows that it cares about people. With the economy the way it is we expected to fall far short of last year's results. When the sale was over and all extra gifts were counted we exceeded last year's amount that we were able to send to the Kidney Foundation. This was only achieved by the hard work of a lot of people and the generosity of almost every business place in Thief River Falls and St. Hilaire and the white elephant gifts from the homes.

We would like to thank everyone who took part either by working, giving or buying and a special thank you to Andy, Dave, Dale and the Jaycee Women.

The most sincere thanks will come from those people who will benefit from the education and research that these funds will provide. It could easily be one of us.

Thank you,
W.G. Maves

Wenstrom Asks For Series Of Rural Meetings

Gene Wenstrom of Elbow Lake has called on Transportation Secretary Neil Goldschmidt to hold a series of town meetings in rural America to learn about rural transportation needs. Wenstrom is the DFL endorsed candidate for Seventh District congressman.

"The transportation needs of our rural communities and farmers are every bit as real as the needs of those in the big cities," he said.

"If the federal policy makers would go to rural Minnesota to learn first hand about the devastating impact to our way of life when our farmers cannot get their crops to market, or when our small communities become isolated because of abandoned rail lines, I'm sure they would be more sympathetic to the very real needs of rural Americans."

He said the best time to discuss rural transportation needs is before farmers need to bring their crops to market. "Stop-gap measures enacted in the midst of a transportation crisis — like the one we had last year — have never served us well. We need planning and action now by local citizens and the appropriate officials to avert any future marketing problems," Wenstrom said.

One of the first things that need to be done, Wenstrom said, is establishing a rural transportation administration, based on the experience of the rural electric administration. "The RTA could provide loans and guarantees and technical assistance to rural communities and shippers who wish to form cooperatives to revitalize rail branch lines that are abandoned," he said.

Citing figures that rural America with 41 per cent of the population receives only five per cent of the rural transit funds, Wenstrom said, "We're not getting our fair share. The best way to do something about that is to get people making the decisions out of their office buildings and into the country so they can see our needs first hand."

Museum At Goodridge Is Open To Public

Historical museum of the Goodridge area historical society was opened to the public for the first time May 23 when 50 students and their teacher, Dale Neuschwander, visited the museum. The students represented the 10th grade U.S. history class and seventh grade social studies class.

The museum will be open again from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on June 20 and again from June 23 through 28 when a dairy display will be featured. Public is invited to view articles on display and no admission is charged.

During the school tour May 23, tour guides included Mrs. Rosella Schlofer, rural school chairman, and Mrs. Lois Swanson, curator. Mrs. Schlofer explained state board tests that rural students were required to take in the seventh and eighth grades, then gave the students a geography and spelling test originally given as a state board examination in 1933.

The visitors looked at pictures of old settlers, psalm and catechism books used in the early 1900's in religious instruction and found pictures of their church buildings displayed on the bulletin boards.

Mrs. Swanson explained the kitchen area and talked about baking bread in the wood stove oven, making coffee, baking pan cakes on the black griddle, carrying in wood and carrying out ashes and keeping the kerosene lamp and lantern ready.

Old church, township and school records also drew interest of the students as well as articles used in homestead days, such as corn planter, scythe, diary production items, lumber from the first lumberyard and other items.

HOW'S YOUR HEALTH?

Modern drugs which a physician prescribes for his patients are a far cry from the herbs and potions of the tribal medicine man, advises the Minnesota medical association.

The physician's prescription is his written direction to the pharmacist for the preparation, compounding and administration of a medicine for a particular patient. Each prescription is the physician's individual request for the drugs to be used as part of the treatment of a particular patient for a specific illness or condition. It is the expression of the physician's judgement in regard to the needs of one patient, for a specific purpose, at a given time. There is a right way and wrong way to take medicine. It is vital that the exact dose of medicine as prescribed is taken at the proper time after conditions that insure against error. The Minnesota Medical Association lists the following directions for taking prescribed drugs:

+ Always store medicine in a locked cabinet away from the reach of children.

+ Keep only medicine currently in use.

+ Destroy old prescriptions —most drugs lose potency or may undergo chemistry changes with time.

+ Read the label under good lighting conditions before removing any of the contents from a bottle or container. Play it safe. Read the label a second time before taking any medicine.

+ Avoiding switching covers and labels on medicine containers. If you take more than one pill or capsule, make certain that one box or container is closed before going on to the next one.

+ Don't store medicine near the bed. Make it necessary to get up to take them. The practice of storing medications on a night stand near the bed is dangerous because an overdose or possibility of taking the wrong medication may occur while sleepy.

+ If it is necessary to take medications after going to bed, make certain that the light is on and that you are wearing your glasses — if you need them. This will help you to read and identify medications at a time when you may not be fully awake.

+ Whenever possible, keep medicine in original labeled containers. Properly identify pills in a pocket pill box. Do not place medications in containers identified with foods.

+ Avoid children's medications disguised as candy. Poisonings, or at least discomfort occur all too frequently when children take medications which look and taste like candy.

+ Do not take — or offer to someone — unused quantities of a prescription not originally prescribed specifically for the person taking them. This is a dangerous practice because a doctor's diagnosis may disclose that two persons who may be experiencing similar symptoms may have an unrelated illness. Frequently the physician will mark prescriptions directing the pharmacist to restrict refills to a specific number of times. This allows the physician to monitor and alter dosages which might otherwise be ineffective or in some instances harmful.

Headed for the ski slopes this winter? Regardless of whether you are a seasonal buff or a beginner on the bunny run there are certain basic precautions, if observed, that will help to avoid unnecessary injuries, advises the Minnesota Medical association.

Growing popularity of skiing as a winter sport has also brought with it an increase in the number of ski injuries. While most skiers will pursue this pleasureable sport without serious mishap, it has been estimated that at least three persons out of each one thousand who take to the slopes daily will sustain an injury. That figure may rise as high as 13 injuries per 1000 participants on days when skiing conditions are poor or less than ideal.

Physicians who study ski injuries or treat ski injury patients have found that most injuries involve inexperienced skiers who attempt to ski on runs too difficult for their ability. Loss of control is the single leading cause of accidents. Generally this means that the skier is going too fast to stop in an emergency. Poor physical condition, inexperience, faulty technique, fatigue, and excessive speed are factors which commonly contribute to loss of control. It has also been found that many ski accidents occur at the end of a long morning or afternoon on the slopes. This is often a time when the skier has experienced a strenuous workout and is in less than prime condition.

Many ski resorts conduct an on-going campaign to promote ski safety. Participants are regularly reminded by ski instructors and the ski patrol to observe all elements of ski safety at all times. In addition, this includes well marked ski trails and the closing of trails when they have become too icy or otherwise too dangerous.

Good physical conditioning, well maintained equipment, and learning how to ski under control, can go a long way toward preventing most ski accidents.

Importance of pre-season exercise to strengthen legs, particularly knees and ankles, cannot be over emphasized.

Carefully check ski equipment before hitting the trail. Make certain that skis include release bindings and safety straps.

If you are a beginner who doesn't know how to ski or if you want to improve your skills, learn to ski under the guidance of a qualified instructor. Always check the conditions of the slope before taking the leet up for the first time.

As a service to skiers, many radio and TV stations and newspapers regularly offer updated reports of changing ski conditions in the area. Telephone hotlines are also maintained by many ski resorts for the safety of skiers.

4 Students Participate In Teen Missions

night) her time will be spent in evangelistic work with the people in her work area. Her debriefing following her missionary work will also be spent in Greenfield, Ohio. She is a member of the Evangelical Covenant church.

Teen Missions-International is a non-profit, nondenominational organization, according to Wendy.

"Most students considering the idea of missionary work become interested when they hear about other students who have gone somewhere and have enjoyed it," she said.

Each student fills out an application for the missionary work, on which he or she lists four choices he would like to work.

"They usually try to place you in your first choice listed," she said.

Last year, Dwayne's brother, David, participated in missionary work in the Virgin Islands.

"That got me interested in doing missionary work," he said.

And the idea of being away from home for the summer does not bother him, he said, since his entire last summer was spent in California at a Bible camp.

"I thought about it (missionary work) for a while," he said. "Now I know it's real, and I'm actually leaving for Ireland."

Wendy heard about missionary work through her friends.

"My parents always told me I was 'too young'. Now I'm finally going."

Deanna claims that her three close friends and her grandmother influenced her decision to participate in the missionary work.

Last year was the first year Leah found out about Teen Missions, she said. And her choices were all filled by the time she decided to go. This year, she and her 35-member team will travel to Washington, D.C. — the last of her four choices, although she admits, "I'm glad I'm going there; I've never been there before."

Each team doing missionary work is required to raise his or her own support, Wendy said. And, according to the four students, most organizations are helpful in donating money so the students can travel to various sections of the world — helping others, while at the same time, learning about themselves and their own native country.

Dear friends,

A funeral with the body present gives identity and purpose to the service. A climate for mourning exists which allows a natural sharing of sorrow. Without the body, the expression of sympathy may be constrained and less natural for many people, and makes the acceptance of the reality of death more difficult.

Respectfully,

Belmont Funeral Home

Group Sells OSHA Items Available Free

Occupational safety and health administration (OSHA) is advising local business operators to be suspicious of any person or group which attempts to sell OSHA materials.

According to Ronald McCann, acting OSHA regional administrator for Region V, small business operators throughout the midwest are being approached by various groups which seek to sell them materials from OSHA which employers can get at no charge from the federal safety and health agency.

One group in particular, according to McCann, is said to be telling employers that they must pick up a C.O.D. package which contains information on OSHA. Package costs $29.50.

"That particular group calls itself the Occupational Safety and Health Club of America," McCann said. "OSHA is in no way connected with that club, and furthermore, any materials employers need are available free from OSHA."

McCann asked employers approached by the Occupational Safety and Health club of America to report those contacts as soon as possible to the nearest OSHA area office.

Employers may call OSHA toll free in Illinois by dialing 800-942-3174. Toll free number for Indiana employers is 800-382-9470; in Ohio, it's 800-582-1708; in Michigan 800-482-0745, and in Wisconsin 800-242-9680.

Outsiders Want In

Following editorial appeared recently in the Grand Rapids Herald-Review:

There is understandable concern throughout this country about the potential impact of the thousands of Cuban refugees risking their lives to reach Key West, Florida, in search of the freedom denied them in Castro's "Paradise."

An estimated 41,000 have made the sometimes perilous 110-mile crossing during the last three weeks, and 17,000 have been processed. Estimates are that the total may top 200,000 before the flow stops. Lives have already been lost at sea, and President Carter has announced that the makeshift flotilla must be replaced by a more orderly sealift or airlift.

With the U.S. economy in serious condition, many wonder how a nation which seems unable to handle its present problems can afford to absorb thousands of new residents. The Cubans will need housing, jobs and food, and so do thousands of American citizens.

Fidel Castro, who can never be accused to having the best interests of the United States at heart, is apparently trying to rid his country of its criminal element, too. The President said that refugees will be screened before allowing them to enter the U.S. so that known criminals will be excluded. That is a step which will require cooperation from Cuba, however, and that may not develop.

Interestingly enough, Castro labeled all those who joined the first rush to the United States as "bums, anti-social elements and trash, criminals." That brought an interesting editorial response from the Chicago Tribune:

The countries of the hemisphere will soon find, as Americans already know, that Cuban refugees make splendid citizens. Hundreds of thousands of the Castro regime's "bums, trash, worms," etc. have settled in the United States — mostly in Florida — over the last two decades. They have proved to be responsible and highly productive citizens in keeping with traditions of American immigration over the years. They repaid our hospitality by working hard, obeying the law, and adding to the country's overall prosperity while prospering themselves.

This is so not because Cubans per se aren't any more energetic or any more clever than other nationalities. It is because those whose spirit cannot be contained in the stultifying sameness of totalitarianism are the ones who choose to leave it. The real bums, worms, and trash are the listless slugs who either are content to exchange freedom for a free lunch or are too dim to recognize Mr. Castro's communism as the poverty-ridden failure it has proved itself to be.

So give us your bums, Fidel. Send them throughout the hemisphere and the world. They certainly make better exports than your revolution.

There are obvious problems involved in accepting the swarm of Cuban refugees. There are hundreds of thousands of people throughout the world who wish to come to the United States, but they can't accomplish that move with the relative ease of the Cubans. Some restrictions are surely necessary.

But what a glorious tribute it is to the United States and its often-maligned democratic way of life that so many people will risk their lives to come here. Many countries must fight to keep citizens within their borders. People struggle to get into the United States, not out of it.

Truth With Tact

Letters of recommendation are given to employees whose services with the company have been satisfactory and who deserve praise for such services. However, some employees are less than adequate in performance and still request letters of recommendation.

Executives have often encountered this problem and have been puzzled what to write. The truth would be brutal; a falsehood would be unethical to their fellow executives. Here, then, are some phrases which may be of some help:

—After three weeks with us, John Marshall left. We were satisfied.

—For one month Miss Ross was our office secretary. She implies originality in her shorthand and promises to speed her typing.

—Mr. Hutchins saved our budget considerably since the tools he used were left intact.

—Mr. Marris was most conscientious in his job with figures. The girls at the office were his witnesses.

—Although Miss Swain was with us a short time, her originality in filing will last with us for a long time.

since it is taking us longer to acquire a more thorough knowledge of where the invoices are.

—Upon hiring Mr. Wagner as personnel manager, he promised me all employees would go out of their way to improve themselves. His prediction came true: they are out on strike.

A Soviet Victory

Following editorial is from the Morris Sun:

The Soviet Union, which has already achieved military success in Afghanistan, appears to be on the verge of accomplishing a diplomatic triumph as well.

Deploying over one hundred thousand well-trained, well-equipped troops and resorting to such extreme measures as the use of poison gas, the Russians crushed Afghan rebel forces attempting to resist the Soviet invation. While the rebels continue to dominate some remote areas of the country, the Russians have established complete control of all major cities, highways, and airfields.

Now the Russians are hoping to consolidate their gains with a series of diplomatic overtures timed to coincide with the Islamic conference which opened Saturday in Pakistan. Obviously acting on instructions from the Soviets, Barbrak Karmal's puppet regime, installed by the U.S.S.R. last December, has called for talks on ending the Soviet occupation.

The Islamic League, meeting in emergency session, condemned the Soviet military move shortly after the invasion began. However, recent reports indicate that the current conference assembly might choose to recognize the Karmal government, effectively accepting the Soviet presence. Acquiescence by the Islamic nations of Southwest Asia, who are most immediately and directly threatened by Soviet aggression, would undermine all Free World protests against the invasion.

The unsuccessful American rescue effort in Iran appears to be the biggest factor in the Islamic reappraisal. Strange as it seems to Americans, many Islamic nations feel threatened by the U.S. attempt to free the hostages. On the other side of the coin, the rescue mission raised doubts about America's ability to act as a stabilizing force in the Middle East, while the Soviet operations in Afghanistan demonstrated Russian readiness, and willingness, to pursue military objectives. Islamic countries may feel compelled to come to terms with the Soviets, regarded as likely victors in any confrontation.

Those who contended that Afghanistan would be "Russia's Vietnam" have been proved wrong. Launching a no-holds-barred attack, the Russians won a quick, decisive victory with real rewards. The Soviet conquest of Afghanistan means that Russia can establish bases only a short distance from the Persian Golf oil-exporting region.

While the United States has loudly protested the Russian invasion, there has been no concerted effort to support the Afghan rebels who desperately needed modern weapons in order to resist the Soviet military action. The rebels have been remarkably successful considering that they have been fighting tanks, planes, and helicopters with World War I-vintage rifles. The Afghanistan conflict certainly points up the folly of dismantling the CIA to the point where it is no longer possible to provide arms in a covert operation.

As the Soviet Union attempts to turn Islamic countries against the West, unity among Free World nations becomes an absolute necessity. Yet America's so-called allies have been remarkably complacent, only reluctantly issuing condemnations of the Soviet invasion. Clearly, it is time for our NATO allies and other Free World nations to accept a reasonable share of the defense burden. The United States should not be expected to singlehandedly contain Russian aggression.

Borrowed Nonsense:

Two men raced for the same taxi. After a short discussion, one returned to his wife and explained: "He needed it more than I did . . . he was late for his karate class!"

The professor was grilling his college class. "What can you tell me about nitrates?" he asked one bright looking chap. "Well," the youngster gulped, "they're a lot cheaper than day rates."

"When Daddy comes home," said little Betty as she put on her pajamas, "he'll tell us a story, won't he, Mama?"

"He surely will, dear." Mama replied. "And it better be good!"

THE VOICE of BUSINESS

by Richard L. Lesher, President
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

Are You A Right-Wing Extremist?

I don't mind admitting that I have always considered myself a reasonable fellow. Imagine then my shock upon learning recently that some of Washington's most trusted experts might consider my views extremely dangerous. I pass along this information not to bore you with my personal problems, but to suggest that you also analyze yourselves to root out any subversive tendencies which could threaten your communities, or worse, (and I shudder to even consider it) slow the growth of the federal government.

Let me assure you straight off that if you can answer yes to the following three questions you have nothing to worry about: First, while the population of the U.S. was increasing by just 10 per cent between 1967 and 1978, was it not perfectly reasonable for the cost of government to increase by 212 per cent? Second, were not Congress and the Administration acting in our best interests when they tried to "balance" next year's budget by passing up spending cuts in favor of the largest one-year tax increase in our history — nearly $100 billion? And finally, are not the experts who fashion and defend these policies right on the mark when they claim that, dollar for dollar, the government spends our money more effectively than we do?

Unless you honestly answered all three questions with a resounding "Yes Sir, Big Brother!", then I fear that you, like me, may be infected with that dreadful disease Washingtonians love to call — Right-Wing Extremism. Although the experts here don't seem to know or care too much about what causes this disease, they do talk a lot about its symptoms, pointing out that those afflicted suffer from extreme views on a whole variety of subjects.

They say some of us, for example, grow almost violently ill over those harmless little niceties enjoyed exclusively by most federal employees — salaries averaging 42 per cent higher than in the private sector, indexed pensions, and the ability to qualify for Social Security benefits without paying Social Security taxes.

They note that other right-wing extremists have become almost paranoid about cutting federal spending. Some members of this group — obviously the lunatic fringe — even endorse "The Meat-Ax Approach," a truly terrifying idea which might require blindly cutting the budget by as much as 5 per cent across the board!

However, the experts probably save their bitterest barbs for a relatively new, but highly dangerous group of extremists who call themselves Supply-Siders. These people actually believe individual behavior is influenced by incentives. Imagine that! Thus, they claim tax rate reductions could generate economic growth without inflation, because, if given the chance to keep more of their earnings, Americans would produce more goods and be able to save and invest more of their after-tax income.

The experts reject supply-side arguments, labeling them preposterous heresy. As the Congressional Budget Office (CBO), the official economic forecasting agency for the Congress, has tried so patiently, and so often, to explain, the best way to stimulate the economy and create new jobs is not through tax reduction, but more government spending. Indeed, although later denying it, the director of the CBO was recently reported to have complained that the supply-side critics who object to the agency's forecasts "are an extreme right-wing claque who should not be given an audience, lest it legitimize their views. . ."

So there you have it. Perhaps many of you have already been thinking: "Hey, wait a minute. I want to cut government spending, and reduce tax rates, and eliminate inequities favoring government employees, but that doesn't make me an extremist. I'm a sensible person!" Indeed you are, and you have lots of company.

Most national surveys show the majority of Americans now support your ideas. A Gallup survey just completed for the U.S. Chamber, for example, shows a majority of consumers believe that higher taxes actually worsen inflation. And less than a year ago, Time magazine devoted its cover story to a whole new generation of brilliant economists who belong to the supply-side school.

Well then if it is we who are in the mainstream, just who are the extremists? Why I do believe they might be some of those very people in Washington who call themselves moderates while labelling others as extremists. The people who, in less than four years, have given us: Such moderate spending — up 41 per cent; such moderate taxation — up 49 per cent, (The four-year increase will be nearly 75 per cent!); such moderate inflation — up from 5 per cent to 18 per cent, and, finally, such moderate prosperity — the average family has just suffered the sharpest decline in its purchasing power in the last 40 years.

Lake Agassiz Tournament Title Is Won By Gerrells

Speedy Mike Fruetel scored from second base on a sacrifice fly to deep left field by Kent Anderson in the bottom of the seventh inning Sunday to give Gerrels of Grand Forks a 9-8 victory over McDonald's-Dallmann of Thief River Falls in the championship game of the 28-team Lake Agassiz men's slow pitch softball tournament played in Thief River Falls.

It was a come-from-behind victory for the visitors, who spotted McDonald's-Dallmann a 3-0 head start in the top of the first and trailed 8-7 going into the bottom of the seventh when the losers' Greg Higdom snapped a 7-7 tie with a lead-off home run to start the top of the inning.

To reach the finals, Gerrels, after receiving one of four first round byes in the 32-team bracket format, beat Tony Dorn of Thief River Falls 13-0; handled Wagon Wheel of Middle River 12-2; and clobbered the defending Lake Agassiz tournament champion TRF Merchants 19-1 in the semifinals.

McDonald's-Dallmann also received a first round bye before beating the Irishman's Shanty of Grand Forks 13-7; eliminating Furuseth-Nelson of Thief River Falls 7-2; and picking up a semifinal victory over the American Legion Raiders of Thief River Falls 10-8.

The Raiders came back to out-score the Merchants 13-10 in the third place game.

Nordhagen Fits Niche In White Sox Offense

player of the month in May of 1974 and selected to the International league all-star team. Atlanta traded him to the St. Louis Cardinals in 1975 and the Cardinals sold him outright to the Philadelphia Phillies in 1976, the same year he came to Chicago.

"Playing is fun — when you play," Nordhagen said. "I have no preference for left-handed or right-handed pitching. The ball still has to come across the plate to be a strike. I think its a matter of playing every day and seeing the right-handers regularly."

Nordhagen said he can take extra hitting practice four or five times a week if he wants to by coming out early before games. Although batting practice pitchers throw nothing but fastballs, a hitter can get anything he feels he needs practice with by coming out early.

Just as he has no preference for left-handed or right-handed pitchers, he has no special preference for ball parks around the league. "Ours is the biggest," he said. "You really have to hit the ball to get it out of our park. "I like this park (Metropolitan Stadium). The background is good and I like the lights here. I can see the ball pretty good."

Nordhagen saw a Pete Redfern fastball pretty good as he led off the fifth inning with a line single over a leaping Roy Smalley at shortstop. The hit ignited a White Sox rally which brought them from a 3-0 deficit to within one run. Nordhagen went to second on a liner to left and to third on a ground single through the hole to left as the infield was drawn in to double play depth. He scored on a long sacrifice fly to right field.

His next trip to the plate with a man on first base he ripped a ground ball just inside the third base line. John Castino backhanded the smash with a circus stab, crossed the bag into foul territory and while falling backward toward the White Sox dugout, fired a one-hop throw to second to force the runner on a hotly-disputed call. Nordhagen rode home a couple of pitches later on Harold Baines' homer to right center which gave the Sox a 4-3 lead.

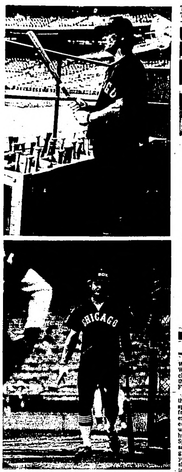
The Twins rallied in the late innings for a 6-4 victory as a pinch hitter lined a 3-2 pitch to center field with the bases loades to plate the winning runs. Nordhagen came up one more time in the game with runners on first and third but grounded into a short to second force to end the inning.

Nordhagen said he still likes to play the game, although the amount of time he has to be away from home on road trips is hard on the family. He has a daughter three years old and a second child is due in September. "We hope it will be a boy," he confided.

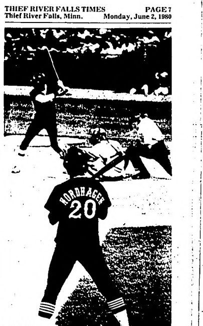
"Some of the players probably like to be away from home," he added. "I don't."

It was 20 minutes before the game time and White Sox players were million around the dugout. We thanked Wayne for his time. "Glad to do it," he said. "Say hello to Les and the folks back in Thief River."

We just did.



BATTING PRACTICE before the game is tune-up time for hitters. Wayne Nordhagen of the Chicago White Sox, who was born in Thief River Falls and still has a number of relatives in this area, is shown selecting a bat in the Chicago dugout and leaving the batting cage after taking his cuts.



WAITING HIS TURN at the plate against the Minnesota Twins, Wayne Nordhagen of the Chicago White Sox was batting in the clean-up spot as manager Tony LaRussa's designated hitter. At the plate is Thad Bosley. Nordhagen was born at Thief River Falls.

Justice can be a two edged sword. The National Rifle Association (NRA) has shown how crime increased without the availability of guns. They also have shown how crime decreases with the availability of guns.

It stands to reason if a crook knows the citizen is armed in the home — even with a sporting gun — that the citizen can be self protected and his family and possessions safe.

Solving reasons for crime — not against guns — seems to be the logical request to make of our lawmakers. Why not a bill to solve crime? Meanwhile, enforce present gun laws on the books, not write new ones. If the old laws do not work preventing crime and the crooks from being armed, what new laws can make that crook register his gun, or prevent him from obtaining a gun, or from using that gun once he obtains it? It is obvious that any crook wanting a gun, gets one.

And, a demented person doesn't need a gun. There is no law against insanity. It doesn't prevent snipers such as the one on the Texas campus, or like Kennedy's assassin. The demented person or crook can use anything at hand. Meaning razors, switch blades, hunting or jack-knives, bow and arrows, golf clubs, hockey sticks, hatchets (forty wacks), ax handles, stones (rock piles), ropes, poison, (LSD and kitchen cleansers), car, boat, water, sand or just his bare hands. The Boston strangler didn't use a gun. There's a law against murder, too.

Who do gun laws restrict? It restricts the law abiding sportsmen. The sportsmen and their gun clubs asked for gun laws (The NRA included) to protect their sport and the lawful use of firearms. Sportsmen know the danger of a gun. It commands respect. They respect the use and privilege. Sportsmen paid huge amounts of money for their weapons and licenses; for lands on which to hunt; the trips; and the ammo. They paid large sums for proper land conservation programs, to enable them to have the wisest use of the lands and protect certain species of birds and animals from unwise slaughter or extinction. They have inspired educational books to be written on the subject of hunting and firearms uses. Sportsmen have instituted gun safety programs promoting guidance programs for youngsters or the neophyte shooter; creating new sports in the use of firearms. He has set proud examples of sportsmanship and citizenship at home and on the hunting fields.

The American's own background is historically based on our forefathers demand to own and bear firearms — they died to preserve this right. Can we do less than to ask the right to keep ours? Please write to your congressman today . . . save your right to own your gun . . . and to use it wisely.

"Disappointing."

That was the assessment given by Thief River Falls coach Whitey Olson Sunday after returning home from the 1980 Minnesota Class AA state high school tennis tournament in Bloomington where he watched his No. 1 ranked Prowlers lose to eventual state champion Edina-West in opening round team play Wednesday, then saw singles entry Mitch Rustad and the doubles combination of Bill Jury and Paul Koppang fall in the individual portion of the tournament Friday and Saturday.

The loss to the Cougars hurt. Most observers knew the winner of the first round match pitting the Region 6AA and 8AA champions would likely end up with a state championship trophy. And the coaches, by their rankings that had Thief River Falls No. 1 all spring, felt the Prowlers were the favorites.

Things were well in hand for the Prowlers at the start as they dominated play at the outset against the Cougars, ranked No. 9 in the state going into post-season play. But Edina-West rallied, came out a winner and went on to beat Minneapolis Southwest and Anoka for the top prize. The Prowlers had out-classed both of those teams in invitational tournaments during the regular season.

"We had it in the bag and we let it slip away," sighed Olson. "We started well and we had it going our way. It was very disappointing."

Edina-West has the trophy and will be remembered as the 1980 Class AA state champion. But Olson isn't convinced the Cougars were the better team.

"I think we were the best team in the tournament. We were solid all the way through. Chris Coombs (the Cougars' No. 1 singles player and the eventual Class AA singles champion) is an excellent tennis player, but other than that, I think we were better the rest of the way," explained Olson, whose thoughts, while admittedly biased, were confirmed by many of the coaches who were on hand to watch the action at the 98th Street Tennis Club.

"It's very, very frustrating," continued Olson. "It's hard to understand. I haven't slept very well since then."

Olson doesn't think the loss casts a shadow on the Prowlers' season-long status as the No. 1 ranked team in the state tennis coaches association poll. They were on top in a preseason poll in February; they were No. 1 on a second release May 1; and they stayed No. 1 in a final listing May 15.

The veteran Thief River Falls coach admitted he had his doubts about the Prowlers' No. 1 status after the first ranking. "But after we won the Stillwater and Hibbing tournaments we felt we belonged there; we felt we should be No. 1." That was an April 25-26 weekend junket for the Prowlers that saw them win back-to-back eight-team tournament titles at Stillwater Friday and at Hibbing the very next day. And they did it in convincing style against the likes of Minneapolis Southwest, Virginia, Anoka and several other highly regarded teams.

The loss to Edina-West spoiled an otherwise perfect 1980 season for the Prowlers who won three dual meet decisions; took seven triangular titles; and won four multiple team tournaments during the regular season. They added North Half Region 8AA and Region 8AA tournament titles in post-season play to reach the state tournament for the third straight year and for the fourth time in six years.

"We had a good year," noted Olson. "It was just tarnished at the end."

Individually, Rustad, said Olson, "played super tennis Thursday," when he beat Mike McGraw of Hutchinson 6-1, 6-1 and eliminated Mel Chez of Hibbing 6-2, 2-6, 6-2. "He couldn't have played any better," added Olson.

But he lost twice on Friday as Bob Bateman of Edina-East took a close 6-4, 6-2 semifinal decision and Tony Ward of St. Thomas Academy won the third place match 6-4, 2-6, 6-3.

"Mitch could have won third place," acknowledged Olson, "but he just didn't have enough left."

Jury and Koppang made it past the first round in doubles by beating Bob Tessman and Ken Hiedelberg of Osseo 6-2, 6-0. But Tom Shustarich and Mark Maroste of Hibbing took a 7-5 first set tie-breaker and went on to a 7-6, 6-4 victory that eventually carried them to the Class AA doubles title.

"They (Jury and Koppang) played as well as they could have that particular day," said Olson, who admitted they might have had a "lingering hangover" from the Edina-West loss. "I don't know if they were mentally ready for it (the individual competition)," he said.

"We went in there with the best team and we came out of there with nothing," reflected Olson. "It's really hard to swallow."

AGGRESSIVE PLAY marked the second doubles match between Thief River Falls and Edina-West Wednesday in the opening round of the state Class AA high school tennis tournament in Bloomington. Mark Lundin follows his serve to the net as partner Bill Holmes watches. The Holmes and Lundin combo, which lost just one match all season, sidelined Tom Levin and Darryl Donahue. After losing the first set 6-0, the Edina-West pair gained a second set lead of 5-2 before Thief River Falls battled back to a 6-6 tie and won the tie-breaker 5-3. Second doubles and second singles were the only Prowler wins, however, as Edina-West claimed a 3-2 team win and went on to win the state Class AA title.

Prowlers' State Tournament Bid Stopped By Edina-West 3-2

It was a classic example of winning the battles but losing the war as Thief River Falls carried an unblemished record into the Minnesota Class AA high school tennis tournament in Bloomington Wednesday and lost a 3-2 heart-breaker to Edina-West in the first round. Matches were played at the 98th street tennis club.

Rated as the top team in Minnesota Class AA tennis all season, the Prowlers started fast in their match with the Cougars who eventually won the state championship over Anoka. Mitch Rustad whipped C. J. Holgaard 6-1 in the first set at first singles and Bill Holmes and Mark Lundin shut out Tom Levin and Darryl Donahue 6-0 at second doubles.

First doubles team of Tom Bjorkman and Mark Collins held a 4-3 lead over Peter Kaiser and Mark Schoening in the first set and Paul Koppang, playing in the third singles slot, was handling Dan Moran 5-1. Only in first singles — where an ailing Bill Jury was matched against the state's top rated singles player, Chris Coombs — did the Prowlers appear to be in trouble. Jury lost 6-1.

The tide turned quickly, however, as Edina-West picked up the momentum. Kaiser and Schoening won the next three games to take the first set from Bjorkman-Collins 6-4. A scrambling Moran returned everything Koppang was able to hit to his side of the court and rallied to a 7-5 first set win. Levin and Donahue rebounded to a second set lead of 5-2 over Holmes-Lundin at second doubles. Rustad quickly disposed of Holgaard 6-1 in the second set to wrap up a 6-1, 6-1 win.

Momentum swung briefly to the Prowlers again as Holmes and Lundin played aggressively to take a 6-5 lead in the second set. Edina-West won the 12th game of the set to force a tie-breaker which the Prowler duo won 5-3 to take the match 6-0, 7-6.

Bjorkman and Collins turned in some fine tennis to win the second set of their match 6-3 and keep Prowler hopes alive. Koppang struggled with the frustration of playing Moran, who stayed at the baseline tapping soft returns and tantalizing lobs. Sustained by cheers and applause by teammates and fans, Moran claimed a 6-4 second set win for the match. Only minutes later, Kaiser and Schoening assured the Edina-West victory with a 6-1 third set win at first doubles.

Edina-West advanced to the second round Thursday morning, easily handling Minneapolis Southwest 4-1 with Moran losing the only match, falling to Bob Stein 7-6, 1-6, 0-6. The Prowlers had also handled Southwest easily in a tournament during the season at Stillwater.

Moran proved to be the man of the hour Thursday afternoon, however, as he edged Jon Staton of Anoka 5-7, 6-2, 6-3 in the last match of the day to give Edina the 3-2 Class AA state championship. In three previous matches during the year, the Prowlers had also beaten Anoka handily. Also winning for Edina-West in that championship match were Coombs at first singles (6-3, 6-1) and the second doubles team of Levin and Donahue (2-6, 6-4, 6-3).

The opening round loss was a disheartening one to coach Whitey Olson, the Prowlers and fans who have followed the team's highly successful season. Last year Thief River Falls was an opening round 3-2 loser to Virginia in a state tournament match scheduled for Bemidji but which was eventually played at Quadna Mountain indoor courts at Hill City due to bad weather. Virginia was runner-up to state champion Edina-East last year.

In other first round Class AA team scores Wednesday it was Anoka beating Hutchinson 3-2, Henry Sibley edged Austin 3-2 and Minneapolis Southwest stopped Virginia 3-2.

Anoka got by Henry Sibley 3-2 in the other Thursday morning semifinal, with Henry Sibley beating Minneapolis Southwest 3-2 in the third place match.

In Class A team play Wednesday it was St. Paul Academy beating Rochester Lourdes 5-0, Blue Earth blanked Granite Falls 5-0, Blake eliminated Roseau 4-1 and Wadena got by Gilbert 3-2.

Blue Earth shut out St. Paul Academy 5-0 and Blake drilled Wadena 5-0 in Thursday's semifinals, with Blue Earth winning the Class A title later that same day by beating Blake 3-2. St. Paul Academy took Wadena 4-1 in the third place match.

Dave Lee Pitches Two-Hit Shutout

Dave Lee pitched a two-hit shutout Wednesday to lead Hardees past IWA 10-0 in Thief River Falls men's slow pitch softball.

And while Hardees was winning, previously unbeaten First Federal dropped a 14-6 decision to First Northwestern Insurance Agency and Schumacher's Tireland lost its first game, an 8-7 squeeker to Thorp-KKAQ, to create a three-way first place tie in the National League West standings.

Great Northwest Agency moved atop the National League East standings with a 22-12 six-inning win over E. T. Bees. The winners surrendered nine runs in the top of the first inning, but went on to turn three double plays and had a home run from Ken Kesterke.

A Tuesday clash will feature Great Northwest Agency and Schumacher's Tireland. The two 4-1 division leaders will meet at 6:20 p.m. on Field 2.

In other games Wednesday during a trimmed-down late week schedule, Sound Level-Holthusen out-scored the TRF Aggies 21-20, Consumer's Co-op doubled Wilson Brothers 6-3, Dallmann Athletic drilled Lon's 25-1 and The Club edged Sparby-Johnson 11-10.

In a single make-up game played Friday, Tony Dorn had a surprisingly easy time of it in an 11-1 rout of the previously unbeaten TRF Merchants.

Camping Fee Is Raised At State Parks

Camping fees at Minnesota state parks were increased as of May 12, the Department of Natural Resources announced.

Rising costs of campsite maintenance during the past several years is given as the reason for the increase. State park camping fees have not changed since 1977.

Charge for a motor vehicle entrance permit to the parks will not be increased this year, said DNR parks director Don Davison.

Fees for semi-modern campsites are being raised from $4 to $5, rustic campsites from $3 to $4, and primitive campsites from $2 to $3.

Class AA Singles . . .

Mitch Rustad Places Fourth

Lincoln high school senior Mitch Rustad was a fourth place finisher in singles Saturday in the individual portion of the 1980 Minnesota Class AA state high school tennis tournament played in Bloomington.

Senior Bill Jury and junior Paul Koppang were eliminated in second round doubles play Friday in the event that followed the No. 1 ranked-Prowlers' 3-2 opening round loss to eventual champion Edina-West in team play Wednesday.

Rustad was impressive in winning twice Friday. He handled Mike McGraw of Hutchinson 6-1, 6-1 in the first round and knocked off Mel Chez of Hibbing 6-2, 2-6, 6-2 in the quarterfinals.

Bob Bateman of Edina-East, ranked No. 3 in the state coaches association poll, got by the No. 5-ranked Rustad 6-4, 6-2 in the Friday semifinals, with Tony Ward of St. Thomas Academy beating the weary Rustad 6-4, 2-6, 6-3 in the third place match.

Chris Coombs of Edina-West, ranked No. 1 throughout the season, proved he was the best tennis player in the state with a 6-2, 6-2 Class AA singles championship match win over Bateman.

Jury and Koppang, season-long singles players for the Prowlers who were teammed for post-season doubles competition, opened Friday with an easy victory over Bob Tessman and Ken Hiedelberg of Osseo 6-2, 6-0.

But eventual champions Tom Shustarich and Mark Maroste of Hibbing eliminated the Thief River Falls pair in the quarterfinals 7-6, 6-4, winning a 7-5 tie breaker in that tight first set.

Shustarich and Maroste beat Rich LaCher and Doug Elsnas of Burnsville for the Class AA doubles title Saturday 6-3, 6-0.

Gregg Anderson of Blue Earth was the Class A singles champion, beating Raul Madrid of Minneapolis Marshall-U 6-2, 6-7, 6-0 in the finals.

Jeff Stueven and Brad Sorenson of Pipestone defeated Mark Warrington and Ryan Knee of Blue Earth in the Class A doubles finals 7-6, 6-4.

Andy Odegaard of Roseau was a fourth place finisher in the Class A singles competition. He beat Todd Foster of Sauk Center 6-4, 2-6, 6-2 and handled Erik Weiss of Rochester Lourdes 6-1, 6-1.

But Anderson beat Odegaard in the semifinals 6-3, 6-3 and Chris Grabrian of Wadena got by the Roseau senior in the third place match 7-5, 6-1.

Ehrenstrom Is Selected MVP For LHS Girls

Junior Stacy Ehrenstrom was selected as the most valuable player award winner on the 1980 Lincoln high school girls track team, it was announced by Tom Schafer, the Prowlers' coach.

Ehrenstrom and sophomore Robyn Dallmann were named co-captains of the 1981 Thief River Falls squad, succeeding graduating seniors Patty Langlie, Karla Nelson and Connie Hedlund, who was injured and missed the entire spring season.

Langlie was named the team's hardest worker; sophomore Barb Otteson was selected as the most improved squad member; and freshman Sheila Bailey was elected rookie of the year.

Ehrenstrom, who competed in the shot put and discus competition, was the Prowlers' leading scorer with 99 points in 11 meets.

AN EASY WINNER in his match at second singles in the opening round of the Minnesota Class AA high school tennis tournament Wednesday, Mitch Rustad of Thief River Falls defeated C. J. Holgaard 6-1, 6-1. The win was wasted, however, as Edina-West shaded the top-rated Prowlers 3-2.

AN AWESOME OPPONENT was faced by Bill Jury of the Prowlers (above) when he met Chris Coombs of Edina-West in the state tennis tournament Wednesday. Coombs, rated No. 1 in the state Class AA high school ranks, took a 6-1, 6-2 victory from Jury who has been plagued with back problems all season. Edina-West won the match from the Prowlers 3-2 and went on to beat Minneapolis Southwest 4-1 and Anoka 3-2 for the state championship.

Legion Sweeps Grand Forks 4-1, 2-1 In Season Opener

Pitchers Jeff Ulrich and Wayne Huseth pitched 12 innings of shutout ball; did not give up an earned run over the full 14 innings; and struck out 30 batters as Thief River Falls opened its 1980 American Legion baseball season with a doubleheader sweep over Grand Forks Friday, beating the visitors 4-1 in the first game and pulling out a dramatic 2-1 come-from-behind victory in the nightcap.

It was an impressive debut for Thief River Falls' new coaching triumvirate of Nick Drees, Harley Drees and Howard Dalager. Thief River Falls played nearly flawless defense; came through with key plays in the clutch both offensively and defensively; and, of course, benefited from the pitching of the right-hander Ulrich and the left-hander Huseth.

But neither win was easy. Ulrich scattered five hits in the opener, but walked nine batters. He got himself out of continuous trouble, however, with his fast ball as he struck out 13 batters. Grand Forks left 14 runners on base in the first game, leaving the bases loaded on three occasions. Grand Forks didn't score until Ulrich gave up a two-out, full-count bases-loaded walk in the top of the seventh.

Huseth finished with even more impressive statistics in the nightcap as he struck out 17 batters and gave up just two hits. Only run off him was scored by lead-off batter Bob Rynstad in the very first inning on a walk and an error.

But it wasn't easy for Huseth, either, who had to wait out a 60-minute delay when the light towers behind home plate ceased to function in the bottom of the fourth inning. Grand Forks led 1-0 at the time, but the required 4½ innings weren't completed, so the teams waited for an hour in the dark until electricity was restored and the game resumed — at 10:15 p.m.

Thief River Falls will begin its Northwest League schedule Tuesday with a 7 p.m. game at Roseau. Bagley will be here Thursday for a 6 p.m. doubleheader.

Grand Forks had the chances, lots of them, but didn't capitalize while Thief River Falls made good on its opportunities for a 4-1 first game win.

The visitors showing the effects of opening summer American Legion baseball without the benefit of springtime high school ball, put runners on base every inning except for the second, but did not score until the seventh. Thief River Falls, meanwhile, scored every inning they put runners on base — in the third, fourth and sixth.

In the third, Jeff Cwikla, one of three Middle River ball players in Thief River Falls uniform Friday, drew a full count walk, went to second on a passed ball and moved to third on Tom Drury's soft opposite field single to left. What should have been an inning-ending pitcher-to-second-to-first double play was broken up by Drury's slide into second that took out shortstop Bob Rynstad and caused him to throw the ball into the Grand Forks dugout for a run.

Mark Harder singled to center field in the fourth, went to second on a wild pitch and scored when Jeff Ulrich lined a shot inside the bag at third.

Thief River Falls doubled its margin in the sixth to 4-0 as Harder walked and Ulrich singled to left, with both runners getting an extra base on the play on an outfield error. Harder scored on a wild pitch and Ulrich trotted home when Steve Bengston, another Middle River product, dropped a pop fly single into right field.

The bases-loaded walk issued to Grand Forks' Randy Torgerson made it 4-1 in the top of the seventh, but Ulrich got out of the jam — as he did the entire game — with a strike-out.

Thief River Falls came out a doubleheader winner by scoring two runs on a two-out, bases-loaded outfield error in the bottom of the sixth inning that produced a 2-1 second game victory.

Grand Forks led 1-0 from the very start when Bob Rynstad, the game's lead-off batter, walked in the top of the first. He stole second, went to third on a wild pitch and scored on an error at shortstop.

But Thief River Falls struck in the sixth when Rob Blankenfeld drew a one-out walk, Scott McKeever singled to center and Jeff Ulrich walked with two outs. Mark Schmitke then lifted a fly ball to center field that Grand Forks' Randy Torgerson came in on, caught, then dropped as pinch runner Tom Drury and McKeever raced home. Ulrich tried to score on the play, too, when the throw got away from the Grand Forks infielders, but he was cut down at the late. No matter; it was 2-1 Thief River Falls.

That wasn't the end of it, however. Huseth got himself into hot water in the top of the seventh when he walked pinch hitter Mike Rux to lead off the inning. With one out Rynstad also walked, and both runners moved up a base on a wild pitch. Huseth struck out Greg Ladoucer before throwing another wild pitch.

Rux tried to score from third on the pitch, but the ball didn't carry far in the short Thief River Falls backstop area and catcher Dave Kays chased it down, threw to Huseth covering the plate and he put the game-ending tag on the runner.

GRAND FORKS PITCHER Mike Rux fielded a high throw from catcher Jeff James as Thief River Falls base runner Mark Harder completed a slide across the plate to score on a wild pitch in the sixth inning of Friday's season-opening American Legion baseball game played on the fairgrounds diamond here. Umpire Paul Williams watched the action. Thief River Falls came up with a doubleheader sweep by beating Grand Forks 4-1 and 2-1. Thief River Falls will be at Roseau for a Northwest League opener Tuesday and will host Bagley in a Thursday doubleheader.

After Only Three Playing Dates . . .

Women's Slow Pitch Has Just One Unbeaten Team

Just three playing dates have reduced the unbeaten ranks in the 16-team Thief River Falls women's slow pitch softball league to a single team — the Schmidt Stealers, a 22-6 winner over Hydra-Mac Wednesday behind triples by Rosie Naeseth, Val Naeseth and Ruth Ostby.

Wednesday's results left no less than six teams tied for the league's Division I lead with 2-1 records, including perennial power Pizza Hut, a 16-8 loser to Roseau Transport despite a Sally Collins home run.

Northern Employers Agency (NEA) shelled the American Legion 23-1 as Lyn Christensen hit a grand slam home run, Patti Genereux homered and Tracy Hicks tripled.

Diane Fisher hit two home runs, including a grand slam, to lead Dwight's Hartz to a 25-2 rout of Walseth Construction.

Lori Trochmann hit a grand slam home run, Gwen Nyland hit a three-run shot and Mary Jo Nabben also homered as the Health Hustlers handled The Barbers 22-7.

Elsewhere, the St. Hilaire Saints defeated the Mush-a-Rettes 15-6 and Credit Bureau picked up a forfeit win over Great Northwest Agency.

The Falcons will face Region 5A winner St. Cloud Cathedral Thursday at 12:30 p.m. in opening round Minnesota Class A state tournament play at Municipal Stadium in St. Cloud. Fertile-Beltrami reached the Class A state championship game last spring.

Four first round Class A tournament games will be played Thursday at St. Cloud beginning at 10 a.m. Semifinals and finals will be played Friday, with the semifinals starting at 10 a.m.; third place game at 5 p.m. and championship game at 7:30.

St. Cloud Apollo, an 11-2 winner over Moorhead last Tuesday in the Region 8AA championship game at Moorhead, will tackle Region 5AA champion Osseo Thursday at 3 p.m. in opening round Minnesota Class AA state tournament play at Midway Stadium in St. Paul.

SUFFOCATING HEAT on the courts of the 98th Street tennis club in Bloomington made water a prized commodity during the state Class AA tennis tournament Wednesday. Moran scrambled back from a 6-1 first set deficit to shade Koppang 7-5, 6-4.

Northland Pro Tops Schmidts

Northland Pro out-scored Schmidts 9-8 Wednesday and Coca-Cola roughed up Melvies 16-5 Friday in Thief River Falls fast pitch softball league play.

A Wednesday doubleheader nightcap featuring Action Realty and Schmidts was called in the bottom of the fourth inning when strong winds suddenly came up and scattered the fans and spectators. Action Realty lost a 2-1 lead because of the tornado-like weather.

Melvies 5

Melvies managed to hold a brief 2-0 second inning lead on a walk, a triple by Danny Peterson and an error, but Coca-Cola got to Doug Martell for eight runs on eight hits in the bottom of the inning en route to a 16-5 rout.

Paul Walker and Wane Gutterud hit back-to-back home runs in the second for the winners.

Northland Pro 9
Schmidts 8

Schmidts blew a 7-0 lead in a 9-8 Wednesday night loss to Northland Pro.

Single runs in the first, second, third and fifth, plus a three-run burst in the top of the fourth produced the 7-0 Schmidts lead.

Northland Pro, held to an infield single in the second inning by Jeff Hendrickson, finally got to the tiring Dean Lawrenz in the fifth.

Tim Erickson beat out an infield single, Joel Carlson laced a single to center and Glen Kalsnes reached base on an error that scored Erickson. Two more singles and a couple of Schmidts errors brought in three more runs before Rocky Ammerman lofted a 2-1 pitch over the center field fence for a two-run home run to complete the big inning.

Northland Pro added the tying and winning runs in the bottom of the sixth.

Norwegian Convention At MSU In June

Sigdalslag will meet with the Hallinglag at Moorhead state university, June 19-22, according to Donald Berglund, Sigdalslag president. Anyone who has ties with Sigdal or Hallingdal, Norway, is invited to participate in the three-day convention.

One hundred sixty Norwegian visitors — over 50 from Sigdal — are scheduled to arrive in Moorhead by charter plane June 18.

A varied program is planned for this annual meeting. Besides special music, folk dancing and group singing, there will be displays and demonstrations of Norwegian crafts, and scholarship winners will report on their Norwegian language camp experience.

Of special interest will be the young entertainers from Norway. Friday evening 40 young people from Trondheim will perform a program of music and folk dancing. Saturday evening the 70-piece Jessheim school band from the Oslo area will perform.

Among the distinguished visitors from Norway will be Andreas Morch, an authority on "family trees." He is the author of the impressive five-volume set of books listing genealogies of people of Sigdal, Eggedal and Krodsherad. Result is a renewed interest in the Norwegian-American bygdelags. These societies, founded early in this century, provided opportunities for the pioneer families who had come from the various districts of Norway to get together once a year. These get-togethers succeeded in perpetuating the cherished heritage found in the distinctive, isolated valleys of Norway.

For further information contact Donald Berglund, 905 Greenvale, Northfield, MN, 55057; phone 507-645-8177. For room reservations write E & D Svenkerud, 707 N. 9th St., Moorhead, MN, 56560, or phone 218-233-2090.

Senate Boosts SBA Authority To Make Loans

The Senate Wednesday adopted legislation increasing program levels under the Small Business administration, according to Senator Rudy Boschwitz.

Boschwitz, who supported the measure, said "the bill provides the SBA authority to guarantee up to $4 billion in loans to small business in 1981. As these are loans and not grants, they will not result in any direct federal outlay of funds."

"Included in the bill," Boschwitz said, "are new program levels for loans to handicapped businesses and for firms involved in solar and energy conservation development.

"Also benefiting from the measure," Boschwitz said, "will be economic opportunity loan programs and city and state sponsored development companies which operate in urban areas.

"We have set the program levels for the SBA in 1981 at $5 billion which includes guaranteed loans with private sources," Boschwitz said. "This does not mean that the federal government will spend that money, but in 80 per cent of the cases it will simply guarantee loans by private institutions to enterprising small businessmen.

"Small business," Boschwitz said, "is the mainstay of our economy as it employs a majority of our people and generates a significant portion of our gross national product. For that reason, it is important that the government support these enterprises through this type of legislation."

Bicyclists Must Obey Traffic Law, Says AAA

Bicyling requires as much attention to traffic rules as driving an automobile does, the Minnesota State Automobile association (AAA) says.

"Bicycling is fun but it can be dangerous if the rules of the road are ignored," Barbara Mittelstadt, Minnesota AAA traffic safety coordinator warned.

"In recent years bicycling has gained more popularity," Mittelstadt said, "but unfortunately some cyclists forget they must share the roadways with motorists."

For safer pedaling, Mittelstadt offers the following tips:

Obey all traffic signs and signals; drive on the right of the roadway in the same direction as traffic; be alert for traffic entering your lane from driveways or curbs; hand signal your moves ahead of time when you are turning or stopping; and give cars and pedestrians the right-of-way.

Walk your bike across busy intersections and streets; make sure you can be seen by motorists. Wear bright colored clothing; watch out for opening car doors; and if you do have to ride at night, be certain your bike is equipped with a head light, a red rear reflector and side reflectors. The edges of each pedal must be reflectorized.

With a few simple precautions, bicycling can be safe and bring hours of happy pedaling.

For a free bicycle owner's identification card, which includes rules for safe bicycling, write or call: Traffic Safety Dept., Minnesota AAA, 7 Travelers Trail, Burnsville, MN 55337 — 612-890-2500.

Council Votes To Proceed With Downtown Parking

Parking assessment district members and Thief River Falls city council members gathered last evening in the city auditorium for a meeting concerning the development of property for off-street parking in the city of Thief River Falls, resulting in a decision to proceed with the assessment district hearing process.

Previous hearing had been conducted May 20 in the council chambers of the city auditorium following which the majority of property owners and tenants present at the hearing voted in favor of the project.

Parking project is based on the assumption that the Sjoberg parking lot — Credit Union and the Bloomquist-Lind Motor properties would be acquired. Bloomquist-Lind Motor property would include everything on the corner of LaBree avenue and second but Hanson's flower shop, according to Jon Larson, chairman of the downtown parking assessment district committee.

Last evening's meeting involved additional relocation costs of approximately $95,000 for the project — costs that could not be figured into the project until it was determined what is being purchased, according to Jack Quinlivan, city planner.

Discussion also involved Northwestern hospital board feelings on the present proposed assessment to the hospital — an amount in excess of $51,000 — and the fact that the hospital has not been given credit for storage area footage as other businesses have, according to Duane Walton, hospital board member and member of the parking assessment district committee.

"We hope to come to a decision on this issue after this meeting and accept the additional relocation costs," Mayor Bob Carlson said.

"I feel we are working on a project that would benefit the community," Larson said. "This half-million dollar project proposed to the city three years ago presently involves the city's in-kind services toward the project in an amount of $114,000. City's in-kind services with the additional relocation costs would result in approximately $150,000."

In-kind services are based on comparable contract prices and include amounts for excavation and backfill, concrete removal and demolition.

"I'm willing to let the project go to the final assessment hearing to see what the businessmen have to say," alderman Bill Penning stated. "The project should be considered by the people who have to have parking in the city."

Parking assessment committee conducted a private caucus for approximately 25 minutes during which time the decision to have the city consider the project was stated by Larson.

Host Families Needed For 180 French Students

Host families are needed for 180 students from France who will arrive in Minneapolis August 1 for a four-week visit.

The exchange is sponsored by the North Atlantic cultural exchange league (NACEL), a non-profit organization which has the official approval of the French government and is supported by French teachers in the United States and teachers of English in France.

Participation in the program involves sharing your home with a young French person, age 15 to 18, from August 1 to August 29. French program provides all insurance coverage and the individual participant will bring his or her own spending money. Only real obligation of the host family, according to Liane Mattson of Thief River Falls, area coordinator of the project, is a willingness to share its normal family life and to treat the French students as a welcome member of the family.

The NACEL program offers opportunities for building international understanding, and provides the opportunity for the French student to experience the American lifestyle and develop greater skill in speaking English. It also provides the American family with an opportunity to learn about the French way of life.

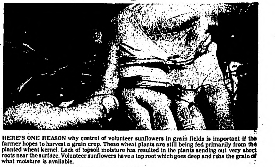
Families interested in participating in the program may write to Mrs. Liane Mattson, 521 N. Main, Thief River Falls, MN 56701 or phone 218-681-5564.

Viking Diamond Jubilee Needs Parade Entries

Viking diamond jubilee committee will meet Tuesday at 7 p.m. at the Viking recreation center to make further plans for the 75th anniversary event to be held June 27, 28 and 29.

An advertisement appears in this issue of the Times which contains information on application for participating in the talent contest and the jubilee parade. Entries are being sought from throughout the area, according to Virgil Hjelle, publicity chairman.

On Saturday afternoon of the jubilee events will include a ball game, horseshoe pitching and a flea market. Persons interested in these events may contact Hjelle.



HERE'S ONE REASON why control of volunteer sunflowers in grain fields is important if the farmer hopes to harvest a grain crop. These wheat plants are still being fed primarily from the planted wheat kernel. Lack of topsoil moisture has resulted in the plants sending out very short roots near the surface. Volunteer sunflowers have a tap root which goes deep and robs the grain of what moisture is available.

Dry Weather Hurts Farm Weed Control

VOLUNTEER SUNFLOWERS are a major problem faced by area farmers who are attempting to raise grain crops this year on last year's sunflower ground. With dry soil conditions in the area, the unwanted sunflowers are taking valuable moisture and nutrients from the grain. Virtually all of the broad leafed plants in the photo above are sunflowers. Spraying to kill sunflowers is most effective when the plants are in the two to four leaf stage.

Prolonged dry weather this spring which has retarded crop growth despite early planting has also created a dilemma for farmers in regard to chemical control of weeds and, where sunflowers were grown last season, the heavy growth of volunteer sunflower plants.

"We have had an unusually large number of telephone calls at the extension office with inquiries about weed control practices," stated Terry Courneya, Pennington county extension director. "The volume of calls indicates the high degree of uncertainty by farmers on what options they should exercise in the use of herbicides under crop stress conditions."

Without moisture adequate to fully activate pre-emergence herbicides while at peak strength, effective control of grassy weeds in wheat and barley has not been accomplished in many cases. Farmers are therefore faced with important decisions on post-emergence chemical applications, the county extension director said.

Courneya emphasized that choice of chemical and timing of applications are both very important. Serious infestations of wild oats and foxtail (pigeon grass) must be controlled at an early stage of growth, he said, because they have a rather narrow maturity range during which chemicals are effective. Herbicide application should be made according to label specification despite the stress condition caused by dry field conditions.

"An important exception to practices cleared for use according to label instructions," Courneya cautioned, "would be in the mixing of herbicides for wild oats and broadleaf weeds for combined application. Company representatives of certain materials normally cleared for tank mixing to control wild oats and broadleaf weeds are recommending that farmers not mix herbicides during the drought due to stress on grain plants."

There is considerably more flexibility in the case of broadleaf weeds than in the control of wild oats and pigeon grass, the county agent indicated. Herbicide effectiveness and crop tolerance will permit application of these materials until grain is in the early boot stage. While weed control is most effective when weeds are very young, they can be sprayed at later stages of growth with satisfactory results if the grain appears to be suffering significantly from lack of rain on certain fields.

Where heavy infestations of volunteer sunflowers are present, prompt control is important because of the serious moisture competition with grain crops that the unwanted sunflowers present.

"The sunflower is a strong competitor and can cause permanent set-back to the grain crop if not controlled while in the two to four-leaf stage," Courneya said. Although volunteer sunflowers are a recurring problem every year when grain follows a sunflower crop, the competition for moisture this year makes the situation critical.

"In summary," Courneya advised, "we recommend that farmers pay close attention to chemical selection and timing of application, that they avoid mixing wild oats and broadleaf herbicides, and that they recognize the stress on grain crops competing for vital moisture with weeds or volunteer sunflowers."

Dairy Princess Nears End Of Busy Reign

by Marvin Lundin
Times Editor

Shortly after receiving the crown of Northwest Dairy Princess at dairy day in Thief River Falls last June, Tracy Foldesi of Greenbush assured the sponsoring Northwest Dairy Improvement association that she wanted to be actively involved in dairy promotion.

As she prepares to relinquish her crown at the 31st annual dairy day here Tuesday and looks back on the year of her reign, she finds it may have been even more active than she had ever expected.

"It's been busy but it's been fun," admits the five foot five inch daughter of Emil and Marion Foldesi, her brown curls tumbling about her shoulders and her hazel eyes sparking. "People everywhere have been very nice to me and made me feel welcome, and I suppose anyone appreciates being treated as someone special."

Tracy combined her dairy promotion activities with a year at Golden Valley Lutheran college in Minneapolis where she was on the dean's list for all three quarters, earned placement on the national dean's list for all three quarters, earned placement on the national dean's list, was a first soprano soloist with the college choir and a wrestling cheerleader.

"We made a concert tour to Chicago and sang at a number of places in Wisconsin," she said. "We put on Handel's 'Messiah' around Christmas time and our final concert of the year was Brahms' 'Requiem'."

After her coronation she appeared on the "Noon Day" talk show on a Grand Forks television station, an appearance she described as a "new experience". She spent two days in Thief River Falls handing out cheese samples and friendly smiles at supermarkets, crowned the 4-H club style revue queen and princess at the Roseau county fair and distributed awards to winners of dairy competition at the Red River Valley winter shows at Crookston. She was a banquet guest of the Red River Valley Dairymen's association that evening.

Parade appearances were numerous, including one in Bemidji where she shared a float with a live calf, and the centennial parade in Crookston. Other parades were in Greenbush, Lake Bronson, Thief River Falls, Badger and Middle River.

"That brunch at Crookston after the centennial parade was really enjoyable!" she said. "There were crowns sparkling everywhere; the room was full of queens . . . Miss Minnesota, Miss Dominion of Canada, lots of community royalty."

Tracy was at the Roseau county fair for most of three days, participating in the horse shows, dairy show, pet show, clean farm contest and horse races. During the Thief River Falls Jaycee Aquacade she participated in a tea for Miss Thief River Falls candidates and visiting royalty and made an appearance at the pageant.

"I'll never forget the state fair," she said. "During the coronation of Princess Kay it was pouring down rain. We were under a roof and dry, but the poor people in the audience really got drenched."

Along with other Princess Kay candidates, Tracy had her likeness sculptured in butter. Arctic Enterprises provided each of the girls with a two-piece snowsuit which they used while posing for the sculptor in a refrigerated area and then were permitted to DAIRY PRODUCTS find an active place in the Emil Foldesi farm home east of Greenbush. Not only does the family of Northwest Dairy Princess Tracy Foldesi operate a dairy herd which produces a large volume of milk, family members use many dairy products in day to day living. LeAnn Lehnhoff Weds Charles E. Pyle, Jr.

Miss LeAnn L. Lehnhoff of this city and Charles E. Pyle, Jr. of rural Newfolden exchanged marriage vows on Saturday, May 17, at 1:30 p.m., at the Evangelical Free church in Newfolden.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy Lehnhoff of 146 Willow Road, Thief River Falls. Parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Pyle, Sr., rural Newfolden.

Rev. Earl Eveland officiated at the double ring ceremony. At the organ was Mrs. Steve Hanson. She played the traditional wedding marches for the processional and recessional. During the ceremony, Judy Pyle, sister of the groom, and Myles Hogberg, a friend of the groom, sang "Longer." Steve Hanson, a friend of the groom, sang "O Perfect Love," and Jill, Terry and Judy Pyle, sisters of the groom, sang "Twelfth of Never."

Forming the chancel setting were two white wrought iron, triple hurricane candelabra with blue tapers and large yellow bows. Two floral arrangements in the bride's chosen colors of pink, blue and white, completed the setting.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was attired in a white satin gown trimmed with Chantilly lace. The gown was styled with an empire bodice featuring a lace yoke edged with a matching lace ruffle. Lace formed the fitted cuffs on her full bishop sleeves and banded the seams on her gored skirt. To complement her gown, she wore a walking length Chantilly lace veil held by a cluster of white silk roses. She carried a cascade of silk flowers featuring gardenias, carnations and roses in pink, blue and white with blue ribbon streamers. The bride's gown, as well as the gowns worn by her attendants, were made by Pat Pyle, sister and sister-in-law of the bride and groom.

Dawn Lindeman, rural Thief River Falls, was the bride's personal attendant.

Sue Pyle, sister of the groom, was maid of honor. Other attendants were Pat Pyle and Helen Lehnhoff, sisters of the bride. They wore identical long-sleeved, floor-length gowns of a bright blue enhanced by a narrow shimmering stripe. The gowns were fashioned with yokes, edged with a self ruffle matching the ruffle at the neckline and around the sleeves. White pearl buttons accented the yokes. The maid of honor carried a nosegay of blue carnations and pink roses with blue satin ribbon streamers. The other attendants carried arm bouquets featuring two pink roses and a pink rose bud tied with blue ribbon.

The groom was attended by his brothers: Jeff Pyle of Crookston, as best man, Tim Pyle of this city, and Scott Pyle, Crookston, as groomsmen. Serving as ushers were Rick Waterworth, Newfolden, friend of the groom; Jim Glemboski, Springville, Pa., long-time friend of the groom; and Ben and Lewis Lehnhoff, brothers of the bride. The groom wore a vested camel-colored business suit with a blue silk rose boutonniere. His attendants wore business suits in tans and browns with blue silk rose boutonnieres. The ushers had pink and blue carnations pinned on their lapels.

The mother of the bride was attired in a light beige colored floor-length gown, featuring long sheer sleeves and a lace yoke edged with a deep ruffle. A deep ruffled flounce complemented the skirt. The groom's mother wore a light blue, sleeveless gown topped by a matching poncho embroidered with sequins. Their corresponding corsages were of pink roses and rosebuds accented with white lace ribbon.

Honor guests at the wedding were the groom's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore R. Metzger, Sr., of Quarryville, Pa.

Following the ceremony, the parents of the bride hosted a reception in the church parlors with the EFC Ladies Aid in charge of serving. Host and hostesses were Randy and Cheryl Nelson, brother-in-law and sister of the groom. Ron Hodge, a friend of the couple, presided at the guest book as Debbie Panek, Goodridge, a friend of the bride, served the punch.

Centering the serving table was a three-tiered Lady Windemere wedding cake, baked and decorated by Tammy Lindeman. The cake was decorated with filigree work, pink roses and white wedding bells. The top featured a white floral ornament with white doves holding a golden wedding band. The cake was cut and served by Palma Anderson, a friend of the couple. Pouring coffee were Mary Ann Hodge, friend of the couple, and Patty Genereux, a friend of the bride.

Waitresses were Cindy Olson and Barb Voth of Viking, friends of the bride. Ann Hodge, a friend of the couple, arranged the gifts.

The bride is a 1978 graduate of Lincoln high school and a 1979 graduate of the Thief River Falls AVTI. She is currently employed by Johnnie's Hamburger. The groom is a 1972 graduate of the Lackawanna Trail high school at Factoryville, Pa., and is a four-year veteran of the U.S. Navy. He is employed by the Thief River Falls Times in the advertising department.

The couple is at home in this city at 209½ North Main. Photo, LeMar Photography, Crookston

Picnic Monday Opens Kremer Primary Race

On Monday Jim Kremer of Thief River Falls officially kicked off his campaign for the state House of Representatives with a picnic attended by nearly 100 people from Red Lake, Marshall, Polk and Pennington counties. Kremer is opposing endorsed candidate LeRoy Stumpf in the DFL primary election.

In his address to the group, Kremer said that one of the central issues in the campaign is who should control the state government and who should choose candidates. "I believe the government should be controlled by the people and they should be the ones to decide who the DFL candidate should be," he said.

"Often times the legislature forgets about rural concerns or treats them as an afterthought. We need to have a strong representative in St. Paul, one who is not afraid to speak out for the people and who is responsive to the area's needs."

Mayor Bob Carlson of Thief River Falls spoke to the group saying that he "felt very comfortable" with Kremer and believed he was "the best person to represent the people of District 1B."

Jackie Schwietz, Kremer's campaign manager, said the turn out from all over the district "shows the depth of support Jim Kremer has" and encouraged any people of the district to call him with their issues, ideas and concerns.

Dairy Princess Nears End Of Active Reign

keep.

"I tried to attend every event where I was invited," Tracy says. "I had to miss one event in Halma because I had already arranged to be in Thief River the same day, and I couldn't make it to the Miss Middle River pageant, although I did get to the goose festival parade and events on Saturday."

Making public appearances was no problem for 18-year-old Tracy. She made many such appearances while in high school activities and in singing at weddings and other events. Music and athletics were her extra-curricular interests during high school, although she was a class officer, member of the student council and co-editor of the annual.

She played basketball for five years, serving as captain three years, being named to the all-conference team as a sophomore and most valuable player as a sophomore and senior. She played volleyball for three years and was a co-captain of that team, and as a member of the track team in grades seven through 10 she was named "most improved" in eighth and ninth grades.

As a senior she was voted most valuable in band and choir as well as basketball and was one of the top five honor students in scholastic average. She says she earned "about a dozen" medals in band and choir at state area music festivals.

The Foldesi family milks 40 head of Holstein cattle in a Grade B dairy operation five miles east of Greenbush off county road 4. The stanchion barn has a barn cleaner, manure pump, milker system and 500 gallon bulk tank. Milk is picked up every other day by Land O'Lakes bulk truck and hauled to Fosston for processing.

The farm has been in the Foldesi family since before the turn of the century. Emil was born there and his father, Mike Foldesi, lived there for many years. Emil's son Mark, 24, is married and farming with his father, living in a mobile home on the farm.

Tracy, the youngest of four children, has two married sisters. Mrs. Lee (Alanna) Anderson lives in Roseau and Mrs. Doug (Sharlane) Barber lives in Yakima, Wash.

During leisure hours Tracy likes to dance, listen to music and go to the beach. She also enjoys caring for nieces and nephews, and really doesn't mind most of the farm chores including tractor and truck driving, haying, washing cows prior to milking, cleaning milkers and bulk tank, feeding hay and cooking. She is a member of Blessed Sacrament Catholic church in Greenbush and will be working as a clerk this summer at Ace Hardware in Greenbush.

Relinquishing the Northwest Dairy Princess crown Tuesday will be done with mixed emotions. "I felt responsibility to dairy people in the role of princess," she said, "and there is some pressure that way. But I enjoy meeting people and everyone has been so nice that I sort of hate to see the year come to an end."

Northwest Minnesota dairymen and those who process and sell dairy products owe Tracy a vote of thanks for her efforts on their behalf.

Pamphlet Gives Tips To Prevent Eye Injuries

Next to cataract, eye injury is the most common cause of visual impairment in the United States today, warns the National Society to Prevent Blindness.

Virginia S. Boyce, executive director of the 72-year-old voluntary sight-saving organization, says that almost a million Americans are permanent casualties of accidental eye damage, most of it occurring in ordinary everyday activities. Forty-five per cent of vision-impairing eye injuries occur around the home.

"Accidents will happen," Boyce said. "These often can't be prevented, but 90 per cent of the resulting injuries can be with proper eye protection and safety precautions."

To help people defend themselves against eye injuries, the Society has just issued a new pamphlet, "Eye Safety Is No Accident," with sight-saving tips on common eye hazards and what to do about them.

Ammonia, lye and other harsh chemicals found in household cleaners and garden sprays are particularly damaging to the eye, resulting in injury, burns — even blindness — the pamphlet points out. Read package labels and instructions thoroughly before using such products. Many give specific directions, and ignoring them can result in injuries. Use special caution with pressurized spray cans. Be sure the spray nozzle is directed away from you. Spray cans make tempting toys, so be sure to keep them well out of reach of children.

Wood slivers, rocks, metal pieces and other particles thrown off by hand tools and power equipment like drills, welding equipment and chain saws also cause serious eye damage. Lawnmowers, frequently a cause of eye injuries, can hurl a stone at high speed into your eye or that of some unsuspecting bystander. Keep young children away when you're mowing. And for safety's sake, be sure that all tools and machinery are kept in good repair.

Best protection against any eye hazard is safety eyewear. Inexpensive goggles — one for use against chemicals and other liquids and one for protection from impacts — fit over regular glasses and can usually be found in hardware stores or through the Yellow Pages under Safety Equipment or a similar heading.

Cuban Refugees Displace Vets At VA Hospital

A White House directive which authorizes Cuban refugees to occupy beds at the Veterans administration (VA) medical center in Tampa, FL, while sick and disabled ex-GI's are being denied treatment, has drawn outraged criticism from the 670,000-member Disabled American veterans (DAV).

The Carter administration has ordered the Tampa VA medical center to reserve 40 hospital beds for ailing Cuban refugees. The VA medical center in Grainesville, FL., has been told to reserve 50 medical and surgical beds for this purpose. Monday, while 13 Cuban refugees were occupying beds on the Tampa VA facility's psychiatric wards, two American veterans applying for psychiatric care were denied admission due to lack of beds in the hospital's psychiatric care section.

"The Tampa VA hospital has been hit particularly hard by Carter administration budget policies in recent years," the DAV said. "Underfunding and understaffing at the hospital were causing denial of treatment to many eligible Tampa veterans long before the massive influx of Cuban refugees into Florida began.

"I'm astonished by the crass insensitivity of giving priority medical care in VA facilities to undocumented aliens at a time when men and women who fought in our nation's wars are being turned away at the door," said DAV national commander Paul L. Thompson.

He noted that the situation could only become worse as more Cubans enter VA hospitals, filling the beds alloted to them. The DAV has learned that Carter administration officials have contacted other VA medical centers in Florida, searching for hospital beds in which to place Cuban refugees requiring medical attention.

Private health care sector currently has 130,000 empty hospital beds, and DAV leaders are asking why "the Carter administration is not using these beds — rather than the already over-burdened VA system — to treat the Cubans."

City Council Proceeds With Parking Plan

It was resolved following the introduction of a resolution by alderman Ambrose Wysoski that the city would pay 50 per cent of the additional relocation costs and that the city engineer would prepare an assessment roll for submission to council which would include the $47,500 for additional special assessments for the possible additional relocation costs.

Roll call vote finalized the decision resulting in four "yes" votes and two "no" votes from aldermen Milan Borsheim and Dr. Don Goodrich (aldermen Clayton Restad and J.J. Womack were absent from the meeting).

Further proceedings will now include a hearing for the benefit of property owners on the proposed assessments with the additional relocation costs, according to Robert Wurst, city attorney.

In other council action, it was resolved to proceed with a partial clean-up project of the old dump ground site owned by the city and located north of Thief River Falls, with Thygeson construction company with a figure not to exceed $9,500. Roll call vote resulted in a unanimous decision to proceed with the project.

Also, council members accepted the recommendation of the Pennington county safety council to install stop signs at the intersections of Arnold, Duluth and Knight avenues, making 13th street a thoroughfare.

Next regular city council meeting is scheduled for June 9 rather than June 10 to allow city council members the opportunity to attend the League of Cities conference in Duluth June 11.

Energy Dep't. Drops Weekend Boat Ban Plan

Department of energy has dropped its plans to ban weekend boating, according to Congressman Arlan Stangeland.

"My opposition to this plan to ban weekend boating has been intense, and apparently my efforts to have this recommendation eliminated have been successful.

"I received word from the department of energy that opposition to the proposed weekend ban was nationwide and following several weeks of testimony and many letters, the department agreed with my recommendation to withdraw this proposal," Stangeland said.

The department of energy had included the recommendation to ban weekend recreational boating in the Standby Energy Conservation plan as provided for by the Emergency Conservation Act of 1979. The intent was to conserve energy, but investigations established that savings would not be significant. The recreation industry, for example, uses one-half of one per cent of all petroleum used in the United States and only one per cent of all motor fuels.

"My main complaint with this proposed conservation regulation was that it only affected the boating industry. Conserving energy is a national problem and one segment of our society cannot be singled out to bear the burden.

"There are 560,000 registered boats and 750 firms directly involved in the marine industry in Minnesota which represents revenues to the state of $450 million. A ban on weekend boating would have had a severe impact on revenues, jobs and the entire Minnesota tourism industry. This is something we cannot afford to lose," concluded Stangeland.

In the letter to Congressman Stangeland informing him of the DOE decision to withdraw the proposed plan, DOE also stated that any further proposals regarding possible emergency recreational restrictions will be published in the Federal Register for public comment.

Voters Can Change Process For Districts

"When Minnesota voters go to the polls in November they will have an opportunity to remove the process of drawing legislative and congressional district lines from the Minnesota legislature — and the political arena," states Gov. Al Quie.

"Such a change should greatly improve the process of reapportionment. In our positical system reapportionment means drawing legislative and congressional boundaries to reflect equal size populations — to assure one person one vote — after each census.

"Unfortunately, when state legislatures attempt to reapportion themselves — no matter what state — the political party in power frequently draws district boundaries to benefit itself. This is known as gerrymandering. The questionable practice of gerrymandering means district boundaries are manipulated to help one political party or candidate," the governor said.

Minnesota's own experience with the legislature reapportioning itself illustrates that politics and reapportionment do not mix well together. For example, the 1970 reapportionment plan was volleyed back and forth between the legislature, the governor and the courts until finally the federal court system had to step in to settle the issue.

A constitutional amendment creating a bipartisan reapportionment commission to avoid such problems from recurring in Minnesota after the 1980 census was one of the governor's top priorities last session. Now that the legislature has approved this ballot question, voters will be able to decide whether the authority of establishing a reapportionment plan should be given to a bipartisan commission. Currently Minnesota's constitution stipulates that responsibility is a legislative duty.

Essentially, this commission should take the politics out of reapportionment, Gov. Quie said.

The proposed reapportionment commission will have nine members. Four members will be legislators — two from the Senate and two from the House — with equal representation from both political parties. These four legislators will appoint — by unanimous agreement — the five other commission members.

These five members must be impartial. This means that they cannot:

(1) Hold, or within the last two years have held, an elected or appointed office in the state or federal government;

(2) Be a candidate for any elective state or federal office;

(3) Be, or within the last two years have been, an officer of a political party, except as a precinct officer or officer of a campaign committee for a candidate for state or federal office;

(4) Be an employee of the Legislature or Congress;

(5) Be a member of the immediate family of a legislator or a member of Congress; and

(6) Be, or have been, a lobbyist within the last two years.

Further, to assure statewide representative, no more than five members of the commission, including legislators, may be residents of the metropolitan area.

If approved by voters, the commission must begin the task of reapportionment by April of 1981 and complete a plan by Sept. 1, 1981. If there are no legal objections filed with the Minnesota supreme court, the plan will go into effect immediately after it is adopted and will be used in the 1982 general election.

If the commission cannot reach agreement on a plan or if the supreme court finds the plan unconstitutional, the court will adopt a plan of its own.

"Clearly, this constitutional amendment is well-written," Gov. Quie said. "If effectively establishes a bipartisan group, outside the legislature, to handle this very sensitive, sometimes volatile matter. The result for all Minnesotans will be a fairer redistricting process minus the partisan squabbling that has preoccupied the legislature for months in the past."

MN. Receives Travel Award On Ad Campaign

Minnesota Division of Tourism was awarded a special Certification of Excellence by the Travel Industry Association of America (formerly DATO) for its 1979 fall advertising campaign.

The award was presented to Hank Todd, assistant commissioner of Economic Development and director of the Tourism Division at the 1980 TIAA convention in Cincinnati, Ohio. William Thurman, chairman of the 1980 National Travel Marketing Awards Committee and vice president and general manager of Busch Entertainment Corporation, presented the award.

Developed by Martin Williams Advertising, the $60,000 campaign featured a free color tour map and was promoted through newspapers, magazines and radio in the five state area. Public service announcements featuring area color conditions rounded out the six-week campaign. Within the first three weeks, 40,000 requests for maps were received at the Tourist Information Center in St. Paul. Phone calls increased 800 per cent over all, with 16,000 calls logged in September alone.

This infrequently given award represents the first time in recent years that Minnesota has been recognized for its marketing efforts. A similar campaign is planned by the Tourism Division for the fall of 1980.

National High School Activity Week Planned

September 28 to October 4, 1980, will mark the debut of the annual celebration of national high school activities week.

The event was created last July by unanimous vote of the membership of the national federation of state high school associations.

Primary purpose of the event is to encourage student participation in and communities support of high school athletic and activity programs. It is expected most schools will use the week to extol the fun, excitement and educational value of the programs that some schools will coordinate fund-raising programs during the week.

The national federation will provide assistance to its member state high school associations and to their member schools, whether the effort is promotion only or promotion and fund raising combined. Some of the federation's efforts will have support of commercial organizations, and details will be announced later in the spring.

The federation's executive committee recently appointed an ad hoc committee on activities week to help in the planning and implementation of activities week. The chairman is Dick Stickle (Idaho). Representing sections — I and II will be Dick Termeer (Ohio), representing sections III and IV Dave Harty (Iowa), representing V and VI Bonnie Northcutt (Texas), and representing VII and VIII Tom Byrnes (California).

John Klement, president of the nation interscholastic athletic administrators association, has also been named to the committee along with Dick Fawcett of the national federation staff, who will represent the interests of speech and music. Jack Roberts will serve as federation staff liaison.

Coast Guard Notes Rise In Boat Fatalities

U.S. Coast Guard reports the fatality rate for recreational boating accidents in the U.S. increased slightly last year after reaching an all-time low in 1978.

Coast Guard statistics show 9.7 boating fatalities for every 100,000 boats in 1979 compared with a fatality rate of 9.4 in 1978. Total fatalities last year reached 1,400, up 79 from the 1978 total.

Last year, 6,934 boats were involved in 5,368 accidents, according to reports filed with the Coast Guard. In 1978, 8,576 boats were involved in 6,529 reported mishaps. The Coast Guard attributes about one-half of the decline in boating accidents to a change in reporting criteria. Boating regulations previously required that reports be filed on all accidents involving $100 or more in damages. The amount was raised last year to $200.

Boating accidents in 1979 caused injuries to 2,463 persons and $16,681,500 in property damage. Total injuries were up at least 15 per cent from any previous year while property damage rose 35 per cent. Coast Guard officials again attribute the apparent increase in injuries to new reporting criteria. In 1979 all injuries requiring medical treatment beyond first-aid were required to be reported. Previously, the Coast Guard had to be notified if a person lost consciousness or received medical treatment, only if the person was disabled for more than 24 hours.

Property damage, while down overall in 1979, increased nearly threefold for accidents involving damage to property valued at $50,000 or more. There were 18 accidents of this magnitude in 1978 and 53 in 1979. Damage from these mishaps totaled $1.7 million in 1978, $5.2 million in 1979. This increase, together with the impact of inflation on boat values, may account for the large jump in total property damage last year. Fires and explosions caused 24 of these boating accidents in 1979, up from five in 1978.

Property Damage (millions$): 1975, 10.35; 1976, 12.00; 1977, 11.57; 1978, 12.30; 1979, 16.68.

Registered Boats (millions): 1975, 7.30; 1976, 7.67; 1977, 7.98; 1978, 8.03; 1979, 8.28.

Total Boats (millions): 1975, 11.80; 1976, 12.75; 1977, 13.60; 1978, 14.05; 1979, 14.50.

These and other statistics were published in Boating Statistics 1979 released May 1, 1980. Copies of this report are available by writing Commandant (G-BP), U.S. Coast Guard Headquarters, Washington, D.C. 20593.

Logging Camp Re-enacts Sky Pilot Service

"The Sky Pilot's in camp!" To the early lumberjacks who lived through the long, cold winter cutting timber in northern Minnesota, those words were indeed a treat. The lumberjack's "Sky Pilot" was a traveling minister who walked or rode a small sleigh from logging camp to logging camp bringing religious services to the "jacks" isolated in the camps.

He provided encouragement to those who needed help avoiding the saloons and blow outs in town at the end of the logging season. His visit also meant that he brought with him welcome news from the outside world, word from families and sweethearts, and often, a treasured newspaper. When he left, he carried with him letters and news for those at home.

The Sky Pilot usually arrived at a new camp on Sunday shortly before the dinner hour and spent the afternoon talking with the men, renewing old acquaintances and making new friends. After supper, the foreman would gather the men in the bunkhouse where the Sky Pilot had set up a rough altar out of a blanket covered barrel top and the service would begin.

There would be a sermon about the evils of drink and the waste of life found in many logging towns in the timber region. The sermon was generally followed by a number of old-time hymns accompanied by fiddle or accordion. With the end of the service, the foreman ordered lights out and the Sky Pilot rolled in for the evening with the other lumberjacks and was on his way again at first light — off to another logging camp.

This Sunday, June 8, visitors to the Grand Rapids Forest History Center's 1900 logging camp will have the unique opportunity to be part of just such a re-enacted service. An actual lumberjack's "Sky Pilot" will be visiting the Center's camp to provide an authentic logging camp service for the men of the camp and visitors. Service performed by William Sornberger of Proctor will take place twice during the day: at 1 p.m. and 3 p.m.

These services will be authentic in every detail due to the special history and ability of Sornberger. He is the son of the famous Sky Pilot, John Sornberger, a legendary minister who traveled from camp to camp after the turn-of-the-century. As a young boy, the younger Sornberger traveled with his father to the camps, talking to the "jacks" and listening to his father preach. His service, this Sunday, will be taken directly from his father's services and from his own experiences.

Visitors to the logging camp will be encouraged to sit with lumberjacks on the deacon's seat and participate in the service — singing the old hymns and asking questions of Sornberger about his father's life and his experiences in the woods. Forest History Center's logging camp is open to the public daily from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. There is no admission charge. For more information, please call 218-326-1390.

MBA Salutes Dairy Industry During June

Minnesota Bankers Association (MBA) has joined with the American Dairy Association in celebrating June Dairy month, a salute to the state's dairy industry.

MBA First Vice President Richard Gandrud said, "Last year state dairy farmers produced over a billion dollars in gross income which was spent for goods and services in our state. More important," he pointed out, "is that at least 70 per cent of their products are sold out-of-state. That is a real boost for the state economy."

Gandrud, also president of Pope County State Bank, Glenwood, said Minnesota's milk production is the fourth highest in the nation and should be recognized for the strength it gives the state.

"Dairying adds to the wealth and well-being of all who live in Minnesota," he said, "and the Minnesota Bankers Association member banks are pleased to join the American Dairy Association in supporting June Dairy month."

Many of the state's banks will be observing June Dairy month, Gandrud said, by presenting special lobby and window displays, serving dairy food samples and making other special efforts to salute one of Minnesota's most important industries.

MONEY SAVING IDEAS FOR A SUMMER VACATION

HOW TO GET MORE VACATION FOR LESS MONEY

A LOOK DOWN LIBERTY STREET—At the Yorktown Victory Center, on Virginia's historic Peninsula, visitors can stroll down "Liberty Street," a multi-media "sound and light" display that lets them experience the American Revolution first-hand.

If you're making plans for your family's vacation this summer, you're already painfully aware of what inflation is doing to your vacation budget. What you're looking for is a way to get more vacation for less money.

Probably the best way to stretch your vacation dollar is to plan ahead. Decide how much you can spend, and design an itinerary within your means. Once you have made up your schedule, stick to it. Try to curb your natural instinct toward impulse buying.

Instead of trying to take in several stopovers on one trip, you might look for a single destination that offers a large number of things to see and do within a compact area. Look for the good quality but less expensive accommodations that can usually be found on the fringes of popular resort areas.

Take the Virginia Peninsula, for example. Here's an area that is situated halfway between the resort areas of Virginia Beach and Williamsburg, no more than 45 minutes from each by interstate. This historic neck of land beside the Chesapeake Bay offers a variety of attractions, plus accommodations that are, on the average, substantially less expensive than those at the nearby resort "strips."

The Peninsula is rich in history. Visitors can see the field where General Cornwallis surrendered to General Washington in 1781, the harbor where the first ironclad warships clashed in 1862 and a piece of rock plucked from the face of the moon.

The area's best known attraction is Yorktown with its historic battlefield maintained by the National Park Service and the nearby Yorktown Victory Center. There are many other sites of considerable interest on the Peninsula. Among them are the Mariners Museum, containing one of the world's finest nautical collections, the Casemate Museum inside historic, moat-surrounded Fort Monroe, and the NASA Space Museum at Langley Research Center. Daily boat cruises offer a unique vantage point from which to see the port of Hampton Roads.

Visitors can stay in the Peninsula's less expensive motels, enjoy the area's attractions, and still be no more than 45 minutes away from the oceanfront at Virginia Beach and the cobblestone streets of Colonial Williamsburg.

For more information on this idea for an economical family vacation, write the Virginia Peninsula Tourism Council, P.O. Box 7343, Hampton, Virginia 23666.

SELECTING INSURANCE SETTLEMENTS

One of the decisions you will make as you purchase life insurance — that is, insurance that protects you through your lifetime or a specified period of your life — is how you want the sum of money paid to your beneficiary.

The Direct Marketing Insurance Council (DMIC) — an association of insurance companies that offer consumers insurance products through the mail as well as support insurance agent sales through direct marketing — suggests that you study the settlement options available to you with different policies.

A lump sum payment is one choice. Lump sum payments are best if the beneficiary will be faced with heavy bills, if a mortgage is to be paid off or if the beneficiary is knowledgeable about investing large amounts of money for good yields with safety. Before this choice of settlement is made, you should discuss with the beneficiary the sources of advice that will be available for future investments so that the policy payout will continue to produce income for the beneficiary.

The insurance settlement money also can be disbursed as regular, specified income for your beneficiary by the insurance company. Such installment payments draw from both the principal and the interest earned by the amounts left with the insurance company.

Again, consider the needs of those you are seeking to protect through insurance. Do they need a larger income immediately for a relatively few years, a consideration if children are involved? Or would it be better if smaller amounts of money were coming in over a longer period of time?

A third option is to leave the money with the insurance company instead of receiving a settlement payment and then have only the interest paid as regular income to the beneficiary until he or she has need of the total amount or wishes to place it in some other investment.

These considerations can be evaluated as you study the terms of the policy you take out. The options the policy offers should be read and discussed carefully, relating them to you and your family's future needs.

Many DMIC member companies have toll-free numbers you can call if you are not sure of the way you want the proceeds from the policy paid or if you don't understand exactly what options the company is offering. Questions also can be directed to insurance companies by mail. If several policies are being considered, compare the answers the insurance companies give you as an aid in selecting intelligently the benefits that are best for your family.

CREATIVE AMERICAN CINEMA
THEY GOT THE STORY

When an emergency leaves a cameraman out in the cold, a reliable two-way radio can save the day.

It happened at Lake Placid, N.Y., during the official filming of the 1980 Winter Olympic games. A cameraman was poised on the slope at the men's downhill ski event.

Suddenly, as the event was about to begin, he discovered the camera magazine had frozen. Unless it was replaced within minutes, his filming of this important event would be lost.

"I grabbed my Handie-Talkie portable radio and ordered a replacement magazine," he recalled.

At the finish line, an assistant heard the call. He quickly got a replacement magazine, boarded a ski lift, rode to the top, skied the new magazine downhill and delivered it to the camera crew in time to catch the first skier.

With the wind-chill factor dropping temperatures to the equivalent of 55° below, camera lubricants can freeze, batteries can fail. But, says Rodney Jacobs, president, Freewheelin' Films, Ltd.: "Our work would have been impossible without the absolute reliability of those Motorola units. They didn't freeze. With all the snow, cold, slush, banging around and virtually constant use from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m., the Motorola Handie-Talkies kept us together as a team. For this particular production, instant communications were as valuable to us as our cameras."

Legion Ball Club Looks Good

That was an impressive start Friday when Thief River Falls began its 1980 American Legion baseball season with a 4-1, 2-1 doubleheader sweep over Grand Forks. Those wins are testing the memory of Thief River Falls baseball fans who are trying to recall if a similar feat has ever been accomplished against the perennially strong Royals.

Enthusiasm should be tempered a bit, though, with the realization that while it was the season-opener for both teams, Thief River Falls players benefited from the 18 games played during the spring high school baseball season. Grand Forks doesn't field a high school baseball team. And it appears as if the Royals will be struggling this summer.

Nevertheless, it was a good showing by Thief River Falls. The Prowlers played good baseball this spring, and the Thief River Falls American Legion squad has been bolstered again this summer with the addition of several Middle River high school players. The Skippers were District 32 contenders this spring and they contributed shortstop Scott McKeever, first baseman Steve Bengston and catcher Jeff Cwikla to Friday's Thief River Falls line-up.

The promise shown by the players this spring should blossom this summer with an expanded American Legion schedule that features some 35 games, including lots of doubleheaders. That'll be a bonanza for the development of the younger players like Kevin Sanders, Mark Harder and Bengston, all sophomores in high school this year, and McKeever, a junior.

A first-year coaching triumvirate of Nick Drees, Harley Drees and Howard Dalager should prove to be beneficial, too. Just ask Lincoln high school coach Charlie Cornell, or past Thief River Falls American Legion coaches Terry Sullivan, Randy Dallmann and Rocky Wilson if they would have been able to use a couple of assistant coaches.

Thief River Falls has enough talent to win the 1980 Northwest American Legion League title this spring. Thief River Falls, East Grand Forks, Crookston and Roseau annually dominate the league that uses its regular season standings to determine post-season sub district tournament pairings. But the additional high school games should give Thief River Falls the edge over East Grand Forks, and the Thief River Falls personnel is better than what either Crookston or Roseau will be able to field this summer.

It should be an entertaining summer of American Legion baseball in Thief River Falls. Try to take in a few games at the fairgrounds diamond, starting Thursday with a doubleheader against Bagley beginning at 6 p.m.

Lakers Eye 8AA Tennis Title

Detroit Lakes tennis coach Gary Kludt looks for his Lakers to succeed Thief River Falls as Region 8AA high school tennis champions in 1981.

"I think the people we will have back next year have the potential to win the Region 8 championship," Kludt told Ralph Anderson of the Becker County Record. "Our success next year will be determined to a large extent by the number of hours these players spend on the courts this summer."

Miscellaneous

+Detroit Lakes has put a new asphalt surface on its high school track, a project that will cost the school district between $22,000 and $23,000, compared to the projected cost of about $125,000 for an all-weather track.

TRF vs. Roseau Legion Contest Is Postponed

A schedule change Tuesday postponed the start of the 1980 Thief River Falls Northwest American Legion baseball league season. Thief River Falls was originally scheduled to play at Roseau last night to begin Northwest League play — games that will be used to determine post-season sub-district tournament pairings later this summer.

A 4-1, 2-1 doubleheader winner over Grand Forks Friday to start the 1980 American Legion baseball season, Thief River Falls will stage another twinbill Thursday when Bagley visits the fairgrounds diamond for 6 and 8 p.m. games.

Ritchie invites the public to attend the open house, visit with Sargent and Dr. Muirhead and look over the new facility. There will be free registration for a club membership and racquetball T-shirts.

ONE OF SEVERAL instructors on hand Monday for the start of the 1980 Thief River Falls summer youth baseball program, Lincoln high school baseball coach Charlie Cornell led the 7-8-year-olds in a warm-up lap around the fairgrounds diamond. One-hundred 7-8-year-olds have signed up to take part in the first stage of the city's summer baseball program that also includes the 9-year-old Minor League Western Division; 10-11-year-old Minor League Eastern Division; 10-12-year-old Major League; 13-year-old Babe Ruth Prep League team; and two 14-15-year-old Lake Agassiz Babe Ruth League teams.

Prowlers Improve During 1980 Season

Marked improvement highlighted the 1980 Lincoln high school baseball season. Year-end statistics announced by Thief River Falls coach Charlie Cornell underlined the strides made by the Prowlers, who climbed from a 4-10 record a year ago to a 10-8 finish this spring.

"We had a better year than we anticipated," admitted Cornell, who watched the Prowlers flounder a year ago to the worst record in the 28-year history of the sport at the school, and only the second time Thief River Falls has experienced a losing season since first fielding a high school baseball team in 1952.

Greatest improvement was shown in Thief River Falls' offense. The Prowlers, after batting just .209 as a team in 1978 and .216 last spring, pushed that to .253 in 1980 when three Thief River Falls starters hit .300 or better and two others were in the .290's. Last year only two Prowlers hit above .200.

Sophomore Mark Harder made an impressionable varsity debut this spring. The hard-hitting third baseman led the Prowlers in hitting with a .333 batting average and also had team-high figures with 18 runs-batted-in and three home runs.

Senior Mark Schmitke, a first baseman, hit .317 this spring and senior Dave Odegaard, an outfielder, batted .302. Odegaard, whose 16 base hits tied him with Harder in that category, was the only Thief River Falls .300 hitter in 1979 when he hit .333.

Tom Drury and Kevin Sanders just missed the prestigious .300 plateau this spring. Drury, a senior second baseman, finished with a .296 batting average and Sanders, a sophomore who broke into the starting outfield midway through the 1980 season, hit .290. Sanders banged out four doubles to share the team lead in that category with Harder.

And while the offense made great strides, the defense, as expected, performed well and the three-man senior pitching staff of Jeff Ulrich, Wayne Huseth and Kelly Gutterud came through in fine form, posting a combined 3.31 earned-run-average.

"I didn't anticipate the pitching would be as good as it was, or that the hitting would be as good as it was," admitted Cornell. "I thought we'd be all right defensively."

Thief River Falls regular season wins this spring were posted over Red Lake Falls 8-1 and 6-3, Bagley 14-4, Roseau 3-1 and 4-0, Moorhead 1-0, Mount St. Benedict 12-0, Middle River 6-2 and Crookston 12-0. Losses came at the hands of Bemidji 4-1 and 4-2, Moorhead 17-0, Grand Rapids 8-5, Fergus Falls 7-6 and 10 and Crookston 6-5.

In post-season North Half Region 8AA tournament play Thief River Falls opened with a 3-2 victory over Bemidji but lost to Moorhead in the semifinals 5-1 when the top-seeded Spuds scored four times in the top of the seventh inning to snap a 1-1 tie.

"We play as tough a schedule as you can play around here," mentioned Cornell. "I don't know who we could play within 150 miles of here that would be any tougher. We try to play all the Class AA schools we can, and three of our five Class A opponents — Red Lake Falls, Bagley and Roseau — were in the Region 8A tournament."

The 1-0 victory over Moorhead here on April 28 was a real treat, said Cornell. "We played a perfect baseball game that day. We did things in that game you can't reasonably expect a high school team to do," he pointed out.

Disappointments were the losses to Fergus Falls and Crookston. "Those were cases where I thought we were the better ball club and we should have won those games," noted Cornell.

Cornell will lose ten seniors off his 1980 ball club — Ulrich, Drury, Odegaard, Huseth, Gutterud, Schmitke, Paul Drees, Jim Nyland, Dan Cullen and Jon Stimac. But people like Harder and Sanders, along with freshman Jim Hallamek, the team's season-long designated hitter, will give the Prowlers a strong start in 1981.

Cornell completed his sixth year as Thief River Falls head coach this spring with a 55-46 career won-lost record. He succeeded Ralph Skay in 1975 when the Prowlers went 8-8. They were 10-7 in 1976, 13-5 and Region 8AA semifinalists in 1979, 10-8 in 1978.

Women's Slow Pitch Softball . . .

Final Unbeaten Team Is 21-2 Loser Monday

Last unbeaten team in the Thief River Falls women's slow pitch softball league — the Schmidt Stealers — tasted defeat for the first time Monday as Dwight's Hartz ran up a 21-2 victory in Division II play. Diane Fisher hit a three-run home run for the winners.

The Health Hustlers joined the Schmidt Stealers and Dwight's Hartz in a three-way first place tie in Division II with 3-1 records by beating Hydra-Mac 19-9. Mary Jo Nabbin hit a three-run homer for the Health Hustlers.

There is also a three-way first place tie in Division I where the St. Hilaire Saints, Ekeren Drug and Northern Employer's Agency (NEA) are all 3-1.

In Monday's games, NEA knocked off error-plagued Pizza Hut 12-4, with Betty Kujava hitting a round-tripper; the St. Hilaire Saints defeated Roseau Transport 11-6, with Sharon Stauss hitting a home run; and Ekeren Drug edged the winless Mush-a-Rettes 5-3.

Walseth Construction left the ranks of the winless with an 18-8 romp over Great Northwest Agency. Arlene Walseth hit two home runs for the winners and Kim Hamilton also homered.

Black Powder Shoot Is Set This Weekend

Seventh annual muzzle loaders rendezvous will be held Saturday and Sunday at the Pennington county Sportsmen's club grounds, located north of Thief River Falls on the old golf course road, past the railroad roundhouse.

Scheduled to start at 10 a.m. both days, the black powder rifle and pistol shoot is expected to draw a large field of competitors from several states and Canada. Entry fee for shooters is $6 per day, or $10 for both days of shooting.

The event is sponsored by the River Junction Ramrodders, a subdivision of the Pennington county Sportsmen's club. Spectators will be admitted free of charge and are urged to attend.

In addition to hosting the black powder shoot, the Pennington county Sportsmen's club will use the two days to show off its newly completed club house to the public with an open house. Area sportsmen are invited to stop in and look over the facility.

Direction to the club grounds will be marked by signs, beginning at the corner of Eighth Street and Dewey Avenue in northeast Thief River Falls.

Twins Jersey Day Is Set For Sunday

Minnesota Twins cap their longest homestand of the season with Jersey Day on Sunday, June 8, as the Twins take on the Toronto Blue Jays in a 1:15 p.m. American League game.

Following Thursday and Friday night games (7:35 p.m.) at the Met, the Blue Jays will appear Saturday afternoon in a 1:15 p.m. contest — the fifth Knot Hole Gang game of the season — before Sunday's finale.

Attractively designed uniform tops will be given to all youngsters 16 and under as they pass through the turnstiles that day. The jerseys, white with the Twins' script lettering in red, trimmed in blue, will be available in four sizes, thus assuring wearers of the best possible fit.

MAKING CONTACT with the ball, but topping it and grounding out to the left side of the infield was Diann Jesme of Great Northwest Agency during Monday's Thief River Falls women's slow pitch softball league game against Walseth Construction on the East Side diamond. Walseth Construction won the game 18-8 for its first win in four starts in the 16-team, two-division league that features four doubleheaders every Monday and Wednesday night at four locations — the two fairgrounds diamonds, East Side and the Northland community college diamond.

Sjobergs Is Leader In Trap League Standings

Sjoberg's Cable TV emerged as undisputed leader in the Thief River Falls trap league Monday following an automatic two-point victory over non-shooting H & B Oil, and losses by Arctic and the Triple J. Trap Co., two teams who shared the league lead with Sjoberg's Cable TV the week before.

In the books it was a 120-75 Sjoberg's Cable TV win over H & B Oil, while Pizza Hut edged Arctic 119-118 and Pepsi-Cola handled Triple J. Trap Co. 118-105.

Elsewhere it was Wilson Brothers beating Service Master 118-113, Miller Insurance defeated The Times 122-114, Hartz Wholesale shot down First Northwestern State Bank Southside 119-95, Marshallton Gun Club tripped Hible's Standard Station 122-121, Auto Body Repair shaded Thune-Upham 120-119, Dunrud Trucking knocked off Peterson, Biddick 118-114, Northern State Bank got by Northland Realty 121-120 and Arctic Spirit downed KKAQ 119-107.

The results left Sjoberg's Cable TV the only unbeaten-untied squad after five weeks of shooting in the 22-team league. That's good for 10 points in the league standings. But Arctic Spirit is 4-0-1 for nine points and there are seven others with eight points and within one victory of the league lead midway through the first half season shooting.

There were no less than 13 shooters with 25-straights Monday, including Lloyd Melby, Wilson Brothers; Mike Dahle and Kyle Anderson, Miller Insurance; Pat Fischer, Hartz Wholesale; Jim Heckroth and Loren Abrahamson, Marshallton Gun Club; Ron Zutz, Hible's Standard Station; Jim Bass, Auto Body Repair; Roger Van Horn, Dunrud Trucking; Warren Hanestad, Peterson-Biddick; Peter Tri, Northland Realty; Sandy Wilson and Howard Thorson, Northern State Bank.

Shooters are reminded that Marshallton Gun Club, site of the weekly Thief River Falls trap league competition, will host a chicken shoot tonight (Wednesday).

Return Home For Vacations Can Be Happy Or Stressful

by Jeanne Hanson
University News Service

"You can't go home again," Thomas Wolfe told us. To a degree, he was right: it is impossible to revisit one's childhood.

But a vacation trip to see one's parents can be a trip "home" of sorts. And many adult children as well as their parents enjoy such trips, although parents enjoy them more, according to results of a University of Minnesota study.

Paul Rosenblatt, professor of family social science, surveyed a representative sample of 60 middle-income, midwestern families about their trips "home" and what they thought about the visits.

The typical family visit, Rosenblatt found, lasts about three-and-a-half days and includes a lot of eating and socializing and a certain loss of privacy. Although such visits are somewhat stressful, they are quite satisfying to both parties, especially the older parent, he found.

Stress during the family visit is the result of a number of factors, Rosenblatt said. Adult children staying with parents may feel bossed and angry — too much like a child again. Either party may feel that secrets are being kept from them or divulged to others, and may feel they have to pretend to be someone they aren't. They may also feel that their time and territory are being taken over.

But reducing stresses like these to a manageable level is apparently quite possible, Rosenblatt said. The people he studied said they felt these stresses only "slightly." "People seem to have figured out how to deal with a family trip," he said.

Keeping the visit short seems to help, Rosenblatt said. Although some people can remain serene through visits of months and even years duration, quite a few of the people surveyed cited the old saying "fish and relatives begin to smell after three days." One man, who had found a visit from his daughter very rewarding, still commented, "There's a point where you wish they were gone."

Maintaining some privacy seems important, Rosenblatt said. Competing for the shower and the television set can be wearying. So can the pressure caused by loss of togetherness, especially if there are problems between family members (including spouses).

The hosts benefit even more than the guests if they can provide a private sleeping place for their adult children, he said. On the other hand, hosts will feel significantly angrier if visitors take over a room not usually used for sleeping. Staying in a nearby motel or renting adjoining cabins are good ideas for some families, Rosenblatt said.

Separate activities can reduce stress, he said. Some of the people surveyed even split their visit in half, with time in the middle spent with nearby friends.

Separation can be found in subtle ways, Rosenblatt added. Reading, extra sleeping, and even watching television can reduce the need for talking. "It's not for nothing that there are a lot of family specials on television during the holidays," he said.

Visiting children sometimes reduce stress and sometimes add to it, Rosenblatt said. They can become a focus for their parents and grandparents, entertaining the adults and distracting them from other family issues. Or, in a home with a glass bottle collection and no yard, they can become exhausting to supervise.

Organized group activities and goals such as foraging in antique shops or organizing the family picture collection can help some people, he said.

Psychologically, people can minimize stress by having realistic expectations, Rosenblatt said. If your family has never sat down and really hashed out grandmother's will or father's drinking problem, don't try to do it now, Rosenblatt said. People who do best on family trips seem to make the best of what they have. "Even if you have to discuss philodendrons with your mother for two hours, what matters is that you are together," he said.

"Love descends the generations more than it ascends anyway," one grandfather said. "Perhaps adult children are more important in their parents' lives than their parents are in theirs," Rosenblatt added.

Visits were indeed harder on the adult children, who felt less sad when they were over. But both age groups surveyed were generally very positive about their family visits. They felt happy, useful and valued. They felt that important family issues had been discussed and family ties strengthened. Their consciences were satisfied.

Perhaps ironically, the few trips centering on serious family illnesses and deaths were especially satisfying. A family trip like this may put life in perspective and show us where we get much of our support, sympathy and sharing, Rosenblatt said. "It may overshadow the trivial frustrations of family trips and tell us a lot about how important families really are to us."

County Board Proceedings

June 4, 1980
Official Proceedings
Board of County Commissioners
Pennington County, Minn.
May 27, 1980

Pursuant to adjournment the County Board met in the Commissioners' Room in the Courthouse in Thief River Falls at 10:00 A.M. May 27, 1980.

Members present: Hoffman, Grabanski, Koop, Stenberg and Tasa. All present.

Vernon Lee and Dan Helle of the Pennington County Fair Assoc. appeared, presented their financial statement for the past year and made request for an annual appropriation to assist in operation of the fair. Various aspects of the operation were discussed as well as the financial statement that had been filed.

Moved by Hoffman seconded by Koop that the sum of $10,000 be appropriated and paid to the Pennington County Fair Assoc. for the 1980 appropriation. Upon call for a vote the Chairman declared the motion lost because of a lack of a majority voting in favor. The matter was then laid aside to be considered later.

Gerry Paulson, spokesman for the Thief River Falls Snowdrifters Club, discussed past budgets, grooming and other matters of interest as they relate to the Viking Snowmobile Trail and the Agassiz Snowmobile Trail. Mr. Paulson indicated that the Club could manage the grooming very well but needed a groomer and suggested that the machine be purchased by the County and the Club could man the machine and repay the County in the way of fees based on a schedule that would amortize the cost. The Club indicated that they would be happy to contact other neighborhood Clubs to get their cooperation and input into the Trail upkeep. Various other suggestions were discussed and upon motion by Grabanski seconded by Koop the matter was tabled to allow for more details as to the availability of equipment for rent, etc. Motion declared carried.

The Board then took up the matter of the appropriation for County Fair purposes and upon motion by Grabanski seconded by Stenberg the sum of $8,500.00 was appropriated and ordered paid to the Pennington County Fair Assoc. to further Agricultural Development for the year 1980. Motion declared unanimously adopted.

The Board then took up the matters that have been previously discussed with Architectural Firms — the Energy Audit and the feasibility study of the old Sanatorium Building more recently called Oakland Dormitory. The Board reviewed the State participation figures in the Energy Audit and reviewed the proposals of the three Architects.

Moved by Stenberg seconded by Koop that the firm of Rieke Carroll Muller Assoc., Inc. of Hopkins be engaged to perform the Energy audits on the various County Buildings. Motion unanimously carried.

Moved by Hoffman seconded by Koop that the firm of Rieke Carroll Muller Assoc., Inc. of Hopkins be engaged to perform a feasibility study of the possible use of the Oakland Dormitory Building according to proposal before the Board. Motion declared unanimously carried.

Moved by Hoffman seconded by Stenberg that meeting adjourn to convene at 10:00 A.M., June 3, 1980. Motion carried.

Army Engineer Districts Are Realigned

St. Paul and Rock Island districts of the Army Corps of Engineers have announced a change in the geographical areas in which each district carries out the Corps permit program. Effective June 1, 1980, the Rock Island district will administer the permit program in those Iowa counties formerly under the jurisdiction of the St. Paul District. St. Paul will take over the permit responsibilities in the Wisconsin and Minnesota counties that had been administered by Rock Island.

Corps of Engineers regulates all work in navigable waters of the United States under Section 10 of the River and Harbor Act of 1899. The Corps also regulates the discharge of dredged and fill material into other waters of the United States under Section 404 of the Clean Water act.

Primary purpose of the jurisdictional realignment is to simplify coordination for State agencies having involvement with the Corps program.

As a result of the realignment, the area of Iowa that will be administered by the Rock Island district includes all of Allamakee, Clayton, Howard, Kossuth, Mitchell, Winnebago and Winneshiek counties and most of Emmet county. St. Paul district's area of responsibility in Minnesota has been enlarged to include all of Cottonwood, Dodge, Freeborn, Lyon, Martin, Mower, and Steele counties and parts of Jackson, Murray and Nobles counties. In Wisconsin, the St. Paul district will now be responsible for the corps permit program throughout the State.

These changes in jurisdiction pertain to the Corps regulatory program only. They do not affect traditional district boundaries with regard to civil works projects, flood control activities and other Corps work.

Questions on Corps permit requirements and application procedures may be directed to the Regulatory Functions Branch in either district. Telephone number in St. Paul is (612) 725-5819 and the address is U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, 1135 U.S. Post Office and Custom House, St. Paul, Minnesota 55101.

Government estimates show U.S. cotton growers will seed 14.8 million acres this year, up six per cent from 1979.

Home Care Services Are Aid To Elderly

In a country that often seems to be obsessed with youth, it is easy to be pessimistic about growing old, suggests the Minnesota department of health.

"Too often we tend to equate aging with ill health and mounting medical bills, with dependence and disability. At the extreme, we think of old age in terms of confinement to a nursing home, or some other specialized facility," a department spokesman said.

"But this negative image of aging is less than accurate. The majority of older people are, in fact, able to lead active and independent lives. Very few require institutional care, and even more might be able to remain at home if the right kind of help were available in the community. Home care programs, like those offered by local health departments in Minnesota, are one source of this help."

Efforts to clear up some misconceptions about aging have highlighted this year's observance of Older Americans Month. The event, which is conducted each May, attempts to focus public attention on some of the positive aspects of aging, as well as the needs of older people.

Contrary to the popular stereotype, most older people continue to live on their own and participate in the affairs of the large community. Federal authorities estimate that roughly 60 per cent of all Americans over 65 fall into this category. The other 40 per cent — about 10 million people — are handicapped to some degree by poverty, or by chronic physical or psychological problems. Of these, about 4 million are home-bound, or need assistance to perform ordinary daily activities. Only about one million older Americans live in nursing homes or other care facilities.

Programs which provide health care of other services in the home can do much to keep older people out of care facilities, authorities believe. They cite studies which suggest that large numbers of people already in nursing homes who might have been able to remain in the community if such services were available.

Efforts to provide these services are already well underway here in Minnesota, where every country is already served by a locally run home care program. In most areas, home care is offered through one of the state's community health services (CHS) agencies, each of which serves on or more counties. In areas not served by a CHS agency, home care is offered through county level public health nursing agencies. A variety of services are offered, ranging from visits by a nurse of therapist to help with homemaking services.

But as much as these programs offer, it may still not be quite enough. Minnesota's over-65 population is expected to increase by 24 per cent during the next 20 years, with an even more dramatic increase in the number of people over 80. People in the over-80 group are also the most likely to need the sort of help offered by a home care program. And as health care costs continue to rise, it becomes all the more important to help people avoid a long stay in the hospital, or unnecessary confinement in a long term care facility.

The CHS agencies, in a 1979 state Health Department survey, were unanimous in seeing a need for additional home care services. And a special advisory committee has recommended to the state health commissioner that home care services be expanded, in terms of both the amount and the kinds of services offered.

Providing such expanded home care services is vitally important, authorities feel, because home care can do so much to help older people remain a part of the broader community. With Adequate home care, they argue, many older people can avoid the sense of dependence and isolation too often associated with growing old.

THEN and NOW

THEN: If you had a package you wanted to send across the country a century and a half ago or so, it would probably have traveled by stagecoach and, if it got there at all, would have taken about three and a half months!

NOW: Today, you can send packages almost anywhere in the country overnight, if need be, and in many places, this is due at least in part to the efficiency of buses. A bus can go anywhere a road goes. Regularly scheduled service covers over 277,000 miles and 15,000 communities, 14,000 of which have no other means of public transportation. Lately, mail and package express by bus has been steadily rising.

HOW'S YOUR HEALTH?

Bronzed skin which has resulted from soaking up the rays of the blazing sun has become a common status symbol. All too frequently the emphasis has been placed on the cosmetic affects of a "healthy" suntan rather than the potentially harmful effects of excessive tanning.

Know your sun-facts and decide just how much exposure to its rays is best for you advises the Minnesota Medical association.

Too much sun can mean anything from a sunburn to skin cancer. How much you tan or burn depends in a large part on how much ultra violet radiation gets to your skin. The threat of skin cancer is ordinarily not a reason for concern to the occassional sunbather. However, there is rather clear evidence that repreated and persistent exposure to sunlight is one of the major factors in causing cancer of the skin in the susceptable person. Skin cancer is commonly referred to as an occupational hazard for the farmer, the rancher, and the sailor whose work brings them in repeated contact with excessive rays of the sun.

Skin cancer has been found to occur most frequently on exposed parts of the body; the face, ears, hands or neck. Light skinned persons more often than dark skinned persons get skin cancer.

Skin cancer has been found to occur more often in the South and Southwestern areas of the United States noted for sunny claimtes. Excessive exposure to sunlight can cause premature aging of the skin.

For example, the teenage girl who tans excessively each summer without proper protective measures may find that she has a skin that looks 20 years older by the time she reaches 40.

Years of over-exposure of the skin to the sun will result in leathery texture, wrinkles, skin folds, and sagging skin. Commonly, blotchy pigmentation will replace the desired tan. The MMA recommends the regular use of sunscreening agents for outdoor workers and others who expose themselves repeatedly to the sun.

A number of commonly used drugs including antibacterial agents in medicated soaps, high blood pressure medication, oral anit-diabetic drugs, some tranquilizers, and some antibiotics can cause the skin to become photosensitive to sunlight. Consequently, the skin may burn on slightest exposure to the sun. Persons who use these substances are urged to avoid direct exposure to sunlight as much as possible.

Unemployment insurance benefits are paid for entirely by taxes on employers, except in three states — Alabama, Alaska and New Jersey — when the employee also contributes.

REFLECTIONS

Strange how a landscape sets the imagination to work. Right now, looking at this scene, I can imagine all sorts of things.

Winged steeds riding to heavy music . . . pioneers in the wilderness . . . castles on the cliffs . . . boating at high speeds.

Look at the magic that enables the lake to mirror the rocky mountain peak and the heavens! The vastness and stillness of the scene sets my mind to wondering about time and space and things I will never understand.

But in standing here and wondering so, I feel like I've been near God.

There is a place where I can find Him always — in Church. Will you come with me?

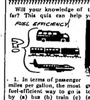
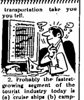
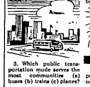
Will your knowledge of transportation take you far? This quiz can help you tell.



1. In terms of passenger miles per gallon, the most fuel-efficient way to go is by (a) bus (b) train (c) plane?



2. Probably the fastest-growing segment of the tourist industry today is (a) cruise ships (b) camping in national parks (c) bus charters?



3. Which public transportation mode serves the most communities (a) buses (b) trains (c) planes?

4. Most buses carry (a) passengers only (b) freight only (c) both?

ANSWERS: 1. (a) Buses get 139 passenger miles per gallon; trains and cars, 41; and airplanes, 26. Many families are considering the cost for gasoline for a vacation trip by car and taking the bus instead. A bus burns less than 1/3 the amount of fuel used by cars—or trains for that matter. 2. (c) Bus charters carried 55 percent of the 360 million bus riders in 1979, up from 45 percent in 1978, reports the American Bus Assn. If a bus charter appeals to you, the travel section may show one to a place you've always wanted to visit. You may even get your own group together; most buses seat 44 to 47 persons. 3. (a) Buses serve 15,000 communities, 14,000 of them served by no other means of public transportation. Airlines serve some 700, and trains, fewer than 500. 4. (c) Mail and package service by bus have been on the rise. Newspapers are also carried by bus, as are emergency prescriptions and packages of that sort.

Higher Refunds Show Tax Cuts Are Working

Tax relief act of 1979 was the bill termed the largest tax relief measure in Minnesota's history — the bill that translated the tax cut promises made by the governor and legislators during the 1978 campaign into action.

Income tax relief received the most attention during that 1979 legislative session, from lawmakers and the public alike. And, last year at this time, state officials were estimating that the tax relief act of 1979 would provide a total of $732 million in tax cuts. Out of that total, $502 million — over two-thirds — would go directly to provide income tax relief during the 1980-81 biennium.

But just how well have the measures been working? Very well indeed, according to state revenue commissioner Clyde E. Allen Jr.

"Tax relief estimates are very good guesses about the future, based on a large amount of data from the past," he said, "but they're still guesses. We knew we'd just have to wait until people filed their 1979 returns this year to find out whether the new law was doing what it was supposed to do."

Over a million 1979 income tax returns have now been processed, he said, and the news is good: refunds are averaging $290, a 21 per cent increase over last year's $239. And, he added, the state expects to mail out a total of $346.7 million in refunds this year — $32.8 million more than last year's $313.9 million. According to Allen, higher refunds are mainly due to two provisions in the 1979 law: increased personal and dependent credits and indexing. Credits were increased from $40 to $55.

"Personal and dependent credits are dollar amounts that you take directly off the top of your tax bill," he explained, "so the $15 more per credit meant $15 less in tax. For a family of four, the tax was $60 lower this year than it would have been without the 1979 law."

So far, the credit increase has cut taxes by $30.0 million, and by the time the last return is processed, that figure is expected to rise to $57 million. It is relatively easy to pinpoint the difference the change in credit amounts make in a person's overall tax, but it's much harder to show exactly where indexing — the other main factor in this year's lower income taxes — made a difference. But, says Allen, indexing was the most important change of all, because that provision specifically addressed the most serious economic problem Minnesotans face — inflation.

Indexing ties the tax brackets to the rate of inflation. The idea is to tax real earning power, not inflated dollars, and here's how it works: as the dollar's value declines, a family needs more of them this year to buy the same goods and services that cost less last year. So, if it takes more dollars to buy the necessities of life, it should also take more dollars to push a person into a higher tax bracket. The problem, Allen said, was that the old tax structure (which basically hadn't changed since 1971) couldn't distinguish between a raise that meant real increase in earning power, and one that was the result of a cost-of-living wage adjustment.

As a result, people who received cost-of-living salary increases were being pushed into higher tax brackets, even though the additional dollars they earned were buying less and less. The easiest way to show the effect indexing has had is to compare the amounts of tax due in 1978 on an income with the amount of tax due on the same level of income in 1979, after indexing: Income — $12,000; 1978 tax — $1,091; 1979 tax (after indexing) $1,049; $16,000, $1,645, and $1,588; $20,000, $2,205, and $2,145.

"What makes indexing so important is that it's not just a one-time tax cut," Allen said, "because, as long as inflation continues, the tax brackets will be adjusted each year."

The 1979 law made a number of other changes in state income taxes, too, Allen added, with relief targeted for certain groups, such as senior citizens on fixed incomes, who have been especially hard hit by inflation.

Agreement To Help Water, Power Users

In a move to streamline operations and maximize efficiency, two federal agencies signed an agreement defining their jurisdictional responsibilities, with the resultant benefits accruing to both water and power users in 15 mid-west and western states.

R. Keith Higginson, commissioner, Water and Power Resources service (service), department of the Interior, and Robert L. McPhail, administrator, Western Area Power administration (Western), department of energy, signed an agreement in Washington, D.C., which identifies the functions to be performed and the property to be transferred between the two agencies.

"This agreement is the result of long and careful negotiations between the two agencies and represents the culmination of many long hours of work by the staffs of both agencies. It was our goal to provide for the operation of the federal power system in the most efficient manner possible and to avoid duplication of efforts. I believe this agreement will accomplish that objective," Higginson said.

In 1977, under the energy organization act which created the department of Energy, the power marketing and transmission functions of the service were transferred to Western, including the construction, operation and maintenance of transmission lines and attendant facilities.

McPhail said, "The agreement signals a completion to an involved process in transferring appropriate responsibilities with respect to that part of the federal power system relating to the service's and Western's jurisdiction. The American public stands to benefit the most from what we accomplished here today."

Federal power system affected by the agreement is operated and maintained by Western in the states of Arizona, California, Colorado, Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Montana, Nebraska, New Mexico, Nevada, North Dakota, South Dakota, Texas, Utah and Wyoming. Western's transmission system includes about 16,000 miles of transmission lines, over 200 substations, and markets federal power generated by the service and the U.S. army corps of engineers to 464 wholesale customers.

Service operates and maintains 39 hydroelectric powerplants in Western's marketing area with an installed capacity of 5,172 megawatts. Western markets the power from these powerplants. Under the agreement, the service has the responsibility for planning, designing, construction, operation, and maintenance of hydro and other forms of electrical power generation as authorized by Congress. Service also has the responsibility for water release scheduling and for operational control of all generator units. Western will have the opportunity to participate in water release decisions in order to optimize the utilization of power resources.

The agreement states Western's responsibility as planning, designing, construction, operation and maintenance of the transmission system, marketing the federal power and setting power rates to assure repayment of all the allocated investment. Western is also responsible for all power dispatch functions, including operation such as the assignment of load to sources of supply to effect the most reliable and economical customer service within water and operating constraints set by the service. It will operate and maintain high voltage transmission lines, substations and equipment; operate principal tie-lines and switching; and scheduling of energy transactions with connecting utilities. Western will provide transmission switching and substation service for the service's projects for all power, including power for project use except at some isolated locations, and will deliver project power as required by service.

Agreement also provides for the establishment of a joint electric power resource and transmission research, development and testing program.

In administering the Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970, the Labor Department's OSHA issues standards and rules for safe and healthful working conditions, tools, equipment, facilities and processes. OSHA conducts workplace inspections to assure that the standards are followed.

Accidental Poison Rate Is Reduced

Minnesotans have been lucky. In recent years, few children have died in Minnesota from accidental poisonings, mostly because of laws requiring child-resistant packaging on medicines and other toxic substances.

In the past decade, the number of deaths among children nationwide has decreased from over 400 a year to fewer than 200 a year. Deaths from ingestion of aspirin are down 75 per cent, and deaths from drain cleaning fluids are down 50 per cent, according to Dr. Edward Krenzelok, director of the Hennepin poison center in Minneapolis.

Still, it is a mistake to rely totally on child-resistant containers. Dr. Don Uden, clinical pharmacist at the Minneapolis Children's Health center, says that children are still finding ways to outsmart the child-resistant technology. A three-year-old girl brought to one Minnesota hospital after swallowing an undetermined number of chewable children's aspirin amused herself and shocked the hospital staff by repeatedly popping the "child-resistant" cap on and off the bottle of aspirin to show how she had done it earlier.

Although very few children have died from accidental poisonings in Minnesota in recent years, there are about 36,000 poisoning incidents among Minnesota children under age six each year.

A new law passed by the Legislature should help to reduce that number. Law allocates $125,000 for a Minnesota poison information service, with a 24-hour telephone hotline that can be called toll-free from anywhere in the state. Service will be an expansion of the Hennepin poison center, which operates a hotline and provides educational services, mostly on a local basis.

Following are safety tips to prevent accidental poisonings in your home:

Store all toxic substances in locked cabinets, including medicines, and supplies kept in the garage, basement or attic. Items not usually considered poisonous that could severely injure a child and which should be stored safely are: alcoholic beverages, colognes and perfumes (because of their high alcoholic content), blue, mothballs, nail polish and remover, shaving cream and lotion, suntan creams, and all cosmetics.

Don't rely on "child-proof" containers alone; take the furniture polish or window cleaner you're using with you when you go to answer the door or telephone; discard old and unused medications by flushing them down the drain. Rinse and throw away the containers; never refer to medicine as "candy"; always give medications in a well-lit room, to make sure you do not misread the label; and never give one child's medicine to another.

Store all toxic substances in their proper containers. Don't store kerosene in a pop bottle or rat poison in a cereal box, use only lead-free paint, dispose of unfinished alcoholic drinks immediately. Don't wait until morning to clean up after the party; watch for potentially harmful substances that are mailed to your home; store harmful substances away from food; never leave children unattended near medications or potentially hazardous household products; remove all poisonous plants from your home, teach your children not to put wild berries or any plants in their mouths; and keep a bottle of syrup of Ipecac in your home. If someone in your home is poisoned, your doctor may advise its use to induce vomiting. It is inexpensive and can be purchased at any drug store without a prescription.

If you think someone has been poisoned, even if you aren't sure — call your doctor or hospital or local poison center, state your name, telephone number, and the name, age and weight of the person who may be poisoned, have the package or container available so you can read the label over the phone, and estimate the amount ingested and the time the poisoning happened. Your doctor or the poison center will help you with additional instructions.

TIPS FOR BACKPACKING WITHOUT PAIN

The glorious outdoors seems to attract more and more weekend hikers. It's a good way to enjoy clear skies, glorious mountain views, cold, sweet streams. But, ouch, it may bring ugly back problems.

If one wants to use puns, you might say that hiking has come a long way, mountain-climbing is on the incline and backpacking carries a big responsibility.

Your doctor of chiropractic, who is a member of the health team who gives special attention to spinal mechanics and neurological, muscular and vascular relationships, reminds you that even if you survive your backpacking trip without a cut, sprain or fall, you can still do serious damage to your back, neck and shoulders.

One important thing you can do to protect your back is to own a good backpack. Those made of a "H" or "U" shaped aluminum frame are recommended. The best, most secure frames have either welded components, bolts or plastic couplings. Aluminum frames are lightweight, durable and weather resistant.

When selecting your backpack, be sure the shoulder straps and back bands have plenty of lightweight padding. This will protect your skin and prevent rubbing.

A relatively recent addition to the backpack is the hip belt. This distributes some of the weight to the hips, taking some of the stress off the back. Experts say the best hip belts are the one-piece type that "float" with the body instead of harnessing the hips rigidly to the frame. Get a pack belt that has a quick release buckle. This is especially important if you're going to hike near water or ice.

When picking your backpack, be sure to carefully inspect the stitching that holds it together. The stitching should be uniformly small and tight. There should be double rows of stitching at stress points which include the top and bottom corners, zipper ends and the places where the frame is attached. The way it is sewn determines support as well as strength and durability.

Next, try the pack on. Place some test objects into the pack for weight. This should give you an idea of fit and indicate if the padding on the shoulder pads and hip belt is sufficient.

Packing your backpack is second only in importance to selecting the correct pack. Mostly, it takes common sense. Be sure to distribute the weight evenly throughout the pack—especially side to side. Most packs have zippered side compartments so you can have the things you need most frequently at hand.

Now let us assume you have picked out a well-constructed backpack and it fits perfectly. What comes next? Probably the most important thing of all—conditioning. Don't go on a long hiking trip unless you are physically in shape. The most accident prone individual is the person who becomes careless because he cannot take the rigors of the activity.

In addition, the American Chiropractic Assocation recommends periodic health check-ups. This should include a thorough examination of the spine and nervous system, since the musculo-skeletal system is intimately affected by an activity such as backpacking.

Follow these 6 important tips for safe backpacking:

1. Pick the right pack.
2. Watch your footing.
3. Don't jump wide precipices.
4. Be careful of undercurrents in water.
5. Take frequent rest breaks.
6. Protect your neck, back, and shoulders from strain and injury.

Formaldehyde Vapor May Be Health Problem

State health commissioner George R. Pettersen, M.D., has declared that the use of building materials which give off formaldehyde vapor can be a "significant health problem" under certain circumstances.

In accordance with Minnesota Laws of 1980, Chapter 594, a bill on formaldehyde passed during the last session of the state legislature, Dr. Pettersen issued the following statement:

"Persons in newly constructed or remodeled residential environments may be exposed to the formaldehyde gas released from such materials as particle board, plywood and recently installed foam insulation. We have determined that a significant health problem is presented by the use of building materials that emit formaldehyde gases. This determination is consistent with the recent findings of the committee on toxicology of the National Academy of Sciences that:

(a) 'The first level of response to low airborne concentrations of formaldehyde appears to be irritational effects;

(b) Possible revised assessments of health implications need to await the results of ongoing and planned toxicologic studies; and

(c) At present, with all the uncertainties and variables of response of humans to low airborne concentrations of formaldehyde which are attributable to building materials in residential environments, the formaldehyde should be maintained 'at the lowest practical concentration.' "

Resins manufactured with formaldehyde have been used to make building materials for several years, Dr. Pettersen said. Large amounts of the resins are used in products like plywood, particle board, insulation cloth and adhesives, and formaldehyde gases given off by these materials have been blamed for a variety of health problems.

Government officials nationwide report that they have received many complaints about the problem, Dr. Pettersen said. The reported symptoms range from eye and skin irritation to breathing difficulties, nosebleed and nausea.

Dr. Pettersen said that the Minnesota department of health investigated complaints about possible formaldehyde exposure in 486 homes during a 15-month period ending April 30. The air inside those homes was found to contain formaldehyde vapor in amounts ranging from undetectable to 3.29 parts per million. After conducting a similar investigation, Wisconsin proposed regulations which would limit levels of formaldehyde vapor inside new mobile homes.

Dr. Pettersen also noted that the Massachusetts department of health completely banned the sale of urea formaldehyde foam insulation in that state after holding public hearings on health problems allegedly caused by the insulating materials. The U.S. consumer products safety commission held a series of public hearings on the possible health effects of formaldehyde after receiving over 1,600 complaints about products containing urea formaldehyde. Last December the U.S. department of energy proposed standards for making and installing urea formaldehyde foam insulation.

Dr. Pettersen said that, as soon as possible, he plans to issue temporary rules limiting the permissible amount of formaldehyde vapor inside newly constructed dwelling units. These rules will establish a maximum limit of 0.5 parts per million for the air inside these dwelling units.

Permanent rules will be adopted only after the state health department holds public hearings on the formaldehyde issue, sometime later this year. Dr. Pettersen said evidence presented at the hearing may justify provisions in the permanent rules which would gradually lower the permissible level of formaldehyde.

Dacamine herbicide is bad news for broadleaf weeds. And good news for western wheat growers. Dacamine is the hard-hitting post-emergence herbicide that gets the tough weeds others leave behind. Including troublesome volunteer sunflower, thistle, velvetleaf and lots more. The powerful action of Dacamine penetrates waxy weed leaves and travels all the way down to the roots. Tough perennials are less likely to grow back.

Dacamine is non-volatile... stays put, right where you spray it. There are no vapors to damage nearby crops, even in the hottest weather.

Dacamine is the herbicide farmers use when their normal broadleaf weed control program fails. It's great for general weed control in fencerows, roadsides and around buildings, too. Dacamine herbicide — bad news for broadleaf weeds. Good new for you.

Report Shows Health Hazards Of Marijuana

New evidence from officially sponsored studies reveals serious health hazards from marijuana, according to a special report from Consumers' Research organization.

In its April Cover story, "Twelve Things You Should Know About Marijuana," Consumers' Research magazine reviews recently obtained data on marijuana use, showing that the drug contains more carcinogens (cancer-producing agents) than tobacco, has negative effects on lung capacity, can affect heart function, and impairs driving and flying skills.

Also, the report reviews data showing that marijuana can affect reproductive functions in both men and women, can create serious psychological problems, especially for young people, and may be a source of brain damage.

Findings in the CR special report are drawn from recent official studies of the National Institute on drug abuse, the key official agency dealing with such questions. Consumers' Research is the nation's original consumer group, founded in 1928, specializing in product testing and comparisons.

In the past, says Consumers' Research, federal agencies and drug abuse officials issued only tentative and non-committal statements concerning marijuana. But now that over a thousand experimental projects on the drug have been completed, federal authorities are speaking with a firmer voice.

Some of the most recent findings contained in the CR sepcial report:

—Unlike alcohol, which flushes itself out of the body in about 12 hours, 30 to 50 per cent of the active ingredient of marijuana (THC) remains in the body for a week and some of it will remain for as long as four to six weeks. A youngster who smokes even once or twice a week is never entirely free of the drug.

—Marijuana contains more cancer-causing hydrocarbons than tobacco; smoking five joints a week impairs breathing more seriously than smoking six packs of cigarettes a week; after exposure to marijuana smoke, defense systems in the lungs show more impairment than following exposure to tobacco smoke.

— Male users may suffer a reduction in their sperm count and reduced fertility. Women who use marijuana are more likely to have defective menstrual cycles. Animal studies indicate that marijuana affects levels of estrogen, the primary female hormone, in female subjects; marijuana may have a toxic effect on fetuses and embryos; THC can cross the placental barrier or be carried by the mother's milk.

— Smoking a marijuana cigarette often continues to impair coordination and reaction time long after the user has ceased to feel high. Experienced airline pilots who went through flight simulation after smoking marijuana, and who said they felt their performance has not suffered, actually showed significant deterioration in performance.

— Psychologists are unanimous in agreeing that marijuana use by children and adolescents can severely damage the emerging personality. It is quite common for users of any age to experience transient mild paranoia or "acute panic anxiety reactions."

— After heavy marijuana use (one joint a day for extended periods) rhesus monkeys have sustained permanent damage in deep-brain areas which affect emotion and behavior.

— Animal studies and unconfirmed human studies show that marijuana interferes with the production and effectiveness of white blood cells that help protect the body from disease.

U Of M Seeks Increase In 2-Year Budget

University of Minnesota will ask the state for a $45 million increase in its appropriation over the 1981-83 biennium if the board of regents approves the request.

Regents heard details of the biennial request, which will be sent to Gov. Al Quie in October, at their meeting April 10 in Minneapolis.

Figures are still tentative and will be adjusted as price levels and construction schedules change and as the regents themselves make changes in the request. Faculty salaries have not yet been figured into the request, nor have increases in the supplies, expense and equipment budget, according to University president C. Peter Magrath.

Under the current proposal, the University would ask for an increase of $45,493,200 in its two-year budget, now estimated at $622 million. Of that amount, $24,225,800 would be used for operations and maintenance and the other $21,267,400 would be for specially designated projects.

Faculty salary estimates have so far not been figured, since salary requests are the product of lengthy internal consultation, Magrath said. "The faculty salary issue has got to be one of our top priorities," he said.

"No matter how bad a fiscal situation is, the worst we can do is sit back and accept the status quo," Magrath said.

At their March meeting, the regents voted to ask the legislature for an emergency salary increase for faculty members after Magrath had told the board that salaries have "eroded dreadfully" and that the institution is in danger of losing its best faculty members to other occupations.

University was unable to get a legislative hearing on the salary question during this session, but will be asked to make its case to a legislative committee later this spring or summer.

Proposed request calls for a net increase of 90.05 new faculty positions and 181.1 new civil service positions. St. Paul regent Mary Schertler questioned the difference.

"It does hurt our argument that we are interested in maintaining and improving the faculty when the increases are in civil service positions," Schertler said.

Magrath told the board that the new civil service positions were needed to augment faculty jobs. "These positions are clearly intended to make faculty time more productive," he said. "People need support staff."

Moorhead regent William Dosland said that asking for any new positions in an era of declining enrollment is unwise. "Why are we asking for 270 new positions in the face of declining enrollment?" he said. "In industry, when the work load drops off, the work force is reduced."

Dosland's question, Magrath said, sums up one of the major funding problems faced by research and service universities. "The work load is not dropping off," he said. Work load at a major research institution is not tied entirely to student population, he said.

"I'm not saying that we not plan for enrollment decline. We are. But we are much more than a teaching institution," Magrath said.

Accidental Poison Rate Is Reduced

Minnesotans have been lucky. In recent years, few children have died in Minnesota from accidental poisonings, mostly because of laws requiring child-resistant packaging on medicines and other toxic substances.

In the past decade, the number of deaths among children nationwide has decreased from over 400 a year to fewer than 200 a year. Deaths from ingestion of aspirin are down 75 per cent, and deaths from drain cleaning fluids are down 50 per cent, according to Dr. Edward Krenzelok, director of the Hennepin poison center in Minneapolis.

Still, it is a mistake to rely totally on child-resistant containers. Dr. Don Uden, clinical pharmacist at the Minneapolis Children's Health center, says that children are still finding ways to outsmart the child-resistant technology. A three-year-old girl brought to one Minnesota hospital after swallowing an undetermined number of chewable children's aspirin amused herself and shocked the hospital staff by repeatedly popping the "child-resistant" cap on and off the bottle of aspirin to show how she had done it earlier.

Although very few children have died from accidental poisonings in Minnesota in recent years, there are about 36,000 poisoning incidents among Minnesota children under age six each year.

A new law passed by the Legislature should help to reduce that number. Law allocates $125,000 for a Minnesota poison information service, with a 24-hour telephone hotline that can be called toll-free from anywhere in the state. Service will be an expansion of the Hennepin poison center, which operates a hotline and provides educational services, mostly on a local basis.

Following are safety tips to prevent accidental poisonings in your home:

Store all toxic substances in locked cabinets, including medicines, and supplies kept in the garage, basement or attic. Items not usually considered poisonous that could severely injure a child and which should be stored safely are: alcoholic beverages, colognes and perfumes (because of their high alcoholic content), blue, mothballs, nail polish and remover, shaving cream and lotion, suntan creams, and all cosmetics.

Don't rely on "child-proof" containers alone; take the furniture polish or window cleaner you're using with you when you go to answer the door or telephone; discard old and unused medications by flushing them down the drain. Rinse and throw away the containers, never refer to medicine as "candy"; always give medications in a well lit room, to make sure you do not misread the label; and never give one child's medicine to another.

Store all toxic substances in their proper containers. Don't store kerosene in a pop bottle or rat poison in a cereal box, use only lead free paint, dispose of unfinished alcoholic drinks immediately. Don't wait until morning to clean up after the party, watch for potentially harmful substances that are mailed to your home, store harmful substances away from food, never leave children unattended near medications or potentially hazardous household products, remove all poisonous plants from your home, teach your children not to put wild berries or any plants in their mouths, and keep a bottle of syrup of Ipecac in your home. If someone in your home is poisoned, your doctor may advise its use to induce vomiting. It is inexpensive and can be purchased at any drug store without a prescription.

If you think someone has been poisoned, even if you aren't sure, call your doctor or hospital or local poison center, state your name, telephone number, and the name, age and weight of the person who may be poisoned, have the package or container available so you can read the label over the phone and estimate the amount ingested and the time the poisoning happened. Your doctor or the poison center will help you with additional instructions.

TIPS FOR BACKPACKING WITHOUT PAIN

The glorious outdoors seems to attract more and more weekend hikers. It's a good way to enjoy clear skies, glorious mountain views, cold, sweet streams. But, ouch, it may bring ugly back problems.

If one wants to use puns, you might say that hiking has come a long way, mountain-climbing is on the incline and backpacking carries a big responsibility.

Your doctor of chiropractic, who is a member of the health team who gives special attention to spinal mechanics and neurological, muscular and vascular relationships, reminds you that even if you survive your backpacking trip without a cut, sprain or fall, you can still do serious damage to your back, neck and shoulders.

One important thing you can do to protect your back is to own a good backpack. Those made of a "H" or "U" shaped aluminum frame are recommended. The best, most secure frames have either welded components, bolts or plastic couplings. Aluminum frames are lightweight, durable and weather resistant.

When selecting your backpack, be sure the shoulder straps and back bands have plenty of lightweight padding. This will protect your skin and prevent rubbing.

A relatively recent addition to the backpack is the hip belt. This distributes some of the weight to the hips, taking some of the stress off the back. Experts say the best hip belts are the one-piece type that "float" with the body instead of harnessing the hips rigidly to the frame. Get a pack belt that has a quick release buckle. This is especially important if you're going to hike near water or ice.

When picking your backpack, be sure to carefully inspect the stitching that holds it together. The stitching should be uniformly small and tight. There should be double rows of stitching at stress points which include the top and bottom corners, zipper ends and the places where the frame is attached. The way it is sewn determines support as well as strength and durability.

Next, try the pack on. Place some test objects into the pack for weight. This should give you an idea of fit and indicate if the padding on the shoulder pads and hip belt is sufficient.

Packing your backpack is second only in importance to selecting the correct pack. Mostly, it takes common sense. Be sure to distribute the weight evenly throughout the pack—especially side to side. Most packs have zippered side compartments so you can have the things you need most frequently at hand.

Now let us assume you have picked out a well-constructed backpack and it fits perfectly. What comes next? Probably the most important thing of all—conditioning. Don't go on a long hiking trip unless you are physically in shape. The most accident prone individual is the person who becomes careless because he cannot take the rigors of the activity.

In addition, the American Chiropractic Assocation recommends periodic health check-ups. This should include a thorough examination of the spine and nervous system, since the musculo-skeletal system is intimately affected by an activity such as backpacking.

Follow these 6 important tips for safe backpacking:

1. Pick the right pack.
2. Watch your footing.
3. Don't jump wide precipices.
4. Be careful of undercurrents in water.
5. Take frequent rest breaks.
6. Protect your neck, back, and shoulders from strain and injury.

Formaldehyde Vapor May Be Health Problem

State health commissioner George R. Pettersen, M.D., has declared that the use of building materials which give off formaldehyde vapor can be a "significant health problem" under certain circumstances.

In accordance with Minnesota Laws of 1980, Chapter 594, a bill on formaldehyde passed during the last session of the state legislature, Dr. Pettersen issued the following statement:

"Persons in newly constructed or remodeled residential environments may be exposed to the formaldehyde gas released from such materials as particle board, plywood and recently installed foam insulation. We have determined that a significant health problem is presented by the use of building materials that emit formaldehyde gases. This determination is consistent with the recent findings of the committee on toxicology of the National Academy of Sciences that:

(a) The first level of response to low airborne concentrations of formaldehyde appears to be irritational effects;

(b) Possible revised assessments of health implications need to await the results of ongoing and planned toxicologic studies; and

(c) At present, with all the uncertainties and variables of response, of humans to low airborne concentrations of formaldehyde which are attributable to building materials in residential environments, the formaldehyde should be maintained 'at the lowest practical concentration.' "

Resins manufactured with formaldehyde have been used to make building materials for several years, Dr. Pettersen said. Large amounts of the resins are used in products like plywood, particle board, insulation cloth and adhesives, and formaldehyde gases given off by these materials have been blamed for a variety of health problems.

Government officials nationwide report that they have received many complaints about the problem, Dr. Pettersen said. The reported symptoms range from eye and skin irritation to breathing difficulties, nosebleed and nausea.

Dr. Pettersen said that the Minnesota department of health investigated complaints about possible formaldehyde exposure in 486 homes during a 15-month period ending April 30. The air inside those homes was found to contain formaldehyde vapor in amounts ranging from undetectable to 3.29 parts per million. After conducting a similar investigation, Wisconsin proposed regulations which would limit levels of formaldehyde vapor inside new mobile homes.

Dr. Pettersen also noted that the Massachusetts department of health completely banned the sale of urea formaldehyde foam insulation in that state after holding public hearings on health problems allegedly caused by the insulating materials. The U.S. consumer products safety commission held a series of public hearings on the possible health effects of formaldehyde after receiving over 1,600 complaints about products containing urea formaldehyde. Last December the U.S. department of energy proposed standards for making and installing urea formaldehyde foam insulation.

Dr. Pettersen said that, as soon as possible, he plans to issue temporary rules limiting the permissible amount of formaldehyde vapor inside newly constructed dwelling units. These rules will establish a maximum limit of 0.5 parts per million for the air inside these dwelling units.

Permanent rules will be adopted only after the state health department holds public hearings on the formaldehyde issue, sometime later this year. Dr. Pettersen said evidence presented at the hearing may justify provisions in the permanent rules which would gradually lower the permissible level of formaldehyde.

Keep wheat fields cleaner with non-volatile DACAMINE.

Dacamine herbicide is bad news for broadleaf weeds. And good news for western wheat growers. Dacamine is the hard-hitting post-emergence herbicide that gets the tough weeds others leave behind. Including troublesome volunteer sunflower, thistle, velvetleaf and lots more. The powerful action of Dacamine penetrates waxy weed leaves and travels all the way down to the roots. Tough perennials are less likely to grow back.

Dacamine is non-volatile . . . stays put, right where you spray it. There are no vapors to damage nearby crops, even in the hottest weather.

Dacamine is the herbicide farmers use when their normal broadleaf weed control program fails. It's great for general weed control in fencerows, roadsides and around buildings, too.

Report Shows Health Hazards Of Marijuana

New evidence from officially sponsored studies reveals serious health hazards from marijuana, according to a special report from Consumers' Research organization.

In its April Cover story, "Twelve Things You Should Know About Marijuana," Consumers' Research magazine reviews recently obtained data on marijuana use, showing that the drug contains more carcinogens (cancer-producing agents) than tobacco, has negative effects on lung capacity, can affect heart function, and impairs driving and flying skills.

Also, the report reviews data showing that marijuana can affect reproductive functions in both men and women, can create serious psychological problems, especially for young people, and may be a source of brain damage.

Findings in the CR special report are drawn from recent official studies of the National Institute on drug abuse, the key official agency dealing with such questions. Consumers' Research is the nation's original consumer group, founded in 1928, specializing in product testing and comparisons.

In the past, says Consumers' Research, federal agencies and drug abuse officials issued only tentative and non-committal statements concerning marijuana. But now that over a thousand experimental projects on the drug have been completed, federal authorities are speaking with a firmer voice.

Some of the most recent findings contained in the CR special report:

—Unlike alcohol, which flushes itself out of the body in about 12 hours, 30 to 50 per cent of the active ingredient of marijuana (THC) remains in the body for a week and some of it will remain for as long as four to six weeks. A youngster who smokes even once or twice a week is never entirely free of the drug.

—Marijuana contains more cancer-causing hydrocarbons than tobacco; smoking five joints a week impairs breathing more seriously than smoking six packs of cigarettes a week; after exposure to marijuana smoke, defense systems in the lungs show more impairment than following exposure to tobacco smoke.

— Male users may suffer a reduction in their sperm count and reduced fertility. Women who use marijuana are more likely to have defective menstrual cycles. Animal studies indicate that marijuana affects levels of estrogen, the primary female hormone, in female subjects; marijuana may have a toxic effect on fetuses and embryos; THC can cross the placental barrier or be carried by the mother's milk.

— Smoking a marijuana cigarette often continues to impair coordination and reaction time long after the user has ceased to feel high. Experienced airline pilots who went through flight simulation after smoking marijuana, and who said they felt their performance has not suffered, actually showed significant deterioration in performance.

— Psychologists are unanimous in agreeing that marijuana use by children and adolescents can severely damage the emerging personality. It is quite common for users of any age to experience transient mild paranoia or "acute panic anxiety reactions."

— After heavy marijuana use (one joint a day for extended periods) rhesus monkeys have sustained permanent damage in deep-brain areas which affect emotion and behavior.

— Animal studies and unconfirmed human studies show that marijuana interferes with the production and effectiveness of white blood cells that help protect the body from disease.

The Happy Cooker

NEW PICNIC TABLE

Take it along . . . wherever you go . . . the unique new portable picnic table, The Happy Snacker™.

Whether you're vacationing camping, backyard entertaining, at the park or beach, it seems there's never enough space for sitting and/or serving. With this lightweight, easy-to-carry table that folds compactly for handling, transporting and storing, there'll be enough space to seat four adults comfortably (or six youngsters).

Crafted of high-strength steel tubing and redwood-stained wood slats, it is constructed in two units which latch together to form the traditional picnic table. Each unit can also be used separately as a bench or snack table.

Since it can be stored easily in garage, apartment or basement, it's ideal anytime when additional seating or table space is needed. Or you can pack it in the camper or station wagon for comfortable roadside or tailgate dining. A companion product to The Happy Cooker covered kettle grill, The Happy Snacker is available nationally in discount, department and hardware stores.

U Of M Seeks Increase In 2-Year Budget

University of Minnesota will ask the state for a $45 million increase in its appropriation over the 1981-83 biennium if the board of regents approves the request.

Regents heard details of the biennial request, which will be sent to Gov. Al Quie in October, at their meeting April 10 in Minneapolis.

Figures are still tentative and will be adjusted as price levels and construction schedules change and as the regents themselves make changes in the request. Faculty salaries have not yet been figured into the request, nor have increases in the supplies, expense and equipment budget, according to University president C. Peter Magrath.

Under the current proposal, the University would ask for an increase of $45,493,200 in its two-year budget, now estimated at $622 million. Of that amount, $24,225,800 would be used for operations and maintenance and the other $21,267,400 would be for specially designated projects.

Faculty salary estimates have so far not been figured, since salary requests are the product of lengthy internal consultation, Magrath said. "The faculty salary issue has got to be one of our top priorities," he said.

"No matter how bad a fiscal situation is, the worst we can do is sit back and accept the status quo," Magrath said.

At their March meeting, the regents voted to ask the legislature for an emergency salary increase for faculty members after Magrath had told the board that salaries have "eroded dreadfully" and that the institution is in danger of losing its best faculty members to other occupations.

University was unable to get a legislative hearing on the salary question during this session, but will be asked to make its case to a legislative committee later this spring or summer.

Proposed request calls for a net increase of 90.05 new faculty positions and 181.1 new civil service positions. St. Paul regent Mary Schertler questioned the difference.

"It does hurt our argument that we are interested in maintaining and improving the faculty when the increases are in civil service positions," Schertler said.

Magrath told the board that the new civil service positions were needed to augment faculty jobs. "These positions are clearly intended to make faculty time more productive," he said. "People need support staff."

Moorhead regent William Dosland said that asking for any new positions in an era of declining enrollment is unwise. "Why are we asking for 270 new positions in the face of declining enrollment?" he said. "In industry, when the work load drops off, the work force is reduced."

Dosland's question, Magrath said, sums up one of the major funding problems faced by research and service universities. "The work load is not dropping off," he said. Work load at a major research institution is not tied entirely to student population, he said.

"I'm not saying that we not plan for enrollment decline. We are. But we are much more than a teaching institution," Magrath said.

Eliminating Alternatives

Following editorial is from the Milbank (SD) Herald Advance:

The pursuit of energy alternatives in the United States is an interesting one to watch. One of the things that makes it so interesting is that we keep cutting our options. It's almost as if someone is deliberately trying to curtail not only the production of, but the use of, energy in the United States.

First came this shortage of oil. Believe what you will as to whether it's a real shortage or not. The fact remains that oil products are becoming increasingly expensive.

Next came the revulsion against the use of nuclear power generation. We want electricity, but we don't want to generate it radioactively.

Then came the violent opposition to power lines themselves. Again, we want electricity, but we want it to leap into our homes without being transmitted across farmland because the unseen voltage in the air is dangerous. The Reader's Digest says so and that's even more reliable then the Word, according to some.

Hydro power is fine because the gushing water is nature's own, but forget about getting it to our house with power lines. They are bad. We already told you that.

We could have wind generation of power at our house with the big windmill we plan to put up but YOU better not try to put one in your yard. We'll get the zoning commission after you.

So you think you're going to burn wood in that new fireplace you put in last year. Don't you know that the reason Africa is a growing desert wasteland is because people there are cutting all the wood? That's not going to happen in this country. We environmentalists are going to crack down on you wood-cutters. Besides the smoke emitting from your chimneys is polluting the air around there. The EPA should have something to say about that! After all, they made us quit burning leaves and trash. There really isn't that much difference.

Okay. We'll settle for a passive solar set-up to heat our house and bath water, but what about that cheese factory over there. What about that milking operation? What about the sausage plant? What about the pellet processors? What about the quarries? Can the lucky old sun keep them running.

How about a solid waste biomass plant. Lots of cities have those. That's a good deal. They burn solid waste from the landfills, produce steam and generate electricity. Oh, oh, we forgot. We don't want any transmission lines around, do we?

Well, forget it then. Turn off the lights, move to California and stay warm that way. Park you car, live off the land, use elbow grease. If you're successful, there will be progress and your new soceity can become industrialized in about 100 years. By then everyone will have forgotten that too much power is bad. They'll think the U.S. is really on the move.

Taxes Need Indexing

Following editorial is from the St. Cloud Times:

There's more than one windfall profits tax around these days. The most popular windfall tax, that on oil company profits, has been well publicized. But the other, a windfall tax on individual income, is almost a national secret.

This is a happy time of year for the Internal Revenue service. More happy than it should be, because the feds (just like the oil companies), are making a bundle on inflation.

We are all painfully aware of our 18 per cent annual inflation rate. It works against us by driving up prices while at the same time deflating our purchase power. Our money is worth less and less. The federal government, however, collects more and more. They do that simply by taxing us as if there were no inflation at all. We pay taxes from our inflated dollars as if that money were really worth the amount listed as our gross incomes.

For example, suppose a citizen earns $20,000 per year. In reality, that $20,000 cannot purchase what $10,000 could have a few years ago. But the government still taxes us as if it could. There is no indexing for inflation. And by next year the federal government will have stolen a 105 per cent tax increase over a four-year period without so much as a "by your leave."

There is plenty we can do about it. Many states, even Minnesota in a half-hearted way, have already passed income tax indexing. Under such systems tax rates are tied to "real" dollar income and adjusted for inflation. Tax rates go up only as purchasing power goes up, not just as income rises. And in this way, government cannot reap a windfall profit from our misfortune, which of course has been largely brought upon us by government in the first place.

Indexing taxes has worked well in the states, even though the Minnesota indexing system is only half what it should be and so new it has not had time to prove itself. It would work just as well at the federal level.

Indexing federal taxes would not be the same as a tax cut. It will not put an end to inflation. Only sound economics can achieve that. But it will stop the federal government from making a windfall profit at the expense of citizens suffering under the unfair burden of inflation.

Sen. Dave Durenberger, R-Minn., has introduced a bill — S. 1974 — to provide for a system of indexing federal taxes. This bill would save Americans $31 billion in 1981 alone, the senator predicts.

The U.S. Congress found justification in taxing oil companies for their windfall profits, but so far have not seen the wisdom of doing the same with the federal government. Durenberger's bill gives them that opportunity.

A Dangerous Ratio

Following editorial is from the Kanabec County Times at Mora:

It's been said before and it's worth repeating that the nation's social security system is heading for big trouble unless something is done.

Peter Drucker, one of the country's noted economists, recently pointed out that if the social security laws are not changed by 1995 — that's only 15 years away — there will be only two working adults to support each person collecting social security.

The ratio is already three to one and when the system was founded back in 1935, the ratio was 11 to one. By 1995, there will be so many persons collecting social security that the ratio of workers to collectors will be down to two to one.

There are many facets of the social security law that have long needed overhauling and as the pressures mount on the system, they might get accomplished. Drucker has stated that the threat of the system would not have developed and the burden on the working people of supporting retired people would not have become so great if the fixed 65 retirement age had not been written into the law in 1935.

He might have mentioned that there are many people who now choose to collect at the retirement age of 62 rather than wait until they're 65. Also people are living longer these days which extends the drain on the system.

The problems are evident and the solutions are not all that difficult but getting Congress to act prudently is another matter.

No Explanation

Writing in the Wall Street Journal, Vermont Royster had the following observation to make about his opinion of the United States today:

At the end of World War II ours was the preeminent world economy. The phrase "sound as a dollar" was an accepted truism all over the world, and it was in fact true. Everything, including gold, was measured against the dollar and every country clamored for dollars. Our economic strength seemed inexhaustible and our money almost beyond abuse.

Today we are a pitiful hulk of that once proud giant. And we weren't brought to that estate by floods, earthquakes, plagues or defeat in war and invasion by a foreign past, to decimation of our population or great climatic shifts turning fertile land into desert. We can point to no act of God to give us an excuse.

Everything that was done to wreck our money and bring our economy to its present estate was done by ourselves. By those who govern us, Presidents and others, of course. But by all of us really, that we have not held any of our governors accountable for their economic misgovernment.

Travel about the country today and you will meet depressed spirits, anger at what is happening, fear at what may happen. But neither in the corridors of power nor in the streets of cities will you find much sense of simple shame at what our country has done to itself.

And that is something I cannot explain.

Rudy Boschwitz reports to Minnesota

Department of Energy: Help or Hinderance?

I must admit that I was somewhat taken aback by recent reports that the Department of Energy actually ordered an oil company to raise the price of its gasoline by ten cents a gallon.

Fortunately for the public, the order was withdrawn before it was fully implemented. But, the very fact that the agency would order a company to raise its prices is astounding.

Whatever the reason, this kind of action has not been all that uncommon in the Department of Energy and I seriously question whether that Department is part of the solution or part of the problem.

Most revealing was a study done by the General Accounting Office on the gasoline allocation program during the gas shortage of 1979. To summarize, the report concluded that the program failed to meet its objective and that its ineffectiveness contributed to the long gas lines. This was the program that was supposed to assure adequate gasoline supplies to all parts of the country and more or less spread the shortage around evenly.

It didn't work the way it was supposed to and as a result some parts of the country had adequate supplies while others went without and lines formed.

Let's look at some of the comments made by the GAO in its report on the shortage and the failure to the Department of Energy to handle it properly:

+ "Its allocation program, prepared five years earlier and found by GAO and others to be seriously deficient, had not been revised or updated and DOE had not defined how it would implement the program.

+ "The day-to-day operations were poorly managed. The work pressures and the sheer volume of requests, coupled with staffing shortages, fueled a crisis atmosphere and the program floundered.

+ "Much of the workload that consumed DOE's resources could have been averted if program requirements had been better defined and understood and an improved base period had been used.

What the above indicates is that the Department of Energy was totally unprepared for the shortage. They had actually not updated their program since 1974 when the agency was formed shortly after the Arab oil embargo. You would think that the Department would have been aware that it could well be called on to meet just the kind of situation for which it was created.

The Department of Energy was formed partly to prevent a recurrence of the events of 1973 and 1974 when oil was in short supply and gas lines formed. It failed in its first test.

But why did it fail? Perhaps the GAO again can give us a hint other than the fact that the program was not up to date and at best poorly defined. Again I quote from the report:

'DOE's lack of information on supply and market activity as well as operational information, or its failure to use the information on hand, was a recurring problem which eroded the program's effectiveness." And further, "Also, because DOE did not have confidence in the monthly allocation fraction reports from the suppliers it did not use them as a basis for exercising its authority to ensure equitable distribution of supplies throughout the United States."

It appears from the report there was no equitable allocation of petroleum supplies, primarily gasoline, because the DOE either didn't have adequate information or didn't believe the information it did have.

Many suggestions can be made from this report, but the most important point is that the Department of Energy has not been doing part of its job. If they plan to stay in business, it is clear they had better put together an allocation plan which will work and continue to revise that plan as conditions dictate. Otherwise, there is little reason to continue funding the agency which to date has accomplished little and messed up the only challenge it had.

If the best we can expect from the DOE is orders to oil companies to raise prices, I honestly believe we would be better off without them. Somebody better put out the word that the agency was created to help find new energy sources, work toward energy independence and help out in emergencies when energy is short.

We really haven't come very much closer to our goals in the first two objectives and the department has appeared to have completely dropped the ball in the last objective. Let's get going boys.

Will you have peace of mind at thunderstorm time?

Farming is everybody's bread & butter.

Everyone who's ever planted a crop knows the worry that comes when storm clouds roll in. And everyone who's had good insurance protection knows the peace of mind good coverage can bring.

Farmers who carry crop hail insurance through Production Credit Association have peace of mind plus. They know that when they have a claim their PCA representative will have an interest in seeing that they receive a fair settlement.

PCA members have a choice of policies, standard or deductible. Rates are realistic, based on probability of hail in your area.

Take away risk, worry and tension with crop hail insurance available from PCA. Then you can enjoy summer weather and have peace of mind at thunderstorm time.

SPECIAL LEGISLATIVE REPORT Part 2

PLASTIC WELL CASINGS

New well drilling technology has outdated steel casings for wells. Plastic pipe (technically known as PVC) is less expensive and does not corrode, thereby extending the life of a well. However, old health regulations precluded it from being used in northwestern Minnesota. Upon the request of many well drillers in our area, Representative Corbid and I passed legislation in the 1979 session permitting plastic to be used. This should be of real benefit to all who are having new wells drilled in our area.

THE CITY OF ROSEAU AND THE FLOOD PLAIN

Local governments situated in flood areas are to adopt flood plain ordinances regulating building so damage from floods is minimized. The City of Roseau had enacted a plan, but it was disapproved by the Department of Natural Resources. That disapproval came because the plan used a flood level one foot lower than the Department of Natural Resources required. The city felt so strongly about this that they sued the Department of Natural Resources to get approval of their plan. I drafted a bill which was enacted into law in 1979 overruling the Department of Natural Resources regulations and supporting the City of Roseau's position. Roseau was then able to proceed as they wanted to in the first place, avoiding a lengthy and costly lawsuit.

INCOME TAX CREDITS

We were able to make some very constructive changes in the Minnesota income tax structure in recent legislative sessions. The one measure we passed, about which I am particularly pleased, is the indexing of the income tax brackets according to a percentage of the change in consumer price index. I spoke about this kind of reform during my 1976 campaign for the State Senate, and I'm happy to see it enacted.

The standard deduction was moved up from $1,000 to $2,000. And, beginning in 1981, this deduction will also increase according to the consumer price index.

The personal credits allowed on the Minnesota income tax went up to $55 for 1979 and to $60 in 1980 for each member of the family. After 1980, these credits will also be indexed to inflation.

The income tax credits allowed families of limited incomes were increased for 1979 and in 1980 will be revised into an alternative tax providing tax relief for working men and women.

An important change for people retiring will be an exclusion from Minnesota income taxes of up to $100,000 from the sale of their home by those persons over the age of 55.

KARLSTAD VOLUNTEER FIREMEN AND THIEF RIVER FALLS POLICE PENSIONS

State pension laws for firemen require ten years of service in an incorporated firefighters' relief association. Karlstad incorporated their relief association in 1976, and this requirement excluded many members who had served in the previous volunteer firemen's group which was merged into the new relief association. Legislation was passed in 1978 enacting a new provision permitting those prior years of service to be counted toward the retirement provided under the new incorporated relief association.

At the request of the City of Thief River Falls and its police employees, legislation was secured transferring the independent Thief River Falls Relief Association into the state-wide Safety Public Employees Retirement Association. We were also able to provide protection in that legislation maintaining all pension rights of existing present members of the police force. This transfer should reduce pension costs somewhat to the City and provide better benefits to the police employees.

Dairy Industry Notes Highest Year Since '65

U.S. dairy industry produced more milk last year than in any year since 1965. Milk production in 1979 totaled approximately 123.6 billion pounds, up 1.7 per cent or 2.0 billion pounds from 1978.

This increase in production occurred despite declining numbers of milk cows. In a trend toward fewer, more efficient cows that has continued for several decades, the average number of milk cows in the U.S., at 10,767,000 in 1979, was down .7 per cent from 1978.

Increased production per cow made up the slack. Production per cow was up two per cent or about 234 pounds in 1979. Each cow in the U.S. produced an average of 11,474 pounds of milk. That's 1,334 gallons, or a year's supply of fluid milk and cream for 40 Americans — from just one cow.

States with the largest milk production last year were: Wisconsin, 21.95 billion pounds; California, 12.55 billion pounds; New York, 10.68 billion pounds; Minnesota, 9.15 billion pounds; and Pennsylvania, 8.06 billion pounds.

Production of many manufactured dairy products also increased last year. There were 21.9 billion pounds of American type cheese produced in the U.S. in 1979, 5.5 per cent more than in the previous year and a record high for the second straight year. Production of all types of cheese, except cottage cheese, totaled 3.71 billion pounds, also up 5.5 per cent. Americans consumed approximately 17.9 pounds of cheese each in 1979, 3.4 per cent more than the year before.

Butter production dropped only slightly; it was down .9 per cent to 985 million pounds. Per capita consumption of butter remained about the same as in 1978. There were 30 million fewer pounds of creamed cottage cheese produced last year, for a 2.8 per cent drop to 847 million pounds. However, production of lowfat cottage cheese was up 2.6 per cent over 1978, totaling 155 million pounds.

Less nonfat dry milk for human food also was produced. The year's total of 907 million pounds was down 1.4 per cent from 1978. Manufacture of frozen products also declined overall last year. While ice cream production was up slightly, totaling 818 million gallons, production of ice milk, at 294 million gallons, was down 4.6 per cent. Sherbet production dropped eight per cent to 45.8 million gallons.

During the 1970s, total yearly milk production fluctuated from year to year, reaching a high of 120.0 billion pounds in 1972 and dropping to a low of 115.3 billion pounds in 1975 before beginning a steady increase to 1979's figure of 123.6 billion pounds. The 1979 production was 6.4 per cent, or 7.5 billion pounds, greater than 1969's total of 116.1 billion pounds.

Number of milk cows in the U.S. dropped every year during the past decade, and in 1979 was down 12.5 per cent or 1.5 million from the 12.3 million cows in 1969. Milk production per cow increased dramatically over the past 10 years, up a whopping 21.6 per cent or an average of 2,040 pounds for each cow in the nation.

There also was considerable change in the production of many manufactured dairy foods during the '70s. Most striking is the 86.5 per cent increase in total cheese output from 1.99 billion pounds in 1969 to 3.71 billion pounds in 1979. Butter production was down 11.9 per cent during the decade, and there was a 37.5 per cent drop in the production of nonfat dry milk for human food. Ice cream production was up 6.8 per cent.

Communicative Disorders Top US Handicaps

America's most common type of handicapping condition is also one of the least visible.

Some 22 million people are affected, but if you passed one of them on the street, you'd never know anything was wrong. Unless, maybe, you tried to strike up a conversation.

"Communicative disorders" — problems with speech or hearing — affect more Americans than heart disease, venereal disease, paralysis, epilepsy, blindness, tuberculosis, cerebral palsy, muscular dystrophy and multiple sclerosis combined. One out of every 15 Americans has some degree of hearing loss, authorities say, and one in 20 has some sort of problem with speech or language.

In an effort to make the public more aware of communicative disorders, May has been designated as National Better Speech and Hearing month. A major goal of the observance is to alert people with speech or hearing handicaps about the kinds of help available to them. The message, according to the event's organizers, is that "you don't have to live with it."

Effects of a speech or hearing problem can be profound, especially on a child. A speech or hearing disorder can make it difficult to communicate with others, to learn, or to function socially. It can even lead to emotional problems. The hearing impaired child is likely to have trouble speaking, since children learn to talk by imitating the speech of others.

Authorities emphasize that most people with speech or hearing disorders can be helped, whether through medical treatment, surgery, therapy, or the use of a hearing aid. It is also possible to detect a speech or hearing problem very early in life. In some cases, a hearing problem can be diagnosed before a child reaches three months of age. A speech problem will often become evident by the time a child is 2½ to 3 years old.

Nonetheless, these problems often go undiagnosed or untreated. Hearing disorders, in particular, often seem to be ignored. Of an estimated 16 million hearing impaired persons in this country, only 10 million have had a medical examination to determine the cause of their problem, and only 30 per cent of those who've been examined have actually had a hearing test.

At the same time, the number of people with hearing problems has increased dramatically, nearly doubling between 1962 and 1977. Some observers attribute part of the increase to the high levels of noise in our urban environment. Others point out that older people, who tend to have a high incidence of hearing loss, represent a growing segment of our population. It has been estimated that 30 per cent of all people over 65, and half of those over 85, have some degree of hearing loss.

A number of options are available to people who know or suspect that they have speech or hearing problems. One possibility is to consult a physician — either your own doctor, or a specialist called an otolaryngologist, who deals with problems of the ear, nose and throat. Other professionals who can be of help include audiologists and speech pathologists who are specially trained to evaluate hearing and speech problems.

Help may also be available from your local community health services agency or public health nursing service, or from a public school speech clinician. The choice will depend on your needs, and on what's available.

THE VOICE of BUSINESS

Telling It Not The Way It Is

When you watch television news, do you normally feel you are getting a story from a reporter's point of view, or from nobody's point of view? The question is important because television is the prime source of news for two-thirds of the public — an impact and penetration that gives it tremendous power to shape our views. Logically then, any persistent bias or exclusion of a major point of view could have damaging consequences for the entire society.

Unfortunately, several recent developments indicate this problem exists, and is potentially more serious than is commonly realized. In an exhaustive study "Television Evening News Covers Nuclear Energy," The Media Institute, a non-profit foundation in Washington, D.C., analyzed every nightly network news story on nuclear energy from August 5, 1968 to April 20, 1979, 24 days after the Three Mile Island (TMI) accident. The Institute came up with two startling conclusions:

First, a viewer relying upon network evening news broadcasts is a primary source of information could not have learned enough to make a rational judgement of the risks and benefits of nuclear power; and, network reporting, editing and presentation of nuclear power introduced a bias into supposedly objective broadcasts.

The Media Institute study shows that in the period prior to the accident at TMI on March 28, 1979, "coverage of nuclear energy was just 26-100th of one per cent of the time available for news stories on the evening telecasts of the three major networks." Coverage did pick up dramatically after the accident, but the Institute's review of the videotapes during both periods "indicates they focused mostly on protests and charges by anti-nuclear groups rather than generation of electricity, or the risks and benefits."

The study uncovered persistent bias — Slanted lead-ins and closings critical of nuclear power. For example, nearly half of the coverage both during and after the accident contained lead-ins and closings that were biased against nuclear energy. What's more, of the 10 most commonly cited "outside sources" interviewed by the networks during the period preceding TMI, seven were against nuclear power.

After independently viewing all the network tapes studied by The Media Institute, a leading psychiatrist, Dr. Robert L. DuPont, concluded: "Fear was the motif of the entire series of nuclear stories. . . Voices of reassurance are constantly being undermined by the fear process itself. . . Ralph Nader said essentially that nuclear power is the nation's technological Viet Nam and that the government and experts have a vested interest in promoting nuclear energy. What this implies is that almost anybody who knows anything about nuclear energy has an investment in it, and therefore cannot be believed, unless, of course, he is in that minority who are saying nuclear power is as bad as you think, or worse. It is amazing."

The conclusions of the Institute, and of Dr. DuPont, have been indirectly reinforced by the president of Dartmouth College, Dr. John Kemeny, who chaired the special Kemeny commission created by President Carter to investigate TMI. Kemeny recently noted — "We have found that the work of one hundred well-known scientists and that of one dissenter will get equal treatment by the media. This does not seem a fair treatment of scientific subjects." Kemeny adds: "I don't understand why the media does not hire people who can understand science and technology. . . I would also wish they could find more time to devote to serious discussion of fundamental issues."

Amen. Perhaps scientists will now join business leaders in wondering whether they really have the right of free speech. Last year, the Kaiser Aluminum and Chemical Corp. tried to buy a series of television commercials, not to advocate, but merely to stimulate public thought about private enterprise, energy and regulation. The networks turned Kaiser down cold. Just recently, Mobil Oil offered to buy the 15-second commercials on the network newsbreaks to transmit such basic information as: How many pennies of profit it makes on a gallon of gas, its rate of return on sales, assets, shareholders' equity etc. The networks said: NO.

When leaders in science and industry feel they are not receiving fair news coverage, and when they are then prohibited from purchasing airtime to stimulate thought or explain their positions, one conclusion can fairly be drawn: They are being denied their First Amendment right of free speech. Isn't it time they start to fight back, protest publicly and consider spending their advertising dollars elsewhere? After all, economic freedom is the foundation of all our political and personal freedoms. Once we begin to strip the scientist, the oil company, and the small businessman of their right to defend this freedom, we have begun the process that denies freedom to all.

Do-It-Yourself Successfully

CUT-TO-FIT HOME SAVES BUILDING TIME

With only average skills, you may be able to put together an architect-designed house at a conventional home price—and it can be as energy-efficient as it is beautiful.

You can select one as small as 24 by 24 feet, or as large as 32 by 36, and provide for your needs—perhaps for a lifetime—since energy-saving features like a revolutionary insulating shell and adaptability to solar heat are built in.

As the buyer, you provide the foundation—full basement, crawl space or slab, and flooring to cover it. Then, you use a precut shell called the Timber Kit, featuring imposing post and beam construction.

Depending on the size and design you select, the Kit costs from $16,000 to $24,000, and if you're handy enough to do all the interior work yourself, the completed cost of your house will be only about twice what you pay for the kit.

If, on the other hand, you subcontract the foundation, plumbing and other necessary jobs, you can expect to multiply the basic Timber Kit cost by 2.3 to 2.5, says Timber Kit, a division of Habitat Specialty Buildings, Inc., P.O. Box 704, Amherst, Massachusetts 01002. You can save again because the house's kiln-dried pine siding is prestained with a water repellent oil.

These homes come in six country or contemporary designs that provide for installing passive solar systems.

Rich in styling yet affordable, the kit concept in home building features an exposed beam, cathedral-ceilinged interior that you can rearrange to suit yourself.

Houses of 2,800 square feet, including a loft, use about 800 gallons of oil a year for heat and hot water in a northern climate. A conventional home often uses up to 2,800 gallons annually, so the Timber Kit home can cost considerably less to heat.

When heat rises to the rafters, a fan in a high-return duct system brings it back down and recirculates it. In summer, natural cooling is created by venting a skylight or using a small exhaust fan.

Another energy-saving feature is rolling windows made by Alcoa Building Products, Inc., a subsidiary of the Aluminum Company of America. These were selected for their quality of manufacture, airtightness, appearance and national availability.

Their rigid vinyl thermal break separating the outside and inside metal is especially important in that the windows are unlike other brands that use a simple gasket.

Another feature of the windows is a cam-lock that holds the sliding panels together when the windows are closed. This assures an excellent seal to prevent air infiltration.

Installation of the window is easy, too, because window openings in the house are precut for a good fit. At the site, you hold the window up, put a level on it and nail it right into the opening. And, like the rest of the house, these windows meet all the building codes—even those for earthquake states.

No crane or special tools are required for building a Timber Kit home. A do-it-yourselfer doesn't even need a saw until he's cutting siding or trimming the roof deck because everything is supplied in cut-to-fit form.

All you need is common sense, and that makes good sense when your time and money is important.

NEW COOKBOOK OFFERS RECIPES FOR CHILDREN

Good nutrition can be fun for children to learn when they begin to cook in their own kitchens. It's easy for them to do when they follow a recipe and understand the "ground rules" of the kitchen in advance. And now there's a new recipe booklet that can help get them started with recipes developed and tested in the Betty Crocker Kitchens and tested by 8- to 12-year-olds in their own homes under adult observation.

Cheeriodle Cookbook for Kids is a 12-page booklet filled with interesting recipes and color photographs of good-tasting, easy-to-make snacks, salads, cookies and desserts, including a special "Cheeriodle Brunch" menu to serve the whole family. All recipes use a favorite cereal of many children, Cheerios®, as one of the ingredients. It's ready and waiting on the kitchen shelf to be used in Crunchy Apple Salads, Pizza Snack, Yogurt Brunch Sundaes and other recipes.

The "Fantastic Food Groups" are included in the Cheeriodle Cookbook for Kids, with examples of foods from each of the following: Valuable Vegetables and Fruits, Magical Milk, Marvelous Meats and Beautiful Breads and Cereals, as well as Exciting Extras.

Copies of this new recipe booklet are available on an individual basis by sending two Cheerios box bottoms or 25 cents with name, address and zip code to: Cheeriodle Cookbook for Kids, Box 6, Dept. 825, Minneapolis, MN 55460.

31st Annual NW Dairy Day To Be Held Here Tuesday

For the 31st time in as many years Northwest Dairy day will be held in Thief River Falls Tuesday with the city parking lot on Knight avenue between Second and Third streets again serving as the show site. Public is encouraged to visit the dairy show throughout the day. First scheduled event is a showmanship demonstration at 10 a.m.

For the first time in the history of the dairy show this year, one of the judges will be a woman. Sheila Harsdorf of Beldenville, Wis., will join Paul Schroeder of Fergus Falls in judging the show which has approximately 120 entries in the six dairy breeds of Holstein, Guernsey, Brown Swiss, Jersey, Milking Shorthorn and Ayrshire.

This year's Dairy day program contains a summary of the Northwest Dairy day history from its origin in 1950. Stuart McLeod, manager of the Thief River Falls cooperative creamery, originated the show that year and served as president of the dairy improvement association for 24 years. He stepped down as president in 1974 and died on the 28th annual dairy day in 1977.

Although the decline in number of dairy herds in the area has reduced the number of entries in the show over the years (there were 301 entries in 1954), the quality of animals exhibited is much improved over early years of dairy day. Judges have consistently commented on the quality of dairy animals exhibited at the show here.

The dairy princess contest started that first year with 40 girls entered and 15-year-old Mariah Mueller of Mahnomen crowned as princess, winning a trip to the state fair. Northwest Dairy day started a series of similar events which eventually became state-wide and nation-wide. The dairy princess contest was expanded and the Princess Kay of the Milky Way state contest was formed to select a dairy spokesman from among regional princess contest winners.

At dairy day this year the crown of Northwest Dairy Princess will be passed on by Tracy Foldesi, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Emil Foldesi of Greenbush, to a new winner selected from among 18 county contestants. Coronation is scheduled for about 3:15 p.m. at the dairy show site on Knight avenue.

Receiving a purebred dairy calf this year as a result of showing the grand champion grade animal at the 1979 dairy day show will be Beth Brinkman of Roseau.

"At the heart of our program is the fact that every contestant receives a participation award, whether he or she wins in the competition or not," stated Klem Gigstad of Thief River Falls, president of the sponsoring dairy improvement association. "We are able to provide these awards through the generous contributions of Thief River Falls area business places and banks and creameries throughout the 11-county area comprising Region One of the American Dairy association of Minnesota."

AN INVITATION to attend Northwest Dairy day in Thief River Falls Tuesday is extended by Tracy Foldesi of Greenbush, 1979 Northwest Dairy Princess. Tracy will join Minnesota's Princess Kay of the Milky Way in coronation of the new Region One dairy princess during the afternoon ceremonies, and will visit the dairy show site during the day as well as participating in a luncheon for queen candidates at noon.

Arctic Reports Fiscal '80 Loss Of $11,559,000

Arctic Enterprises, Inc., today reported a net loss of $5,399,000, or $1.72 per common share, for the quarter ended March 31. This compares with a loss of $1,087,000, or $.34 per common share, for the same period a year ago. Net sales during the fourth quarter totaled $22,152,000, down from $30,091,000 for the fourth quarter of fiscal 1979. Fourth quarter results are net of a $977,000 tax benefit.

These results contributed to a net loss for fiscal 1980 of $11,559,000, or $3.67 per common share, compared to a net income of $1,907,000, or $.61 per common share in fiscal 1979. Sales were $185,526,000 compared to last year's volume of $175,180,000.

Commenting on fourth quarter results, Arctic President Kenneth Severinson said, "The fourth quarter loss, which was projected earlier, includes provisions for manufacturing plant consolidation costs, offset by a gain on the sale of a facility, plus heavy costs of snowmobile dealer marketing assistance programs to reduce dealer inventory levels. Restrictive consumer credit softened fiberglass boat sales during the quarter."

Fiscal 1980 sales were adversely affected by lack of snow in Arctic's principal market areas in the U.S. and Canada during the 1979-80 selling season and by economic factors including rising interest rates and tightening consumer credit. Industry-wide unit sales of snowmobiles were down 27 per cent from the previous season.

Severinson said that decreased unit sales left the company and its dealers with higher than normal inventories which had been financed at record high interest rates. Arctic has planned fiscal 1981 production to attain normal inventory levels at the end of the 1980-1981 selling season, and has implemented strategic plant consolidations and cost reduction programs.

"Because of these programs," Severinson added, "we believe Arctic will approach a breakeven level in fiscal 1981. We are confident of the continued support of our bankers, dealers and vendors."

SWCD Poster Contest Won By 6th Graders

Four sixth graders from the Goodridge school claimed $5 prizes in the conservation poster contest sponsored by the Pennington soil and water conservation district. General theme for the contest was "Water".

Winning the county contest and having their entries sent on for judging on the area level in September were Jennifer Race, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Loren Race; Stormy Bates, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A.J. Bates; Kim Sjulestad, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Sjulestad; and Lori Sjulestad, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Sjulestad.

Wood Carving Topic Of Art Council Effort

Under local sponsorship of the Thief River Falls community arts council, an exhibition entitled "Scandinavian Wood" will be available for public viewing beginning Thursday at Northern state bank in Thief River Falls.

The exhibition was organized by the University of Minnesota gallery and is circulated with the cooperation of the agricultural extension service and continuing education in the arts, a department of continuing education and extension. Object in the collection will remain on display through July 11 during regular banking hours.

To provide further insight into woodcarving, a film entitled "Woodcarver" will be shown for the public on Thursday at 8 p.m. at the public meeting room in the regional library in Thief River Falls.

On Saturday at 1 p.m. a University of Minnesota theatre group known as "The America Chest" will present a documentary of Scandinavian immigrant experiences from 1850 to 1900. The performance will be in the city auditorium and refreshments will be served by the Sons of Norway lodge following the program.

Qualified host families are now being sought for Youth for Understanding high school exchange students who will be arriving in July and August.

Families may contact: Youth for Understanding, 4829 Minnetonka Blvd., St. Louis Park, MN 55416, phone 612-920-2415.

TAKING THE PLUNGE as an unwilling subject, carpentry instructor Dean Ornquist of the Thief River Falls area vocational-technical institute tested the water in the pond near Valley home Thursday morning. Students of the AVTI carpentry program, who had worked on a remodeling project to complete a building at the park, were honored with their instructors and others with a lunch sponsored by park donor Lowell Swenson. In an impromptu bit of boyish enthusiasm, a number of carpentry students picked up Ornquist, carried him bodily down the wide walkway from the remodeled building (visible in the background) and deposited him unceremoniously in the pond. The head-first plunge was a result of attempting to drag one of the students in with him. The AVTI carpentry students have completed their work on the building — which housed the former Balvin Implement company — and it will be used as a senior citizen activities shop.

Activities To Begin Today At Library Here

Summer reading and activity program sponsored by the Northwest regional library began last Monday with registration celebration for youngsters of all ages.

Spaces remain in all the activity sessions planned and there's still time to sign up for the summer reading program.

This year's theme, "Discover Every Creature Under the Sun at Your Library," will be illustrated, today at 2 p.m. until 3:30 p.m. when Movie Mondays are conducted in the library meeting room. No registration is necessary to come to any or all of Movie Mondays.

Summer safari begins June 17. Registration is required and can be completed by visiting the library. Designed for those between the ages of four and eight, the program meets six different times. Each session is offered three times, Tuesdays from 1:30 to 2:30 p.m.; Wednesdays from 1:30 to 2:30 p.m.; and Wednesdays from 3 to 4 p.m. Children registering for summer safari will be invited to imagine the library as an ocean, a prehistoric jungle, a circus and a zoo. Stories, games, movies, crafts and field trips will be included in the program.

For older children, ages eight to thirteen, the library offers Creature Caravan Thursdays beginning June 19 from 2 to 3:30 p.m. In this series children will participate in crafts, demonstrations, films and field trips. Pre-registration must also be made for this series.

Children wishing to participate in the Summer Reading program may do so without participating in any other scheduled activity. They can register by visiting the library and setting a goal for their summer reading. After that has been done the child should report to the library staff member each time a book has been read. Each child reaching his or her goal will receive an invitation to the grand finale award ceremony and pet show scheduled August 13.

All summer programs at the library are free of charge and open to anyone within the age guidelines. More information can be obtained by calling the library at 681-4325.

Family From Australia Reunited At Plummer

by Bonnie Reed
Times Reporter

Graduation from Pershing high school in Plummer was a unique experience for Kym Morris, Youth for Understanding (YFU) exchange student, and for her parents who came all the way from Sydney, Australia to witness the ceremony.

Kym, 16, has been living with the John Helley family in Plummer since last August (feature story on her was included in the April 23 edition of the Times).

Brian Morris, Kym's father, described the graduation ceremony May 23 at Pershing high school in Plummer as "moving".

"The slow march when all the students entered the gymnasium in pairs was the most moving," added Kym's mother Mavis.

The theme, "We Challenge the Future and Cherish the Past," outlined the graduation ceremonies at the school. "That small phrase means a lot," Brian said. And to Kym, the ceremony was "really grand," she said, smiling.

In Australia, there is no graduation after high school — only after a student completes his university classes, Mrs. Morris said. A student's eligibility for the university is determined by a final exam of 500 points, during the student's senior year at school.

Kym's speech at baccalaureate before parents and friends also seemed "moving", according to her parents. Kym's description of her stay with the Helley's for the past 10 months, and her statements of her feelings toward her American family and her friends, brought tears to many people in the audience, they said.

Kym's period of depression before Christmas last year (which she feels is common for anyone leaving their homeland for a long period of time) had left her during our previous interview with her in April. And her joyous feelings were evident during our talk with her last Thursday.

"These last few months really went fast," she said. "I could hardly keep up!"

The Morris's had never been out of Australia before they came to the United States, Brian said. And his comments were quite favorable to living in a town of 300 people for the past few days.

"I'd prefer a place like Plummer to settle down in rather than a bigger city like New York," he said.

"But we wouldn't change Sydney for any other place in the world," his wife added.

"I think a person finds comfort and security in the place he's born in and familiar with," Brian said.

His first impression of the United States was that, "it is a very big country," and that there are many "warm" people here.

The Morris's attended graduation ceremonies May 23 before leaving on a vacation to the East Coast, visiting such places as New York and

400 Attend Garden Valley Phone Meeting

More than 400 persons attended the 74th annual meeting of the Garden Valley telephone company in Erskine on Tuesday.

L. J. Lee, Bagley; Oris Moen, Fertile; and Armond Sannes, McIntosh were unanimously re-elected to three-year terms on the cooperative's board of directors.

President Lee reported that the board of directors recently authorized the payment of capital credits equity to members for the years 1958 and 1959. He stated that checks totaling more than $96,000 have been sent to persons having service with Garden Valley during these years.

General manager Lawrence Ware provided members with a comprehensive review of the cooperative's operations in 1979 and the decade of the 1970's. Noting Garden Valley's $12.2-million increase in plant facilities during the last 10 years, he emphasized that "This is not growth for growth's sake. It is growth required by the constantly increasing service needs of our members. During the past decade, most of Garden Valley's exchanges were upgraded to all one-party service with buried cable facilities. With the cutover of Erskine in January, 1980, 23 exchanges have now been upgraded. The only remaining exchange — McIntosh — is scheduled for cutover to one-party service later this year."

Members attending the meeting were also provided with an update of the many new services and types of equipment now available and a look ahead at the concept of "total communications", which will be the objective of the cooperative in the 1980's.

Karen Theis of Bagley and Greg Kaster, Erskine, reported on some of the beneficial information obtained during their attendance at the 1979 annual meeting of the Minnesota Association of Cooperatives. They, and Kelly Brooks of Gonvick, represented Garden Valley as delegates to the cooperative conference for youth in October last year.

FmHA Grants Homeowners Repair Loans

Homeowners in Pennington and Red Lake counties who need repairs and weatherization improvements on their homes may be eligible for a repair loan from Farmers Home administration, a USDA agency.

Improvements designed to save energy, such as insulation, window and door improvements and other repairs, will in many cases save enough in heating costs to offset the repayments needed on the housing loan.

Loans may be made up to $7,500 at a one per cent interest rate. A real estate mortgage is taken for loans above $2,500. It is possible for an applicant, who is 62 years or older, to obtain a portion of the repair needs through a grant. For the very low income senior citizen, a full grant up to $5,000 may be possible.

Those families who are not able to obtain commercial credit, and who need this type of assistance, should write, call or visit Francis J. Kochmstedt at North Dale street, Box 486, Thief River Falls, MN 56701, phone 218-681-2843.

Pesticide supplies for the 1980 crop season are expected to be adequate for overall farm needs, the U.S. Department of Agriculture says.

Motorcycle Licenses Are Reclassified

A new rule dividing licensed Minnesota motorcyclists into two classes of operators became effective June 1, according to John P. Sopsic, commissioner of the department of public safety. Motorcyclists already licensed will not be affected by the change, and requirements for operating motorized bicycles (mopeds) will also remain unchanged.

New rule restricts people who take their road test on a two-wheeled motorcycle of 250 cc or less piston displacement to operate only that and smaller sized vehicles. People taking the test on larger machines will continue to be allowed to ride any size motorcycle.

Change is detailed in a new "Minnesota Motorcycle-Moped- Motorbike Manual" just published. Commissioner Sopsic said, "The change was made to prevent people from taking a road test on a very small motorcycle and then operating the larger machines which handle differently."

Motorcycle license applicants who pass their test on a 250cc or smaller machine will be issued a "B" card noting their restriction to the smaller cycle. The "B" card must be carried with their license. They will have to present a record of examination passed in the previous year and then retake the road test on a machine larger than 250cc to upgrade their license.

Applicants seeking to move up to large motorcycles will be subject to the same permit restrictions on their large bike as a new license seeker (no passengers, no night or freeway driving and helmet required.

Any licensed driver may continue driving mopeds without taking an additional test. Unlicensed individuals 15 years or older may drive a moped after passing written and skills tests.

Legal definition of a moped or motorized bicycle continues to be a vehicle equipped with fully operable pedals, an engine smaller than 50cc, and capable of going no faster than 30 miles per hour on level ground.

Key provision defining the moped is the capability of being propelled by human power. An otherwise identical machine without pedals and with an electric ignition is legally considered a motorcycle, subject to testing, licensing and insurance requirements of a motorcycle.

Auto Check-Up Can Save Your Vacation Time

Due to national interest in fuel conservation and the high cost of gasoline, many Americans will decide to vacation closer to home, discovering varied and interesting vacation spots in their own home area.

Whether you travel near or far this summer, remember that your car still needs a vacation check-up before you hit the road, says the Automotive Information council (AIC). A vacation check-up can help correct problems that have been neglected and reduce chances of a costly breakdown and a spoiled vacation.

Look at the condition of the tires. Don't start a vacation with worn-out tires. If the tires fail on the road you won't have a chance to shop for a sale price.

Check the tire pressure too, including the spare. Improper pressure can shorten tire life and even lead to tire failure. Pressure can be checked simply with a tire gauge that can be purchased for a dollar or two. Severely underinflated tires can waste up to a gallong of every 20 gallons of gasoline.

Inspect under the hood. Look at the hoses and belts. Belts should give less than one-half inch under pressure from your thumb. If any hoses or belts look soft, frayed or cracked, have them replaced. Look for rusty hose clamps and any loose wiring.

Check all the fluid levels — brake fluid, engine oil, radiator coolant, windshield, washer container and transmission fluid. Fill the gas tank too.

Don't forget to check one of the most-neglected safety items, the wiper blades. Worn blades are little help if you get caught in a heavy down-pour.

Finally, take some time to review the maintenance schedule in the owner's manual, says AIC. This list will serve to remind you of items — such as a tune-up, oil change and lubrication — that might have been overlooked.

Proper maintenance, says AIC, could save your vacation, as well as saving expensive gasoline.

HOW'S YOUR HEALTH?

The length of time that a patient is in surgery can sometimes be a cause of concern to relatives and friends. In most cases there is no reason for the added concern, advises the Minnesota Medical Association.

It is seldom wise to judge the seriousness of surgery by the length of time which the patient is in the operating room. Only a portion of the time which a patient is away from his room is necessary for the actual surgical procedure. Considerable time is necessary to "prep" or prepare the patient for surgery.

The patient must be placed on the operating table which together with other equipment necessary for that particular operation must be properly adjusted.

An anesthetic must be administered, and the actual surgery must be performed. The necessary dressings must be applied following surgery and the patient must be sufficiently awakened to be transported from the operating room. With the present system of holding rooms outside the surgical theater, the patient is sent for about one-half hour before the scheduled surgery.

Sometimes there may be a delay in the scheduled surgery because a previously scheduled operation may require additional time. The anesthesiologist will play an important role in "prepping" the patient in the hospital room before being taken to surgery. He will carefully evaluate the patient's chart, noting blood chemistry studies, serum potasium readings, homoglobin, allergies, and chest x-rays. The anesthesiologist will also want to know which medications the patient is taking and if there is any previous record of complications related to the administration of anesthetics. On the basis of a careful evaluation of these factors the anesthesiologist will select an anesthetic which may require additional time.

The patient will ordinarily go to a recovery room following surgery. The length of time which the patient will spend here will vary depending upon the type and amount of anesthesia used. If the length of surgery has been brief and not much anesthesia used the patient may be out of the recovery room within a half-hour. But if the surgery has involved a considerable length of time and greater amounts of anesthesia, the patient could conceivably be in the recovery room three or four hours.

While in the recovery room the patient is monitored very carefully. The patient who has undergone rather severe surgery and needs special monitoring of blood pressure, intake and output or otherwise requires special assistance may be placed in intensive care to prevent the occurrence of post-surgery complications.

By more than two to one, Americans say gasohol should receive more government support than synthetic fuels. That's according to a recent Department of Agriculture survey.

$7 Million Consumed By '79 Farm Fires

Minnesota had 740 reported farm fires in 1979, causing 19 injuries but no deaths, according to the state fire marshal's report.

State farmers, already hurt by inflation, lost an estimated $7 million from fires. Product storage was the leading source of fire loss with buildings a close second.

Loss from crop storage and related building fires was about $1.5 million. Farm machinery and storage building losses cost an additional $1 million and other farm related fires caused an additional $4.5 million in losses.

There were 15 injuries in ag product storage fires and $3,879,807 in losses. In general agriculture fires, there were four injuries and $3,261,322 in losses.

Commissioner John P. Sopsic of the department of public safety reminds farmers that gasoline must be kept at least 40 feet away from any building. Refueling of machines must be done at least 40 feet from buildings. Engines should be shut off during refueling.

With drier than usual conditions in Minnesota, farmers should exercise extreme caution when working in fields or with machinery.

Half of all innovations and new technologies in this century have been developed by small businesses. The helicopter, the zipper, and air conditioner, the mini-computer, xerography, frozen food packaging, the automatic transmission — all came from small business workshops. In honor of the nation's 10 million small businesses, President Carter has declared the week of May 11 as National Small Business Week.

Australian Family Meets At Plummer

Washington, D.C. and seeing Niagara Falls in Niagara, N.Y., and the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C., among other things.

"It was just a quick trip but we were able to do and see a lot," Mrs. Morris said.

Last Friday, both the Helley's and the Morris's left on a two-week vacation to visit the West Coast, during which they will tour South Dakota to see Mount Rushmore national monument; Salt Lake City, Utah; Las Vegas, Nev.; and the San Diego zoo and Disneyland in California.

Disneyland has always amazed Kym, she stated in our previous interview, and she has always wanted to go there — especially after watching Walt Disney on television every Sunday night, she added.

The Helley's will return home alone June 22. The trip was made possible in part, by YFU regulations, which state that foreign students may travel on their way back to their country — with the YFU approval, according to John Helley, Kym's American father during her stay here, who is also an area representative for YFU.

Also attending graduation ceremonies at Plummer was Tuvia Abramson, regional director of YFU from St. Louis Park. (A second story on Abramson and host families is included in this issue of the Times).

"He enjoyed it so much here (Plummer), he stayed longer than he should have, and missed another graduation," Mrs. Morris said.

Kym will leave from San Francisco, traveling with 160 other YFU students June 22, where she will return to Sydney to continue school until December. Her parents will leave for their homeland from Los Angeles June 20.

"I'm looking forward to the trip to the West Coast," Kym said. "It will be good to see all the different land changes."

Her statement in our previous interview with her illustrated her feelings toward the country around northwestern Minnesota: "I think your land could have a bit more character," she smiled.

Kym sat comfortably yet excited for the family's trip between her two fathers during the second recent interview at the Helley home in Plummer. A fire blazed in the fireplace of the family's living room, and the much needed rain fell outside. Numerous sleeping bags lay patiently on a couch nearby waiting to be transferred to the cars which would be traveling to the West Coast.

The two families will do much of their visiting in San Diego, since that was where the Helley family lived prior to moving to Plummer. There are five children in the Helley family, including Barb, 16, who attends Pershing high school and who will be accompanying her mother Clara, and father, John, and the Morris family on their vacation; twins, Helen Mary and Mary Helen, 23, who live in San Diego (Helen Mary is a second class hospital corpsman in the United States navy and will be traveling to Japan next month); John Jr., 21, who lives in San Diego; and Kermit, 19, who is a printer also living in San Diego. Two other Helley children, Robert Charles and H.A., have died.

Kym is the only child in her family, although she has one close companion — "Tuffy", her Cairn terrier.

The Morris's have witnessed new experiences since their visit to the United States, and more specifically to Plummer. For one thing, the family sampled water skiing at Maple Lake.

Loretta and Mooney Lynn (Sissy Spacek and Tommy Lee Jones) are two poor people from Appalachia who make it right to the top, in Universal's "Coal Miner's Daughter," which opens Mon., June 9 at the Galaxy Twin Theatre.

"It was a disaster for me, but Kym made it up okay," Brian said, while Mrs. Morris thought skiing was fun and exciting, she said.

The family tasted venison and moose for the first time. "The venison was 'good'," Brian said, while he limited his description of his taste of moose to "interesting." And, the family will have traveled on five different planes by the time they get back to Sydney.

"The most interesting part was flying in a small plane into Thief River Falls," Brian said.

And their Greyhound bus trip from New York to Washington, D.C., while on their East Coast tour allowed them the opportunity to meet a variety of interesting people, Mrs. Morris added.

There was also Kym's first experience of seeing a deer running free in our northwestern Minnesota fields, our chilly Minnesota temperatures and the atmosphere of a small town.

Kym proudly showed us the colored photo of her graduating class from Pershing high school as we got ready to leave the Helley home. She also handed us a small gold pin of a kangaroo — a mammal quite common in Australia.

The Morris's will be taking more back with them to Sydney than the souvenirs most tourists gather while vacationing. They will have a collection of memories and experiences of a trip to a country visited for the first time. These they can save forever.

Dear friends,

At the funeral home mourners ask, "What should I say?" Be natural - we are most effective with a minimum of words. Some tend to say too much — we talk when we should be listening. Sometimes not a word is necessary. One's very presence is helpful to the bereaved.

Respectfully,

THE VOICE of BUSINESS

U.S. Chamber of Commerce

In recent days, reports have been surfacing about a warming in relations between President Carter and the leadership of the labor movement. I want to reveal some details about the new relationship which are not widely known, and which have had an important bearing on recent economic problems, especially inflation.

It's no secret, of course, that this is an election year, and that the Administration has made strong and sustained efforts to win the support of key labor leaders. Those efforts, and the basis of the new relationship, began with an agreement negotiated last summer by the Administration and the AFL-CIO — an agreement they ambitiously call the National Accord. On the surface, the National Accord was meant to be an anti-inflationary weapon with business and labor establishing committees that would devise ways to hold down wages and prices.

Right away, we can see the focus is all wrong. Inflation is not caused by too many people working, but by governments creating money out of thin air to finance wasteful expenditures, and to reward consumption and debt, rather than investment and savings. Moreover, except for the already mentioned committees on wages and prices, the business community has been virtually excluded from all other arrangements and agreements, both formal and informal. One look at what the Administration and labor have been up to, and you will understand why.

AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland has stressed that the basic principles and promises of the National Accord stem from the Humphrey-Hawkins Full Employment and Balanced Growth Act of 1978 — legislation determinedly socialist in orientation. Labor has also won informal commitments from the Administration on a broad number of other issues: general economic policies; energy policy; maritime industry policy; health services and occupational safety and health; international trade policy, and probably most important of all from labor's point of view — the major Administration actions on the budget.

For example, thanks to the National Accord, the AFL-CIO hierarchy received the most detailed opportunity imaginable to spell out its priorities in the 1981 fiscal budget before it was officially presented to Congress. One Executive Branch agency official remarked that the AFL-CIO leaders "knew more about the budget of our department at some points in this process than we did."

Indeed, I was shocked to learn that the Office of Management and Budget shipped a huge library of its key documents to the AFL-CIO headquarters for review by those union leaders. A White House official admitted: "There has been nothing comparable to this in the history of the American government."

Nor anywhere else! Not even in some European countries, where unions and leading political parties historically work closely together, does there often occur such an example of intimate and specific collaboration. The same White House official went so far as to boast this recent process is "probably without parallel in annals of Western democracy."

I should add I see absolutely nothing wrong with consultation; in fact, I expect it. However, there is a distinct difference between consultation, and collaboration to the point of organized labor becoming deeply involved in the budgetary and policy making functions of the Executive Branch. The latter constitutes a dangerous precedent.

Perhaps that explains why, despite a runaway rate of inflation, the labor leadership no longer criticizes the President and now even sings his praises.

Perhaps that explains why, despite all the promises of fiscal restraint, spending for the originally proposed fiscal 1981 budget was scheduled to increase by an irresponsible 16 per cent.

Perhaps that explains why, despite all the Administration's rationalizations, our economy is in such a mess and pressure is growing for genuine budget cuts.

SPECTACULAR DAMAGE but only minor injuries resulted from a two-vehicle crash about a mile north of Thief River Falls on highway 32 at 7:18 a.m. Friday. The car was driven south on highway 32 by James Larson of Newfolden while the pickup was driven north by Cecil Ralter of Thief River Falls. According to investigating law enforcement officers, the pickup reportedly blew out a tire, went off the shoulder on the right side of the road, and then came back across the roadway, hitting the Larson car just ahead of the driver's door and continuing on almost over the top of the vehicle. Both vehicles were considered total losses. Ralter received only scratches in the mishap. Larson reportedly walked to the ambulance called to the scene and was treated at Northwestern hospital.

Lumberjack Food Demo Set June 15

Cold shuts, sinkers, swamp water, shoe pack pei — are the terms confusing? If you were a lumberjack in an early northern Minnesota logging camp, these terms would be as common as doughnuts, baking powder biscuits, tea and lemon pie.

To a lumberjack, food was often more important than the wages offered. Jacks often hired on the logging camp on the reputation of the camp cook alone, rather than ask about the amount of monthly wages. The interest in food was indeed practical as the "jacks" working long grueling hours in the dead of winter needed good wholesome food to maintain their strength. The cooks occupied a high position of authority in the camp, with wages nearly equalling the camp foreman. They wielded complete supremacy in the cook shanty, using a meat cleaver as scepter.

Lumberjack food is the subject of the upcoming event at the forest history center's 1900 logging camp this Sunday, June 15, from noon to 5 p.m. Demonstrations on lumberjack style cooking and baking will be presented by the logging camp's staff of head cook and cooks.

The public is invited to visit with the camp cook and staff of cooks to learn first hand what it was like to cook for 80 hungry lumberjacks through the winter. Visitors may also have the opportunity to help in some of the food preparation. While the cook will not be preparing nor offering meals to the public, those interested and brave enough to sample lumberjack fare may be offered a taste.

For further information, please contract the forest history center in Grand Rapids, 218-326-1390. The center is open from May 15 through October 31, seven days a week, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. There is no admission charge.

Plans Made For Course At RLF Hospital

St. John's hospital is anticipating a refresher course under the direction of Jan Muldoon, director of nursing, for registered and other health professionals.

In order to sponsor such a course, it is necessary to establish how many might be interested in taking it and if there is enough interest to proceed.

Course will be from one to two weeks in length and it is anticipated that the cost would be minimal. Purpose behind this sponsorship is two fold; one, to develop some kind of back up coverage for the hospital should the need arise, and two, to offer a course as a community educational program for those nurses and others who have been out of the field for a time.

Anyone interested in this course may contact either Jan Muldoon, director of nursing, or the hospital administrator at 218-253-2131. Please call by June 20 so that plans can be made according to the number attending.

State 3rd In Fund Transfer To Local Gov't.

On a per capita basis, Minnesota transfers more state dollars to local units of government than any other state in the nation except Alaska and New York, according to the Minnesota Taxpayers association.

An estimated 47 per cent of Minnesota's state spending was in the form of local government aid in 1977. This translates to $451 per capita. Payments in Alaska and New York totaled $576 and $557 per capita, respectively. Average amount of per capita local aid for the 50 states was $283.

The comparative state data is derived from a recently released report published by the U.S. Department of Commerce, as part of the "1977 Census of Governments."

According to Don Paterick, executive director of the Minnesota Taxpayers Association, "We are well aware of the local aid impact upon Minnesota's state budget. However, detailed state by state statistics had not been previously compiled. Ranking as the third highest state in the nation is this area is extremely significant. Our own figures show that as much as 54 per cent of the state general fund is transferred to local units to ease the property tax burden. This higher percentage is due in part to inclusion of debt service and teachers' pension contributions which the state took off the property tax rolls as part of the 1967 Tax Reform and Relief Act. Inclusion of Property Tax Refund (circuit breaker) payments further increases the reported 47 per cent."

In total dollars, state aid to local units of government totaled $1.8 billion in 1977, with state general expenditures totaling $3.8 billion. School districts received the bulk of the state aid — $1.1 billion or 61 per cent. The amounts break down as follows: school districts — $1,086,995, or 61 per cent; counties — $436,011 or 24 per cent; municipalities — $229,574 or 13 per cent; townships — $19,254 or 1 per cent; special districts — $11,674 or 1 per cent; various units — $13,121 or 1 per cent; total aid is $1,796,629.

By function, education is of course the primary recipient of state dollars with $1.1 billion in aid. General local government support totaled $291 million. This amount includes aid payments made through the local government aid formula and various shared tax revenues. State transfers for welfare totaled $228 million, which is allocated at the county level. Highway aid totaled $98 million, which is distributed primarily to counties and municipalities.

The $1.8 billion in aid payments for 1977 compares with $1.1 billion in 1972, $440 million in 1967, and $165 million 20 years ago.

Dairy Day Again

Another year as fallen off the calendar and the community is ready to host another Northwest Dairy Day. The event this Tuesday is the 31st annual observance of the day that created a precedent for similar dairy days across the state and nation.

Each year it gets to be more fun to visit the city parking lot west of Knight avenue for dairy day activities. There are a lot of familiar faces in the crowd, faces of volunteer workers who have given unselfishly for years of their time and talent to assure success of Northwest Dairy Day.

Other familiar faces belong to people who have made repeated dairy day appearances here. We think of families whose children have been regular participants at the dairy show throughout their 4-H club and FFA years. Now, with the show 31 years old, we are seeing children of former dairy day exhibitors take their own turn in the show ring.

We see an occasional previous regional dairy princess, or previous dairy show champion, among the faces in the crowd. They have gained something from their participation and the fond memories of dairy days past lure them back. We think that's something terrific, and we are pleased to be a part of such a positive experience.

For the most part dairy people are good people. They are hard working, frugal living, dedicated and honest folks who may be short on leisure but are long on hospitality and friendship. They take a day away from things that need to be done at home to give their kids an experience they feel will benefit them. Dairying is a family occupation and dairy people are family folks — our kind of folks.

Year after year the judges keep coming up with high caliber winners in the dairy show. Each year a blushing farm girl receives a crown and bouquet of roses as Northwest dairy princess, and each year the previous year's winner returns as a poised, confident and articulate speaker for the dairy industry. Dairy day challenges young people to do their best, and when they do their best they become the best.

Northwestern Minnesota dairymen would like to see a good crowd on hand to watch their youngsters and their cattle perform Tuesday. It's all free and it's all fun, even if you don't know a Jersey from a Brown Swiss or a Holstein from a Shorthorn. Come out and be a part of the festivities. A showmanship demonstration will start at 10 a.m. with judging to follow.

Spring Brings More Than Flowers

A recent editorial in the Baudette Region calls attention to the way that a single irresponsible act can do irreparable harm to the image of a group. The editorial follows:

There are some pretty unhappy kids and disgusted adult leaders out Pitt way.

And who wouldn't be, when you've wasted a whole day picking up after someone else and found your own special community project vandalized?

That was the situation that members of the Pitt-Riverside 4-H club found themselves in last weekend.

The Pitt 4-H Park has been the primary community project for the Pitt-Riverside club for more years than most people in the area can remember. It's a not-too-large, not-too-small wayside rest just west of Pitt (six miles west of Baudette) that has for several years served the Pitt community for family gatherings, community picnics, and the like. It's a well used, well appreciated facility.

The P-R club developed the park over a period of years and spends a fair amount of time keeping the place in shape. A certain amount of litter normally accumulates in the park, but it's seldom excessive. Most of the people who use the facility appear to appreciate what the 4-H kids have accomplished with the park, and it's treated accordingly.

Things were a little different this year.

Last Saturday was clean-up day at the park for the P-R Club. The kids and their leaders were more than a little dismayed with what they found when they went there.

"The place was an absolute mess," said one adult leader with the club. "Trash was strewn all over the place — I've never seen it as bad as it was this weekend."

"We'd planned to spend a couple of hours picking it up and making it look nice for the spring," the leader said. "Instead, some members ended up spending all day Saturday just accumulating the trash. My gosh, we ended up with more than 20 huge trash bags full of it. We thought that it was pretty ridiculous."

Last week, the park was the site of a party held on the unofficial "senior skip day" at Lake of the Woods High School. The skip day is not sanctioned or approved in any way by the school, but most of the senior class nonetheless observed it.

Reports from the school indicated that only seven seniors attended classes last Friday.

The other 60-some were apparently at Pitt messing up the park.

"And then somewhere along the line, someone stole a picnic table that we had out there," says the leader. "We'd added that to the park three years ago, after we had saved a couple of years for it. The people who used it really seemed to appreciate it. Now it's gone."

It's not certain whether there was a direct connection between the senior class all-day party and the disappearance of the table. Still, its absence was discovered following the party.

More than a few groups in the area work toward emphasizing what's right with kids today. The Rotary Club, for example, invites a senior each month to participate in its meetings. The American Legion sponsors students to Boys' and Girls' state events and sends several each year to Legionville. Several organizations annually sponsor scholarships for students going on for post-secondary education. The school holds a special recognition assembly for those who have participated in school activities.

And the kids return the favors. Those who play on the school's sports teams, who put on band and choral concerts, who perform in plays and other productions, all devote their spare time toward making the community a better place to live.

Our young people represent one of the most valuable resources of our community, and most people try to treat them accordingly.

But all it takes is one incident like that at the Pitt 4-H park last week to tear down all the good will that has been built up over a period of years.

Children Say. . .

Art Linkletter has compiled a number of items dealing with children and the humor which their reasoning and comments provide. Here are some answers to quizzes which he has discovered:

Borrowed Nonsense:

Suspicious English Professor: "I liked your story. Who wrote it for you?"

Offended Student: "I'm glad you liked it. Who read it to you?"

"If anything should happen to me, honey," ventured the wife, "you wouldn't let your second wife wear any of my clothes, would you?"

Her husband, engrossed in the sports page, responded: "She's not your size."

THIS SIGN at the entrance to the new park being completed near Valley home in Thief River Falls sets forth the purpose of the facility. The park is being created as a gift from Mr. and Mrs. Lowell Swenson and is intended for use by older members of the community. "We don't want to exclude younger people," Swenson said recently, "but we want to assure that younger folks include older members of their family in their park outings."

Return Prayer to Public Schools

Permitting prayer in public schools has been prohibited for a number of years, but a movement is underway to have this denial of freedom reversed. I recently signed Discharge Petition No. 7 in an effort to release a bill, S. 450, from the House Judiciary Committee and allow Members of the House to vote on permitting prayer in public schools. The Senate has already approved the bill.

This bill has been held up by the Judiciary Committee for about a year and it appears that, if they have their way, the full House will not have an opportunity to vote at all on the school prayer issue.

Truthfully, this disturbs me. I have never been satisfied with the removal of prayer from public schools and would like to see this changed. Most of the House apparently agrees with me as evidenced by the fact that in 1979 we voted 225 to 122 to add language to the Department of Education bill permitting school prayer. Unfortunately, this language was later dropped. Under House rules, however, a Committee can be discharged from jurisdiction over a bill if a majority of Members, 218, sign a petition for such action. Currently, 150 Members have signed Discharge Petition No. 7.

The problem goes back to 1962 when the Supreme Court decision outlawed school prayer. The Supreme Court agreed at the time, but I like to echo the words of Justice Potter Stewart who offered the one vote of resistance. He said: "I cannot see how an 'official religion' is established by letting those who want to say a prayer say it. On the contrary, I think that to deny the wish of these school children to join in reciting this prayer is to deny them the opportunity of sharing in the spiritual heritage of our nation."

The desires of the American people are also leaning toward re-establishing the right to pray in the public schools. The latest nationwide Gallup Poll showed that 76 per cent of the American people believe in and favor legislation to permit prayer.

The school prayer provision of S. 450 would not amend the Constitution and, furthermore, it is not designed to mandate prayer for all states and localities. Instead, it would reaffirm individual states' rights to decide this question according to the will of the people of that particular state and not of the Supreme Court. This action, in my opinion, is well within the constitutional responsibilities of Congress.

Religion is a right that we in this country enjoy. No one forces us to be religious, go to church, pray or participate in any act which represents an expression of religious belief. It is solely the choice of each individual American.

Personally, I am proud that everyone in America has the right to choose and that is why this prohibition in praying in public schools must be reversed. We are not asking that prayer be required, we are asking that the opportunity to pray be allowed and provided for each and every student who wants to share a few minutes with God. Those who want would then have the opportunity and those who do not believe in prayer would have the opportunity to decline.

It is my hope that the House of Representatives will have the opportunity to work the will of the people in the near future and that our children will once again be allowed a daily prayer in their classrooms.

Dutch Elm Disease Found Early In Year

Symptoms of Dutch elm disease have shown up 15 to 17 days earlier than usual this year and larger numbers of diseased trees are expected early in the season, according to Asimina Gkinis, extension plant pathologist at the University of Minnesota.

"Trees that have already been infected cannot be saved, but early detection and removal can protect healthy trees and keep the disease at a low level," Gkinis said.

Gkinis urges communities and individuals to be on the lookout for the symptoms of Dutch elm disease — leaves that are smaller than normal, dull green, wilted and curled up — and to eliminate infected trees as soon as possible. Elms that fail to bloom or that have bare branches may also be infected with the disease. Peel back the bark to verify the symptoms. If the wood has brown or grey streaks instead of a creamy color, it is infected and should be removed.

In the winters of 1977 and 1978, a combination of cold winter and late spring helped retard the spread of Dutch elm disease. But this year, the early disease symptoms combined with a phenomenally large percentage of elm bark beetles surviving the milk winter, will tax the state's disease management efforts.

"Unless communities are prepared to deal with diseased elms as soon as they are identified, the benefits of the past two winters will be lost," Gkinis said, "and we'll have to start playing the 'catch-up' game again."

Soo Line Cuts Sunflower Seed Carload Rate

Soo Line Railroad company is temporarily cutting carload freight rates by as much as 20 per cent on sunflower seeds originated on its lines and destined for the Twin Cities or Head of the Lakes.

New lower rates are being put in effect because of reduced grain and seed marketings and to provide more effective competition with trucks for the movement of sunflower seeds.

New rates will be in effect from June 3 to June 30, and July 3 to midnight August 2. They apply to the movement of sunflower seeds from any Soo Line point in North and South Dakota, Minnesota and Montana to terminals in the Twin Cities or at Duluth and Superior. Interstate commerce commission permitted the reduced rates to become effective June 3, on one day's notice.

Typical reductions include a savings of 27.5 cents per hundred weight on a carload of sunflower seeds moving from Minot to Duluth-Superior, or a reduction of 6.5 cents on a similar carload moving from Thief River Falls to Duluth-Superior.

Soo Line will review the reduced rate structure at the end of July to determine whether competitive conditions warrant further extensions.

The reduced rates are part of a continuing effort by the Soo to provide better service to shippers marketing agricultural products. Soo has a fleet of more than 3,500 covered hoppers including 5?? new cars received this past winter and spring which are used to move bulk commodities like sunflower seeds.

TRF Opens League Play Tuesday

First Northwest League game of the 1980 season for the Thief River Falls American Legion baseball team will be played Tuesday, a 7 p.m. game at Crookston.

Thief River Falls will play home-and-home games against all five Northwest League teams — Crookston, East Grand Forks, Newfolden, Warroad and Roseau — this summer, with the results determining post-season sub district tournament berths.

Newfolden will be in Thief River Falls Thursday for a 7 p.m. Northwest League game, with Thief River Falls hosting Fergus Falls in a non-conference doubleheader Friday beginning at 6 p.m.

Youth Fast Pitch Plans Made

A youth fast pitch softball program organizational meeting will be held Thursday at 7 p.m. on the fairgrounds fast pitch diamond.

The second-year program is open to two age groups: 13-15-year-olds and 16-18-year-olds. Last year approximately 30-35 boys took an interest in the program, and as a result a youth team was incorporated into the 1980 Thief River Falls fast pitch softball league schedule.

The team — Noreen's Tastee Freeze — is playing an exhibition schedule against the established league teams this summer. Managed by Lloyd Noreen, the Tastee Freeze club is introducing the game of fast pitch softball to younger players like Todd Ortloff, Joel Hallstrom, Spike Johnson, Ryan Bakke, Ken Sylvester, Rick Engelstad, Mitch Semanko and Brian Noreen.

Lloyd Noreen does the catching on the team and Dennis Bakke serves as a pinch hitter several times each game. League pitchers, led by Mike Drury, are handling the mound duties for the younger players while trying to develop pitchers — the key to the future success of the sport here.

In a Wednesday night exhibition game, Action Realty, the current Thief River Falls fast pitch softball league leader, built a 6-0 lead but needed three runs in the bottom of the seventh to pull out a 9-8 decision over the Tastee Freeze club.

Miscellaneous

+Bemidji American Legion baseball team opened its 1980 season Saturday with a doubleheader sweep over Staples. The winners banged out 15 hits, including a 3-for-3 game by Joey Grey, to win the opener 13-7, then took the nightcap 4-2 as Roger Degerman struck out 13 Staples batters. Whitey Anderson is coaching Bemidji for the fifth season and is faced with a rebuilding job, reports Jim Carrington of the Bemidji Pioneer. Graduation claimed eight of the 16 players on last year's team, including mound stalwarts John Noga and Dave Evenson. Noga also hit .507 last summer.

+Eighteenth annual Far North invitational fast pitch softball tournament will be played Sunday on the Thief River Falls fairgrounds diamonds. In an all-Grand Forks finals a year ago, Red River Cement out-scored Molstad Excavating 9-7.

+Also scheduled Sunday is the annual Father's Day shortstop golf tournament at the Thief River Country Club. Tom Zieman, a former Thief River Falls resident and now a member of the Bemidji State University golf team, won the event in 1979 by a four-shot margin over Thief River Falls' Wade Hoppe.

+When Tom Campbell won the high jump event at the 1980 Minnesota Class AA state track and field meet Saturday at Bloomington Lincoln high school with a leap of 6-8, it capped a perfect spring for the Bemidji senior who placed first in the high jump in all 15 meets in which he competed this season. He is the second Bemidji athlete to win the state high jump event. Jim Patten won it in 1957 with a leap of 6-2. The Lumberjacks' ace distance runner Ron Wolfe placed third in the 1600 meters (mile) at the state meet in 4:21.70, just off his best time of 4:20.60 recorded earlier this spring that would have won the state title. Bemidji, with 17 points and a sixth place finish in the state meet, outdid Region 8AA champion Moorhead, eighth with 15 points, and Region 8AA runner-up St. Cloud Apollo, tenth with 13 points.

STARTING THE 1980 American Legion baseball season with a bang, Thief River Falls left-hander Wayne Huseth lifted his record to 2-0 Thursday by shutting out Bagley 5-0 on a two-hitter. He struck out 14 and did not walk a single batter in the first half of a doubleheader played here. A week earlier the 1980 Lincoln high school graduate struck out 18 batters in a 2-1, two-hit victory over the Grand Forks Royals. Thief River Falls, a 20-10 second game winner over Bagley, will open its 1980 Northwest League schedule Tuesday with a 7 p.m. game at Crookston.

Legion Takes Twinbill From Bagley 5-0, 20-10

Thief River Falls American Legion baseball team completed its second doubleheader sweep of the 1980 season Thursday by beating Bagley 5-0 and 20-10 on the fairgrounds diamond. A week earlier Thief River Falls opened play with a 4-1, 2-1 twinbill sweep over the Grand Forks Royals.

Northwest League opener for Thief River Falls will be played Tuesday when the team travels to Crookston for a 7 p.m. game.

Wayne Huseth turned in his second straight two-hit pitching performance to beat Bagley 5-0 in Thursday's doubleheader opener. The left-hander struck out 14 and did not walk a single batter, giving him two-game totals of 32 strike-outs and just three walks in 14 innings.

Huseth worked on a no-hitter until Bagley's Mark Titera singled past the outstretched reach of Thief River Falls first baseman Greg Harder with two out in the fifth inning.

Thief River Falls scored in the bottom of the first when lead-off batter Kevin Sanders walked, Scott McKeever was hit by a pitch and Jeff Ulrich walked to load the bases with one out. Mark Schmitke hit a bouncer back to the mound that should have gone for a pitcher-to-home-to first inning-ending double play, but Bagley catcher Dennis Pemberton dropped the ball for a run. The next batter, Steve Bengston, also sent one back to the mound, and this time the visitors turned the double play to get out of the jam.

In the second, Dave Kays walked and scored on a one-out single to left by Sanders.

Thief River Falls added another single run in the fourth when Ulrich doubled to left, went to third on a ground-out and came home on a wild pitch.

Scott McKeever's two-run single inside the third base bag scored two runs in the fourth after Huseth and Sanders had walked and moved up a base on a sacrifice by Mark Harder.

Bagley 10

With a 9-0 lead in the second inning the Thief River Falls players were looking for a 10-run rule win in the doubleheader nightcap. They got it — 20-10.

The circus started with a six-run Thief River Falls first inning that featured a two-run double inside the left field line by Jeff Cwikla.

A double to left by Kelly Gutterud and two wild pitches scored runs as it ballooned to 9-0 in the third.

Bagley got to three Thief River Falls pitchers for nine runs on seven hits in the third to tie it 9-9. It wasn't very good baseball, with the struggling Thief River Falls pitchers receiving little defensive support.

Thief River Falls batted around again in the fourth inning for five runs and a 14-9 lead, then after scoring twice in the fifth, finally got the 10-run rule decision by scoring four times in the sixth, with a single by Dave Kays scoring the first run; a bases-loaded walk issued to Jim Nyland forcing in the second; an infield error making it 19-10; and a bases-loaded walk issued to pinch hitting Wayne Huseth finally putting an end to the nightmare.

Women's Slow Pitch Round-Up . . .

Dwight's Hartz Is 50-8 Winner In TRF Softball

Dwight's Hartz unleaded on the Health Hustlers Wednesday in Thief River Falls women's slow pitch softball action and came out a lopsided 50-8 winner. Carla Reed hit two home runs to lead the assault while Deb Jacobson and Arlene Knutson also homered for the winners.

The victory enabled Dwight's Hartz to keep pace with the Schmidt Stealers, an easy 22-1 winner over Geat Northwest Agency, in the Division II standings with matching 4-1 records. Rose Naeseth hit a grand slam home run for the Schmidt Stealers and teammate Nancy Fellman legged out two triples.

A three-way first place tie exists in Division I, but at least part of the log jam will be cleared tonight (Monday) when the St. Hilaire Saints and Ekeren Drug meet at 7:40 p.m. on Field 1, the northwest fairgrounds diamond.

Kathy Walker pitched a shutout Wednesday at St. Hilaire blanked Pizza Hut 9-0 while Ekeren Drug shaded Roseau Transport 12-11 on the strength of a Paula Meyers home run and triples by Georgine Troska and Marlene Foss. Patty Myers belted a grand slam home run for the losers.

Linda Rux beat out two triples to lead Northern Employers' Agency (NEA) to a 13-10 victory over the Ridge Runners and a share of first place in Division I with a 4-1 record.

The Barbers broke into the win column with a 16-12 decision over Hydra Mac. Arlene Walseth hit a three-run home run to lead Walseth Construction past the Credit Bureau 9-7, and Helen Anderson homered as the American Legion defeated the winless Mush-a-Rettes 16-12.

Action Realty 4
Coca-Cola 3

Action Realty scored three times in the bottom of the fourth inning and got out of a bases-loaded jam in the top of the seventh to get by Coca-Cola 4-3 Friday.

Coca-Cola took an early lead on Rob Almquist's two-out home run over the left field fence in the top of the second.

But Action Realty took command in the fourth when Ron Ostby singled with one out and Wayne Smith drilled a 1-1 pitch over the left-center field fence. Nick Drees followed with a triple to center and scored the third run of the inning on Wayne Liden's single.

Smith belted a 2-0 pitch high over the right field barrier for a 4-1 Action Realty lead in the sixth.

Coca-Cola threatened to pull it out in the top of the seventh when Tony Johnson hammered the first pitch of the inning over the center field fence to cut the Margin to 4-2. Wayne Gutterud singled and went to third on an error, scoring on Mark Huot's single to center for a 4-3 game. Mike Drury singled to center and Roger Cota was given an intentional walk to load the bases with two outs. But Al Erickson got Tom Hanson to pop up for the final out.

Schmidts broke into the win column with a soggy 11-4 victory over Melvies in the second half of Friday's doubleheader.

After scoring a single run in the top of the first, Schmidts broke it open with a six-run second, highlighted by Larry Coltom's bases-loaded triple.

It became 8-0 before Melvies broke through for three runs in the bottom of the fourth, including back-to-back home runs by DelRay Beito and Karl Chromy.

Melvies centerfielder Darwin Nelson suffered a broken leg when he collided with Chromy, the rightfielder, in the second inning.

Mike Drury pitched a one-hit shutout Thursday to lead Coca-Cola past Schmidts 5-0.

Bob Tunheim's one-out single in the sixth inning spoiled Drury's no-hit bid.

Coca-Cola opened the scoring with two runs in the bottom of the second inning when Paul Walker drilled a lead-off single to left. Tony Johnson moved the runner up on a sacrifice and Rob Almquist's fly ball to right field was dropped, putting runners on second and third. Mark Huot plated both runs with a two-out single to left.

The winners came out bunting in the sixth for three runs. Roger Cota beat out a bunt single; Tom Hanson's pop-up bunt was dropped to put runners on first and third; and Gordie Peterson put a bunt in front of the plate that produced three runs when Schmidts made two throwing errors on the play.

Northland Pro 5

Action Realty pulled out a 6-5 victory over Northland Pro in a see-saw Wednesday night ball game.

A Wayne Smith double into the left field corner, followed by Nick Drees' triple to right gave Action Realty a 1-0 first inning lead.

Northland Realty tied it in the top of the second on Tim Erickson's bunt single, Glen Kalsnes' single to center and an error.

Mark Thorstad's lead-off home run in the bottom of the first made it 2-1 for Action Realty. Mitch Dicken led off the fourth with a home run to tie it 2-2, but Drees followed suit in the bottom of the inning with a first-pitch home run and a 3-2 Action Realty lead.

Bases-loaded walks to Rockey Ammerman and Brian Peterson, plus a wild pitch, gave Northland Pro three runs and a 5-3 lead going into the bottom of the fifth, but Action Realty pounded out four straight base hits to go along with a wild pitch for a 6-5 win.

State Baseball Tournaments Are Decided

St. Cloud Cathedral won the Class A championship and Coon Rapids took the Class AA crown Saturday in the 1980 Minnesota state high school baseball tournaments.

Class A games were played at Municipal Stadium in St. Cloud. Opening round games saw Brooklyn Center beat defending champion St. James 5-3, St. Cloud Cathedral eliminated Region 8A champion Fertile-Beltrami 5-2, Greenway-Coleraine got by Morris 2-1 and Sleepy Eye St. Mary's sidelined Winona Cotter 3-1.

In the semifinals, Cathedral shut out Brooklyn Center 8-0 and Sleep Eye St. Mary's outscored Greenway-Coleraine 11-9, with the St. Cloud school winning the championship game 7-0.

Class AA games were played at Midway Stadium in St. Paul. In the first round, Coon Rapids shut out St. Peter 3-0, New Prague edged Cretin 1-0, Region 8AA champion St. Cloud Apollo stopped Osseo 1-0 and Bloomington Kennedy slipped by Grand Rapids 4-3.

In the semifinals, Coon Rapids blanked New Prague 4-0 and Apollo overcame Bloomington Kennedy 4-3, with Coon Rapids taking the championship game 5-0.

Rain at both sites forced tournament directors to juggle the tournament schedule, eliminating the third place game in both classes.

Land Sale To Be Richest In State History

A public auction sale of state owned land in Lake county on June 21 could result in the largest dollar figure ever received from a single day's sale of state land in Minnesota.

Officials at the Department of Natural Resources said that if the lands being offered are all sold, even at only the appraised value, the sale will generate over $880,000 for the state treasury.

The 1,350 acres will be offered for bids at the senior high school gymnasium at Two Harbors starting at 10 a.m.

Included are platted and unplatted lots on Fall and McDougall lakes, unplatted frontage on the Kawishiwi river and various parcels of unimproved land in Lake county.

Purpose of the sale is to comply with legislation requiring the DNR to sell state owned land in the county to private owners in order to produce tax revenue. This will compensate the county for a loss of such revenue resulting from DNR purchase of privately owned land to create Tettegouche state park.

Some of the lands are in the Superior national forest and near the Boundary Waters Canoe Area Wilderness.

No bids will be accepted for less than the appraised value and the purchaser will be required to pay cash at the time of sale for the appraised value of any timber or improvements.

At least 15 per cent of the purhase price must be paid in cash at the time of sale and the balance in not more than 20 equal installments. Payments must be made on June 1 each year including interest at 4 per cent per annum on the unpaid balance.

All mineral rights are reserved by the state.

A list of the lands being offered and all of the terms of sale can be obtained at the following locations: DNR Bureau of Lands, Centennial Office Bldg., 658 Cedar St., St. Paul, 612-296-0659; Lake County Auditor's Office, Two Harbors; DNR Regional Headquarters, Highway 2, Grand Rapids.

IT WAS A close play, but a stretch by Thief River Falls first baseman Greg Harder nipped Bagley base runner Danny Jacobson in the sixth inning Thursday night in the first game of an American Legion baseball doubleheader played in Thief River Falls. Jacobson grounded out to shortstop Scott McKeever on the play. Thief River Falls swept the twinbill by posting 5-0 and 20-10 wins. Thief River Falls will be at Crookston Thursday and will host Newfolden Thursday in 7 p.m. Northwest League games.

One Unbeaten Team Left In Slow Pitch Softball

Home Lumber was on both ends of the spectrum Wednesday in Thief River Falls men's slow pitch softball association play, opening a split doubleheader with an 8-5 win over previously unbeaten Popplers-Action Realty, but then absorbing a 21-1 pounding at the hands of the TRF Merchants, who used the results to gain a first place tie with Popplers-Action Realty in the American League East Division standings.

And that left idle McDonald's-Dallmann as the only unbeaten team in the 32-team association.

In another surprise Wednesday, Furuseth-Nelson dropped the contending American Legion Raiders two games behind McDonald's-Dallmann in the American League West Division standings with a 12-7 decision. John Nelson went 4-for-4 and banged out three doubles for the winners.

Popplers-Action Realty bounced back from its first game loss to double Terry's Mobil 10-5 as Larry Poole went 3-for-4 and Rod Heschke collected a pair of triples.

Brian Rokke was 4-for-4 and homered as Hobo Haus drilled Bridgeman 20-3.

Trailing 10-0 after just two innings, Tony Dorn rallied for a 12-11 come-from-behind victory over Arnold Realty on the strength of a three-run Tony Dorn, Jr. home run.

A seventh inning rally lifted the St. Hilaire Bears past Coca-Cola 10-8 and Swenson Plumbing & Heating knocked off Wagon Wheel 11-1 to complete Wednesday's schedule.

Elsewhere, Consumer's Co-op got by Sound Level-Holthusen 5-3, The Club blanked Wilson Brothers 3-0, Hardees out-scored Schumacher's Tireland 12-11, First Federal took care of Lon's 13-3 and the TRF Aggies broke into the win column with a 6-4 decision over the E.T. Bees.

In Thursday's National League play, Mitch Hoard pitched a shutout in a 15-0 Consumer's Co-op victory over the TRF Aggies. The winners pounded out 28 base hits, including 4-for-4 games by Pete Mosbeck, Terry Dyrdal and Stu Peterson.

George Lindquist homered and Great Northwest Agency out-hit Sparby-Johnson 14-5 en route to a 13-7 triumph.

Ospreys Shrug Off Moving Of Nest Pole

A pair of ospreys with nests perched atop a double power pole in Crow Wing county remained undisturbed earlier this month when power company employees moved the pole to a new location, the Department of Natural Resources reports.

Using a five man crew, two trucks and a crane, the United Power Association successfully removed the pole from the ground and placed it in previously dug holes 30 feet away without disturbing the nests.

After the move was completed, the ospreys returned and resumed sitting on their nests.

"There were no eggs in the nests prior to the move," said a DNR spokesman, "and so far no one has climbed the poles to see if any have been laid since."

FWS Reports On Steel Shot Test Program

Rate at which migratory waterfowl were crippled by nontoxic steel shot was virtually the same as that of lead shot during a recent Federal-State shooting test, the Interior Department's U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service (FWS) announced.

The comparison shooting was sponsored by the FWS and the Missouri department of conservation at the Schell-Osage state wildlife management area in November and December 1979.

Steel shot has been required for use in certain areas of the country by the Fish and Wildlife Service as a way of reducing the incidence of lead poisoning in waterfowl. About 2 million birds die of lead poisoning in the United States annually after eating spent lead shot, which they mistake for seeds or grit. Steel shot is not harmful to waterfowl if it is eaten.

However, some critics of nontoxic steel shot have charged that it results in a higher incidence of crippling of migratory birds than traditional lead shot, something not borne out by these recent test results.

The Missouri testing involved about 1,300 volunteer hunters who fired approximately 11,000 shots, bagging 2,000 ducks during the 50-day hunting season. Trained observers accompanied the hunters to randomly assigned blinds, where the effectiveness of two-and-three-quarter-inch 12-gauge lead and steel shotshell loads were tested. Both observer and hunters recorded the number of shots fired, distances of shots, and number of ducks bagged or crippled. At no time during the tests, however, did the observers and hunters know the shot type or load being tested.

Using Super Double X Magum 1¼-ounce No. 4 buffered lead, Super X 1¼-ounce No. 4 lead, Super X 1¼-ounce N. 2 steel, and Super X 1¼-ounce No. 4 steel, hunters and observers recorded the following results, per 100 shots fired:

Hunter reports — ducks bagged: 20.1, lead; 17.9 steel. Ducks crippled: 4.5 lead; 4.7 steel.

Observer reports — ducks bagged: 19.9 lead; 17.8 steel. Ducks crippled: 4.5, lead; 4.7, steel.

After a statistical analysis of the data by the Missouri department of conservation researchers, percentages indicated no significant difference in the rate of crippling between steel and lead load users. About two more ducks were bagged per 100 shots with lead than with the steel loads, however.

A more complete analysis of other test data is being conducted by both Missouri and the Fish and Wildlife Service. The full test results will be published jointly at a future date.

Minnesota Outdoors

Fishing Contest

With the opening of the bass fishing season on inland waters May 31, the annual Minnesota Outdoors fishing contest begins. Last year there was a tie for first place. Two bass, each weighing 8 pounds, 10-ounces, were caught in the state of Minnesota and registered.

One was caught by Joel Kalton of Prior Lake. He caught his in Prior Lake. It was 24½ inches long and 18 inches in girth. Ed Smith of St. Paul caught his in Green Lake near Chisago City. This fish was 22 inches in length and 18 inches in girth.

Winner of this year's contest will receive a rod and reel, a knife and tackle selection. If you catch a big bass be sure to register it at your nearest tackle shop.

Baudette Report

Fishing is super in the Gaps on Lake of the Woods. Parties were bringing in their limits early in the mornings and during the early evening fishing as well. Both leeches and minnows spinners were working well.

Most of the fishing was on the sandy areas of the lake and river. People fishing the river found better luck in the evenings.

Most of the fish were good eating size — running around a pound to a pound and three-quarters.

Walker Report

Big news of the opening weekend at Leech Lake were the two muskies that were brought in. They were both caught in Steamboat Bay of Leech Lake, both caught on Saturday and were fairly close in weight. Reports received indicate that the muskies are now done spawning.

Muskies: 20-pounds, 12-ounces, caught by Bill Magnuson, Mound, on Leech Lake on a daredevil.

19-pounds, 9-ounces, caught by Terry Sonnoman, Anoka, on Leech Lake on a Bagley Bait.

Due to the lack of wind, opening weekend Walleye fishing was spotty around Leech Lake. Catches were reported early Saturday morning while fishing in shallow water. Night fishing also produced some nice stringers of fish. Spot tail shiner minnows were the best bait in Walker Bay while jigs and minnows produced some activity on the Big Lake.

Austin, Jordan Are Softball State Champs

Austin won the Class AA title and Jordan claimed the Class A trophy Friday in the 1980 Minnesota state high school softball tournaments.

Class AA games were played at Dred Scott Field in Bloomington. In opening round play Austin edged Shakopee 4-3, Wayzata drubbed Park Center 14-1, St. Francis got by Region 8AA representative St. Cloud Apollo 8-6 and St. Paul Harding blanked Mariner 4-0.

Austin slipped past Wayzata 1-0 and St. Paul Harding shut out St. Francis 10-0 in the semifinals, with Austin beating Harding 3-2 in the championship game.

Class A games were played at Whitney Field in St. Cloud. In opening round play Golden Valley eliminated defending champion Wadena 3-1, LaCrescent defeated Delavan 6-4, Jordan handled Raymond 13-1 and Moose Lake received a bye.

Golden Valley took care of LaCrescent 10-0 and Jordan knocked off Moose Lake 7-1 in the semifinals, with Jordan trimming Golden Valley 4-3 in the championship game.

Wayzata took third place honors in Class AA with an 11-5 victory over St. Francis. LaCrescent shaded Moose Lake 1-0 for third place in Class A.

DNR Expecting Volunteers To Increase Aid

An increase in help from citizen volunteers on conservation projects carried out by the Department of Natural Resources is expected to result from passage of a bill at the latest legislative session.

The bill provides that citizens wishing to help the department on fish and wildlife projects can now be covered by state workers' compensation insurance and be reimbursed for expenses such as transportation and lodging.

At hearings on the measure, members of sportsmen's clubs explained that the DNR could not accept their help on some projects because of the liability the agency would assume on the death or injury of a volunteer.

They said passage of the bill could mean a savings to the state of thousands of dollars in donated labor — in addition to promoting better understanding of the DNR's policies and programs among volunteers working on Department projects.

State Meet Attendance Is Reported Down

Attendance increases were noted in 1980 state wrestling, boys swimming and hockey tournaments, but decreases were recorded for attendance at state basketball and gymnastic meets, it was announced by the Minnesota State High School League.

The 1980 Minnesota state wrestling tournament drew 54,881 spectators, an increase of 2,741 over the 1979 attendance figures.

Attendance at the boys state swimming and diving championships was 1,950, up 31 from 1979.

State hockey tournament attendance reached 102,197, an increase of 1,295 over a then-record 1979 total of 100,902.

Girls state basketball tournament featured 53,154 fans, off 548 from 1979 figures.

Overall, the 1980 MSHSL-sponsored state tournaments drew 300,702 spectators, but that is down 12,174 from the 1979 total of 312,876.

Non-Game Bill Will Benefit All Wildlife

On May 22, the United States Senate unanimously passed the federal nongame wildlife conservation act.

Passage of the bill means that Minnesota could receive up to a half million dollars during the next four years for conservation programs to help wildlife species that are not hunted — such as songbirds, loons, herons, prairie chickens and bald eagles.

The bill has already been passed by the House of Representatives.

Recent Minnesota legislature approved the "chickadee checkoff" — a measure allowing Minnesota citizens to donate one dollar or more of their state income and property tax refunds next year to help fund nongame wildlife conservation programs of the Department of Natural Resources.

MANAGER
Gillette All-Star Election

What do Joe McCarthy, Earl Weaver, Walter Alston and Sparky Anderson have in common? These winning All-Star managers never would have made an All-Star team based on their playing prowess. Others who piloted All-Star teams to victory, however, such as Joe Cronin, Bill Terry, Lou Boudreau and Yogi Berra, also made it to the Baseball Hall of Fame as players.

Chuck Tanner of the Pittsburgh Pirates is this year's National League Manager and will oppose Earl Weaver of the Baltimore Orioles. Fans can select the players who will start this year's game in Los Angeles' Dodger Stadium, July 8, by voting in the All-Star election. Underwritten by the Gillette Company's Safety Razor Division for the eleventh consecutive year, the voting is the nation's largest nonpolitical election. Ballots are available free at retail stores featuring a Gillette All-Star display and at major and minor league ballparks. Voting ends June 25.

Yogi Berra, manager of the victorious 1974 National League All-Stars, was named the American League's Most Valuable Player three times. He is one of the few men to have won pennants in both major leagues, piloting the 1964 New York Yankees of the American League and 1973 New York Mets of the National to league crowns.

Burning Ban Cancelled By DNR

Most of Minnesota has received a good soaking and the Department of Natural Resources said that all counties were removed from the ban on open burning June 3.

The Superior and Chippewa national forests, Voyageurs national park and Bureau of Indian Affairs lands have also been removed from the burning ban, according to federal officials.

State forestry officials said many parts of the state received up to an inch or more of rain during the past few days. Removal of the ban means that foresters and township fire wardens will again be able to issue permits for open burning.

Such permits are required in the forested area of the state at all times.

Parent Role Critical In Sex Education

Parents must take a more active role in educating their children about sex before they reach adolescence if the problem of teenage pregnancy is to be brought under control.

This is the advice of two internationally recognized authorities on sexual behavior and attitudes who opened a three-day conference on family sexuality at the University of Minnesota recently.

Dr. Mary Calderone, president of the sex information and education council of the United States, and Thore Langfeldt, a Norwegian child psychologist, called for a "new recognition" of the importance of sex education in the family setting.

"The sexuality of the young has always disturbed adults," Calderone said. "Parents should approach the sex education of children as a natural and beautiful process.

"I look upon the human being as made up of the mind, the body and sexuality," Calderone said. "We teach children to use their minds and bodies but we tell them to put their sexuality in a drawer until they grow up."

Langfeldt, a psychologist for the Oslo, Norway, school systems,' said Western European adults, like Americans, have also failed to communicate openly with their children regarding sexuality.

Too many parents, he said, refuse to acknowledge the sexual development of their sons and daughters, shrugging off the responsibility with statements such as "Sexuality will come soon enough. There's no need to rush it."

Researchers have charted the sexual socialization and education of children and, according to Calderone and Langfeldt, the process begins during infancy.

"We have indentified critical times (in growth of children) when certain things ought to happen," Calderone said. "For instance, the bonding experience between a mother and child shortly after birth is important because it lays down a sense of trust and response between parent and infant, and trust is the basis of later intimacy."

Calderone said the period between five and 12 years of age is critical in the development of a child's sexual attitudes and values. During this period, children begin to ask questions about anatomy and the reproductive process.

"The child will have questions, but the parent must also provoke some questions," Calderone said. "Curiosity must be totally satisfied. And the only way to satisfy curiosity is with live models."

Calderone said "seeing and touching" children of the opposite sex of the same age in a family can be a healthy experience. "The child needs to confirm what the other sex looks like," she said.

The noted author and educator said the sex education and socialization process must begin before the child enters puberty. "If you haven't done it by then, you have an awful lot of catching up to do in attitudes and feelings of self-worth, confidence and sharing," she said.

Proper education of preadolescents is the only way to curb the problem of teenage pregnancies, which has reached epidemic proportions, Calderone said.

More than 400 sociologists, psychologists and educators from throughout the country attended the international symposium on family sexuality in Bloomington. The conference was sponsored by the University of Minnesota program in human sexuality, medical school and school of social work.

CARPENTRY STUDENTS from the Thief River Falls area vocational-technical institute provided labor to accomplish remodeling of the former Balvin Implement company building west of highway 32 near Valley home in Thief River Falls. Now a part of a newly-created senior citizen park, the building will be used as a shop for senior craft activities. It will be stocked with woodworking equipment and other materials. The park project is the result of efforts and funding provided by Mr. and Mrs. Lowell Swenson as a gift to the community. Students, instructors and others who have been involved with the project were hosted by Swenson Thursday at a lunch served in the remodeled building. Jerry Bugliosi of McDonald's shared in the cost of providing the lunch and has also offered to provide monthly prizes for activity projects connected with the park and workshop.

DNR Plans To Sell Railroad Right-Of-Way

Abandoned Chicago and Northwestern railroad right-of-way between Spring Valley and LeRoy in southeastern Minnesota will be offered for sale on June 25, according to the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources.

This portion of the abandoned right-of-way is about one-half the total previously acquired by the DNR between Stewartville and LeRoy.

Purpose of the acquisition was for development of a multi-use recreation trail, but opposition to the trail — and because the right-of-way did not tie into an outdoor recreation system — led the DNR to declare the right-of-way surplus.

The right-of-way is located in the counties of Mower and Fillmore.

The approximate seven miles of grade located in Mower county consists of about 95 acres and has an appraised value of $91,410. This section of right-of-way will be offered at public auction at 10:30 p.m. in the county courthouse in Austin.

The approximate nine miles of right-of-way in Fillmore county consists of 115 acres and has an appraised value of $120,900. This section will be offered for sale at 2:30 p.m. in the county courthouse at Preston.

Authority for the DNR to dispose of the property was granted under special legislation passed by the 1980 legislature.

85 MPG Only Gov't. Dream, Council Says

What will the average car be like in 1995?

It won't be much if a new federal proposal is implemented. The government is considering a program to require cars to average 85 miles per gallon in 1995, which would be four times today's average and triple the federal requirement for 1985.

"There is no technology available which would permit that type of mileage for something which would be considered an automobile," said one industry observer. "It's plain ridiculous."

He pointed out that commuter-size motorcycles get from 50 to 75 miles per gallon.

"So how could the government in its infinite wisdom conceive of an enclosed car for even two passengers getting better mileage than a motorcycle?"

Addressing the 1995 proposal, one cartoonist showed a driver lying on his stomach on a three-wheeler to reduce wind resistance. He was protected only by a plastic shield.

Another cartoon showed a putt-putt engine on a wagon, with an auxiliary bicycle chain-drive.

Still another showed a family of four going off on a trip. Each had his or her own single-seat vehicle, linked by CBs for conversation.

Automotive information council (AIC) points out that several downsizing programs already have been completed and that by 1985, when each car company's average must be 27.5 miles per gallon, another full new generation of cars will be in production. The industry's cost between now and then will be about $80 billion, equal to the cost of the program which put the first American on the moon.

Even to meet the 27.5 mpg standard, many car companies will be marketing two-passenger cars, while four-cylinder engines will be the most popular and more light-weight materials will be used to further reduce weight.

So how to get to 85 mpg? It just doesn't appear possible, says AIC.

Damage Claim Tips Offered To Storm Victims

This is the time of year when the annual threat of tornado, hail and heavy wind damage to Minnesota residents and communities increases markedly.

Minnesota insurance commissioner Michael D. Markman urges all storm victims with insurance to file claims promptly. "Insurance companies employ adjustors to inspect damaged property," Markman said. "They move as quickly as they can in settling storm claims, giving hardship cases priority attention."

Whether damage is minimal or extensive, insured property owners should follow some simple rules to make sure their claims are processed speedily and fairly, he said.

(1) Inspect all property damage personally. Do not rely on reports of neighbors or onlookers.

(2) When the storm ends, take immediate steps to protect the property from any further damage. Arrange temporary cover of damaged roofs or windows and keep any bills incurred for submission to the insurance company.

(3) Notify your insurance agent or company right away to help speed processing of your claim. Be sure to tell the agent or company if your home is damaged beyond livable conditions. Most homeowner policies reimburse the insured for living expenses while the damaged home is being repaired.

(4) Give the claims adjustor a complete list of any and all damages, including a list of all damaged or destroyed household possessions with the date and place of purchase and purchase price, if possible. Losses not covered by insurance may be listed as deductions on state and federal income tax returns. Keep all damaged property for the adjustor's inspection, unless the damaged property endangers the life or safety of residents.

(5) Show the adjustor your insurance policy if it is available. If lost or destroyed, a duplicate copy may be held by the financial institution holding your mortgage.

(6) A member of the family or a close friend should be present the day the adjustor inspects the damage.

(7) Any outside repair estimates should be completely itemized, with the type and quantity of material needed and labor costs.

Owners of damaged or destroyed property may choose any contractor they wish after the adjustor inspects the losses. The adjustor may suggest a firm to do the work, but the homeowner has the right to go elsewhere.

Insurance adjustors working in a disaster area are not required to carry a license issued by the insurance division of the Minnesota department of commerce. Any questions or concerns about the activity of the adjustor should be referred to the Insurance Division, 500 Metro Square building, St. Paul, MN 55101.

Host Families Needed For YFU Students

Host families are still needed through Youth for Understanding's (YFU) international student exchange program, according to Tuvia Abramson, regional director from St. Louis Park.

YFU, a non-profit organization, has arranged exchanges for more than 70,000 students from 24 countries since its inception in 1951. Students (aged 14-18) are selected and matched with quality host families, and regional representatives provide services, support and guidance during the course of the exchange.

Lists of YFU students who will be arriving in this area were included in the April 23 and 30 issues of the Times.

Host families for YFU students provide room and board and are eligible for a monthly deduction while the student attends school. Program fees and personal expenses are provided by the student's natural family and YFU receives partial funding from the international communication agency of the U.S. department of state.

Host families share their homes and daily lives with international high school students for six months or a year while the student attends the local high school.

This unique homestay experience enables international exchange students to get to know real American families by sharing in daily life as a family member, not as a guest, Abramson stated.

For more information, contact your regional office: Tuvia Abramson, regional director, Youth for Understanding, 4829 Minnetonka Boulevard, St. Louis Park, MN. 55416; phone (612) 920-2415.

Interested persons may also contact their area representative, John A. Helley, for further information at P.O. Box 192, Plummer, MN 56748.

Helley, who has been a member of a host family for a year, is presently sponsoring an exchange student from Australia.

County DHIA Lists Top Herds During April

Jerry Hamre, supervisor of the Pennington County Dairy Herd Improvement association, (DHIA) lists the following herds as top in the association for April.

In first place is Don Fulton, whose herd produced an average of 59.5 pounds of milk and 2.16 pounds of butterfat; followed by Mylo Carlson, 51.6 and 2.04; Duane Vatsaas, 48.8 and 1.91; Pearson Brothers, 48.5 and 2.04; Roy Nelson, 46.9 and 1.69; Myron Erickson, 45.7 and 1.77; Roger Walton, 45.6 and 1.79; Orlan Stolaas, 45.3 and 1.69; Darrow Lundeen & Sons, 45.0 and 1.62; and Duane Krohn, 44.8 and 1.71.

Herd averages are affected by the number of dry cows in the herd. Amount of milk or butterfat is averaged out over all the cows, to give the farmer a record of the earning power of the herd for a month.

If too many dry cows are included in the herd, the average for the month may be low, even though the cows which are milking are high producers.

There were 29 DHIA herds and four owner-sampler herds on April test for a total of 33 herds on test. There were nine cows that completed records with over 625 pounds of fat in 305 days or less.

31st Dairy Day Drenched . . . But Only By Sunshine

IN HIS LAST YEAR of showing at Northwest Dairy day in Thief River Falls, Jay Johnston of Angus finished in a blaze of glory by capturing the overall dairy show championship. Showing this three-year-old Holstein purebred, Jay won the Holstein purebred championship, Holstein breed championship, grand champion purebred honors for the entire dairy show and overall show championship. The last year of showing for members of the Gene Johnston family marked the end of 15 years of Northwest Dairy day participation, during which four of the Johnston children showed cattle for a combined total of more than 40 years and won a number of titles.

BEST DAY EVER in her experience as a dairy showman was enjoyed by 15-year-old Corena Christianson at Northwest Dairy day in Thief River Falls Tuesday. Her three-year-old grade Holstein won the grade Holstein championship and overall grade championship of the show as well as reserve overall show champion. The three-year-old was also selected by the judges as best uddered cow of the show, and was one of five animals which helped Roseau county claim the county herd championship. Corena is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Christianson of Greenbush and was in her eighth year of showing at dairy day.

On a rare day when dairymen would happily have exchanged the warm sunshine for a good rain, the 31st annual Northwest Dairy day was observed Tuesday in Thief River Falls. On most dairy days farmers and sponsors welcome sunshine, but the prolonged dry period this spring has severely damaged pasture and hay crops and rain at any time will be welcome.

Resurgence of the dairy show resulted in 170 entries this year, a substantial increase from a year ago and a dramatic reversal of the trend in recent years which has seen area dairy herds dwindle and fewer young people in dairying.

Capping a long-standing family involvement in Northwest Dairy day, Jay Johnston of Angus captured the overall show championship in his last year of dairy day eligibility. The 18-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Gene Johnston, he showed a purebred Holstein three-year-old to Holstein purebred, Holstein breed and overall purebred championships enroute to the top placing.

The Johnston family has had four of its five children participate in the dairy show over the past 15 years and accumulated a combined total of more than 40 years of participation by the four children. Family members have won several show, breed and showmanship titles during that time. As showman of the grand champion purebred, Jay will receive an expense-paid trip to the world dairy exposition in Wisconsin in October.

Grand champion grade animal of the show was a three-year-old Holstein shown by Corena Christianson, 15, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Christianson of Greenbush. The cow was champion grade Holstein, reserve champion Holstein overall, reserve show as the best uddered cow of the show.

Corena is in her eighth year of showing at dairy day and will receive a purebred Holstein calf at the 32nd annual dairy day next year. She was also named recipient of the Stuart McLeod memorial award, a trophy presented in memory of the originator of dairy day who served as president of the sponsoring organization for 24 years. Mrs. Bea McLeod was present at the show and introduced to the crowd.

In the annual Region One dairy princess contest, judges selected a triumvirate of blue-eyed blondes to the top three placings. Named 1980 Northwest Dairy princess was Lynne Krohn, 18, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Duane Krohn of Viking. First runner-up was Marie Engelstad, 19, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Engelstad of Fertile, and second runner-up was Lisa Kraft, 17, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Kraft of Gary. Crowning the winner was 1979 Northwest Dairy princess Tracy Foldesi of Greenbush.

Lynne is five feet six inches tall and a 1980 graduate of Marshall county central high school in Newfolden. The Krohn family milks 41 head of Holstein cattle. Volume 69 (USPS 627-360) Thief River Falls, Pennington County, Minnesota Wednesday, June 11, 1980 Number 47

Citizens To Note Flag Day Sat.

Thief River Falls Elks are calling on local residents to commemorate Flag Day, June 14, as a demonstration of public support for this country.

On that day, over 1.7 million members of the Benevolent and Protective Order (BPO) of the Elks, including local members of 1308 lodge, will honor the flag and renew their faith in America as part of a special ceremony.

"The state of world affairs, the conditions in the Middle East, and the feeling that our property and citizens overseas can be unlawfully seized and held without recourse, now more than ever before, requires a public display of solidarity in this country," said Ray Spencer, exalted ruler of 1308 lodge.

"We call on the citizens of Thief River Falls to join us in honoring the flag, the symbol of freedom and humanity throughout the world," Spencer added.

"Americans have had little opportunity to show unified support for their country since the crisis in the Middle East," he said. "Flag Day offers that unique opportunity to demonstrate the solidarity of support for our country."

Special ceremonies this Saturday at the Elks park will begin at 2 p.m. with Mayor Bob Carlson acting as speaker. Paul Mortenson, who will sing the "Star Spangled Banner" and "God Bless America," will be accompanied by Kathy Beito.

The VFW club, American Legion, and the Boy Scouts of America will present the colors during the afternoon ceremonies.

The Elks have long endorsed Flag Day which commemorates the adopting of the Stars and Stripes as the official flag of the United States June 14, 1777 by the Continental Congress.

In 1908 the Elks became the first fraternal order to

City Sets Hearing Date On Land Use Question

Planning commission recommendations brought before Thief River Falls city council members during their regular meeting Monday evening resulted in setting a hearing date to resolve a land use question and a debate over a bridge study in Thief River Falls.

Petition requesting the discontinuance of commercial use of a structure located on Lots 1, 2 and 3 Block 17, Porter's addition (garage located near Al's Repair, highway 32 south in Thief River Falls) and presently owned by Jerry Wetch of Thief River Falls, was brought before council members. The structure is presently used as a mechanic shop by Wetch.

A subsection in the present zoning ordinance provides property owners the option to object to something in a case such as this if they feel there is a structure of non-conforming use in a residential area, stated Jack Quinlivan, city planner.

Next course of action to follow once a petition from property owners in the area has been presented to council is to set a hearing date within 10 days, according to Robert Wurst, city attorney.

"I'd like to take action on this issue right now," alderman Ambrose Wysoski stated. "But if the law says we can't, we can't."

Following this statement, alderman Wysoski introduced the resolution to call for a hearing within 10 days — with the date set June 17 at 7 p.m. in the council chambers of the city auditorium. The motion carried, following a second from alderman Bill Penning.

Feasibility study on the possibility of a bridge between Sherwood avenue north and Sherwood avenue south was also discussed by Quinlivan, who stated that, presently it is feasible to put a bridge at this point although the bridge is not viable for the near future.

The issue was brought up because of the availability of property owned by Mrs. Bob Kinsman which lies near the possible bridge construction site, on Sherwood avenue north.

"I am not going to be a part of putting this bridge construction before the Greenwood street bridge," Mayor Bob Carlson stated. "I believe we are solidifying our possibilities by considering the Sherwood bridge first."

"The matter is a facet of future planning," alderman Penning added. "I believe we should leave the issue open for discussion. We cannot just go into one side of an issue. We

Hybrid Irises Studied By Deer Park Garden Club

Assortment of hybrid irises brought by the members formed the topic at the meeting of the Deer Park garden club held recently at the Ethel Wiseth home. The largest assortment came from the gardens of Luella Peterson and Lois Swanson.

Roll call was answered by naming a wild flower seen this spring. Adding interest was an arrangement of wild columbines, ruffians of the roadside, brought by Lavonne Radniecki.

The program included a film, "Beautiful Lawns," and a tour of the Wiseth flower and rock gardens.

During the business session, members voted to place the club meeting dates on the ALCW calendar. Continued discussion was held on the club's 20th anniversary program; and progress reports were given on the spruce seedlings which were distributed at the last meeting by Lois Swanson. Norma Hanson gave an account of the interviews she had had while selecting a person from the CETA program to assist Mrs. Kory Hanson in caring for the garden plots in Goodridge.

Members attending the meeting were Luella Peterson, Lavonne Radniecki, Helen Chervestad, Norma Hanson, Ethel Wiseth, Lauretta Stucy, Marion Olson, Teddy Anderson, Lois Swanson, Dorothy Svanjord, Edna Appleman and Selma Sanders.

mandate the observance of Flag Day throughout the organization. Flag day did not become an official national holiday until 1949 when President Harry Truman, himself an Elk, signed a resolution.

First recorded recognition of the birthday of the Stars and Stripes was in 1885 by a Wisconsin school teacher. Various organizations began celebrating the birthday soon after. Betsy Ross Association, Sons of the Revolution, and the Pennsylvania Dames were among the organizations who began celebrations in 1890s of the flag's birth.

In 1897, the state of New York declared June 14 a state holiday.

"A courageous display of support for our country and its flag, just as Harry Truman manifested through his ultimate endorsement of Flag Day observance will demonstrate our country's resolve to stand united," Spencer concluded.

City Hearing On Land Use Is Scheduled

should explore other properties as well (for bridge construction crossing the Red Lake river). I think we should turn the matter back to the planning commission for exploring."

Following a second from alderman J. J. Womack to alderman Penning's resolution, and a unanimous roll call vote, the matter was turned back to the planning commission for further study.

In further council action, Carl Lee of Lee Plumbing and Heating company in Thief River Falls, appeared before council members regarding sewer work for Al Johnson of 1017 N. LaBree.

Sewer work done by Lee a number of times on the alley behind Johnson's home has resulted in the question of costs being the city's or property owner's (Johnson's) responsibility.

"We are trying to save a property owner some $200 that the city should be responsible for," Lee stated. "Johnson's paid for the work every time we've gone over there."

Question from Mayor Carlson concerned the city's liability in considering paying these kinds of costs.

"The city isn't liable unless the sewer isn't properly functioning," alderman Penning stated.

Second spokesman on the issue was John T. Anderson, superintendent of utilities who stated that after studying the print of the sewer system, and determining the water flow in the system to be correct, it appears the problem evidently lies in the hands of Lee and Johnson.

Debate arose from Anderson and Johnson concerning Lee's entrance to the sewer lines before consulting the city — if the issue is a city problem. Anderson reminded those present of the current city policy which states that if a sewer line is the city's responsibility, the city can clear it without digging down and without having to pay high costs. And if a private company digs down without a representative from the city present (on a city system), the city won't pay costs.

"The issue looks like a procedure problem," alderman Penning stated. "Lee entered the line before having the city look at it. I believe we should compromise and pay one-half of the bill. I understand this is against our city policy, but we are going on the precedent of a reliable sewer man, so in this case, I believe we should split the costs."

The resolution offered by alderman Penning to split the cost of the bill of $248.46 incurred for Lee's repairing the sewer line was seconded by alderman J. J. Womack. A roll call vote on the issue resulted in a tie of three council members for and three against the issue, with aldermen Ole Engelstad, Wysoski and Clayton Restad voting against the issue and aldermen Penning, Womack and Mayor Carlson in favor. Alderman Dr. Don Goodrich and Milan Borsheim were absent from the meeting.

Following this, a second resolution was offered by alderman Wysoski and seconded by alderman Engelstad to refer the matter to the utilities committee for investigation. A roll call vote on this resolution resulted in only one vote against the issue from alderman Penning who stated, "Why not solve the problem now? What is the utilities department to do with the issue?"

Bob Puetz, carpenter in Thief River Falls, appeared before council members concerning the possibility of sale of a 28x104 foot building to the city located at 903 Pennington avenue.

"It was stated previously," Puetz said, "that if we ever were to sell the building we were to notify the city as they stated their interest in it as a possible addition to their utility service. We have now decided to sell it."

Since the city showed no interest in the property at this time, alderman Wysoski introduced the resolution to waive any rights of the city to the possible purchasing of the property. Following a second from alderman Restad, and the motion carried.

The request by George Singer, Thief River Falls regional airport manager, concerned the display of a chamber of commerce board promoting the city of Thief River Falls, to be displayed at the airport.

"The chamber feels that people don't get to see it where it's displayed now, (the chamber of commerce office in the old Soo Line depot building) and the sign blends in with the terminal at the airport," Singer said.

Following the introduction of a resolution by alderman Penning, and a second from alderman Restad, the motion carried. It was also noted that if a situation such as this arises again, the matter will be referred to the airport committee first, Mayor Carlson stated.

In finance committee recommendation it was resolved that Thygeson construction company — the contractor presently working at the New Solum dumpground site north of Thief River Falls — would be paid for the amount specified in his original contract only (an amount not to exceed $9,500) which would exclude his additional $10,000 request to complete work at the site.

At the June 3 city council meeting, it was resolved by unanimous roll call vote that Thygeson would proceed with the partial clean-up project at a figure not to exceed $9,500.

During Monday evening's meeting, in a second resolution, it was resolved that the city would complete the rest of the work at the dumpground site.

"I think we should have the city forces see what they can do and to handle the matter the best way they can," alderman Penning said. "I don't think it's a good way to do business to specify one amount and later give more money to complete the project."

Meeting was adjourned until June 17 at 7 p.m. in the council chambers of the city auditorium.

While 1979 was a near-record income year for U.S. farmers, their costs for production inputs rose much faster than prices they received for farm goods.

IT'S A LONG WAY from Kansas City, Mo., to Thief River Falls, but Northwest Dairy day Tuesday had two visitors from the "show me" state. Bill and Mardi Redding of Liberty, Mo., near Kansas City, were passing through town from the Detroit Lakes area to Winnipeg on vacation when they noticed the dairy show in progress Tuesday morning. "We're city people . . . we've never seen anything like it!" Mrs. Redding exclaimed. The couple spent some time viewing the show and received some first-hand information from two dairy experts — Northwest Dairy Princess Tracy Foldesi of Greenbush (left) and Princess Kay of the Milky Way Tami Pennings of Roseland. The Reddings took with them a dairy day program book which this year included a summary history of the original dairy day which began in Thief River Falls.

Chemical Dependency A Common Problem

Use and abuse of chemicals — alcohol and other drugs — is one of the more devastating problems facing American society today.

Minnesota is certainly no exception. Experts estimate that one-tenth of our state population or 400,000 people have chemical abuse problems. This does not count the 1.4 million family members, friends, employers and co-workers who are affected when an individual becomes chemically dependent.

What I find particularly disturbing about these figures is that drug use is threatening our children. According to a study commissioner by the state Department of Welfare, 58 per cent of the students in our high schools say they have used marijuana and nearly one in every five students use it regularly — several times a week. Further, 85 per cent of our high school students have used alcohol and 28 per cent do so regularly.

Clearly, chemical dependency is a serious problem that deserves the attention of every Minnesotan. That is why this week I named a person to coordinate the state's expanded chemical dependency program. Roger Svendsen, who currently is a drug-health education specialist for the state Department of Education, will begin his new responsibilities on July 1. I consider chemical dependency so important that Svendsen will report directly to me.

Key to this new position and my desire for a more extensive chemical dependency program is prevention.

Currently Minnesota has excellent treatment programs for chemically dependent individuals. In this state there are 48 primary residential treatment facilities with a capacity of 2,180 beds. These facilities, which were established primarily by the private-non-profit sector, serve approximately 18,000 people each year. In addition to these residential treatment facilities, we have a network of related resources for the chemically dependent:

— 32 detoxification centers which have helped an estimated 30,000 people a year.

— 56 outpatient primary treatment programs capable of serving 1,000 clients a day.

— 50 halfway houses located in neighborhoods throughout the state, that serve 3,000 recovering persons a year while they find jobs and re-establish themselves in their communities.

While Minnesota's efforts to combat chemical dependency through treatment have been extensive, we cannot let the matter rest there.

To quote Peter Bell, a Minnesota leader in chemical dependency programs, "We have done a good job of bringing ambulances to the bottom of the cliff, but we must now erect a fence across the top." This means prevention.

People needed for a good prevention program are already in place — our educators, parents, clergy and friends. These types of people, human resources in the effort to prevent chemical abuse, are in every Minnesota community.

Responsibility of our state's new drug prevention director will be to work with local citizens to help them determine the best possible prevention program for their community. Specifically, he will work with community parent-support groups, school programs for staff and students and religious organizations. He'll use the services of the various state agencies currently involved in chemical dependency, such as education, corrections, welfare, health and public safety, and he will direct these agencies to support local community efforts to developing individualized programs.

Already the existing Prevention Support system, staffed jointly by the departments of Education and Welfare, has provided assistance to more than 60 Minnesota communities. With additional funds I am seeking from private agencies, I hope to see the number of communities served by this program more than double — with up to 75 additional communities served.

As we enter the 1980s, prevention of chemical dependency is one of my top priorities. With the emphasis that I am placing on prevention in my office I hope to see Minnesotans reduce their dependency on chemicals and change their attitudes about drugs.

Right now, for the vast majority of our society, it is okay to use drugs. It is my goal to see this attitude changed, first, to it is okay not to use drugs, and finally to the point where it is not okay to use drugs.

JUNIOR SHOWMANSHIP title at Northwest Dairy day in Thief River Falls Tuesday was won by 13-year-old David Lee, son of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Lee of Fosston and fourth year entry in the Region One dairy show. David showed this grade Holstein calf in winning the junior championship. His father is also a former Northwest Dairy day exhibitor, one of a growing list of people whose dairy day experiences are now being passed on to a second generation. Northwest Dairy day was in its 31st year this year.

State Deals In Hazardous Waste Disposal

Minnesota's hazardous-waste generators must disclose the nature and quantity of their wastes to the Minnesota pollution control agency (or to county officials if in the Twin Cities area) by June 18.

"The disclosure form is the beginning of the MPCA cradle-to-grave hazardous waste program, which will track the wastes from generation to safe, final disposal," said MPCA solid waste division director Dale Wikre. "This program is aimed at eliminating the improper and illegal disposal occurring now."

State industries generate about 128,000 tons of hazardous waste each year, most during production of such common goods as newspapers, TV sets, telephones, synthetic-fiber clothing and food. Wastes include acids, solvents, chemical sludges, pesticide residues, used oil and other materials that are toxic, corrosive, irritative, flammable, explosive or chemically reactive. About half of the state's hazardous wastes are put into sewers, dumped or buried illegally, or otherwise improperly handled, MPCA officials estimate.

Hazardous waste rules require firms to determine if their wastes are hazardous, and if so, file a disclosure with the MPCA. Generators in the seven-county metro area (about 1,500) must apply for generator-licenses from county solid waste officials in lieu of the MPCA disclosure. Up to 1,000 firms outside the metro area may be required to submit disclosures, the agency said. Wastes will be tracked by shipping papers until final disposal at a permitted hazardous waste disposal facility, according to the rules.

Sewage and radioactive wastes are exempt because they are regulated by other programs. For more information on disclosure requirements, call Bruce Brott at 612-297-2713.

Stangeland Is Sec. Of Prayer Breakfast

Congressman Arlan Stangeland, who was recently elected secretary to the Congressional prayer breakfast, stated, "the prayer breakfast is a very rewarding experience for me and I look forward each week to having the opportunity to join in prayer and worship with my colleagues in the House."

Prayer breakfast has been conducted for the past 30 years on a weekly basis and is open to members of Congress, former members of Congress and members of legislative bodies from foreign nations.

Format calls for opening with a prayer followed by remarks from a member who has been designated to lead the morning discussion. Topics of discussion include personal testimonies and how religion relates to national issues. Hour long meeting, which is nondenominational and receives bipartisan participation, is then closed with a prayer.

In addition to members of the House and Senate, the national prayer breakfast (which is conducted annually to coincide with the convening of each new session of Congress) is attended by the president, vice president, members of the cabinet and distinguished guests from across the country and throughout the world.

As an officer in the Congressional prayer breakfast, Stangeland will play a major role in organizing the national prayer breakfast to be conducted next February.

State Mascots Listed In New NWF Publication

A scissor-tailed flycatcher holds the title in Oklahoma. In Vermont it's the hermit thrush. All 50 states, in fact, have chosen official state birds and many have also named official mammals, trees and flowers. Eighteen states have gone so far as to designate official state insects.

Complete lists can be found in a new publication available free from the National Wildlife Federation — "Official Birds, Mammals, Trees, Flowers, Insects and Fish of the U.S., Territories and Possessions."

The NWF pamphlet reveals that the most honored bird in the U.S. is the cardinal, which is the official bird in seven states (Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, North Carolina, Ohio, Virginia and West Virginia), perhaps in gratitude for the bird's helpful habit of feeding on the destructive boll weevil and codling moth. Two states chose endangered species for their state bird: Hawaii took the nene (Hawaiian goose) and Louisiana took the brown pelican.

Most popular official mammal among the 23 states that have named one is the white-tailed deer, chosen by South Carolina, Pennsylvania and Mississippi. Three states appointed endangered mammals as their mascots: Connecticut, the sperm whale; Florida, the manatee; and Hawaii, the hump-back whale.

Virginia declined to name a state mammal, but chose instead to appoint an official state dog: the foxhound, of course, in honor of the state's renowned fox hunts. Maryland also named an official state dog — the Chesapeake Bay retriever, while Idaho calls the Appaloosa its official state horse.

Every state has an official tree, and 18 chose a conifer — from the longleaf pine (Alabama) to the Black Hills spruce (South Dakota). Other popular species were the oak, elm and maple, while Mississippi, naturally, chose the magnolia.

Mississippi also named the magnolia its official state flower, as did Louisiana. Five states and the District of Columbia decided that a rose, by any name, is sweet. So, D.C. went with the American Beauty rose; Georgia, the Cherokee rose; Iowa, the wild rose; North Dakota, the wild prairie rose; and New York, which isn't picky, just the rose.

Of the 18 states that decided to designate an official insect, nine chose the honeybee, that helpful pollinator. Connecticut honors the praying mantis, the gardener's delight, while California went with the yellow and black dogface butterfly.

As for official fish, 26 states were lured into naming one. Bass, both large and smallmouth, white and striped, were chosen by ten states. Nine states named five varieties of trout — golden, rainbow, brook, steelhead and the black spotted cutthroat, which is endangered in its sponsor state of Montana.

Claire Garcia Is Member Of Vet Program

Claire Garcia, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Storhaug of Thief River Falls, recently became a member of a team of four counselors who will be working with Vietnam veterans at a new vet center of the veterans outreach program located in Memphis, TN.

The outreach program, according to a recent story in the "Tennessee Veterans News," is aimed at assisting Vietnam era veterans who are having difficulty in re-entering the mainstream of American life. Motto of the organization is "Help Without Hassle."

Garcia, a social worker and outreach technician, has been a navy hospital corpsman for four years and was formerly employed by the University of Tennessee hospital, department of social work.

She has counseled several women whose husbands are veterans and hopes to expand that service while working at the vet center. "I know this has torn a lot of marriages apart. Until a wife understands, she can't help her husband deal with the problem, and it creates extreme frustration," she said in a recent story in the "Commercial Appeal", a Memphis newspaper.

Garcia, a graduate of Lincoln high school, entered the United States navy after being employed in Thief River Falls for a short period of time after graduation. She attended hospital corpsman school in Great Lakes, IL before being assigned to naval medical facilities in Memphis.

The vet center will offer counseling to at least 36,000 area veterans, as many as 10 per cent of whom may now be experiencing "delayed stress reactions ranging from insomnia to suicidal tendicies," according to statements made by Edwin J. Wallin, director of the veterans outreach center, in "The Commercial Appeal."

Center is one in 100 opening in the United States to deal with problems of the Vietnam veteran including problems encountered after being exposed to agent Orange — a defoliant (chemical spray) used in Vietnam to cause leaves on trees to drop prematurely.

Center is designed to provide Vietnam veterans with an opportunity to receive professional services and referrals through non-traditional approaches. Individual and group counseling are important parts of the program, according to information supplied in the "Tennessee Veterans News."

SENIOR SHOWMANSHIP champion at Northwest Dairy day in Thief River Falls Tuesday was Mark Taus, 17, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Taus of Angus, who showed this purebred Holstein calf. Judges commented on his alertness and attentiveness during the entire dairy show as well as the showmanship contest.

Standards For Rural Trash Disposal Eased

Refuse disposal standards for some rural areas will be less stringent due to a state solid waste rule-revision that took effect recently after extensive Minnesota pollution control agency (MPCA) public hearings.

"Modified landfills" now may be established instead of sanitary landfills in areas with less than 2,500 permanent residents which meet certain eligibility requirements under the recently-revised Minnesota Rule SW-11.

Refuse in modified landfills must be covered with soil weekly from May through November and monthly from December through April. Sanitary landfill refuse is covered with soil each day. In addition, the rule permits some burning of wood wastes at separate locations under certain conditions.

Rule was revised after numerous public hearings initiated by complaints from rural counties that full-fledged sanitary landfill standards are too strict and expensive for small rural landfills to meet.

"The revised SW-11 is a good example of public input helping to make better environmental rules," said Dale Wikre, MPCA solid waste division director. "The rule will make rural waste management less expensive without causing us to lose ground in cleaning up the unsanitary dumps in the state," he added.

For more information on eligibility for modified landfill status, contact Edward Meyer (612-297-2705).

Opposes Social Security Tax As Income

Cosponsoring legislation which would prevent the taxing of social security benefits, Senator Rudy Boschwitz said such taxation "would be a burden our senior citizens can not afford to bear."

The legislation was prompted by a recommendation earlier this year from the social security advisory council. That body proposed that half of all social security benefits be taxed as income.

"The legislation I have cosponsored," Boschwitz said, "will assure that social security benefits are permanently exempt from taxation.

"The social security program was designed to supplement the income of senior citizens in this country," Boschwitz said, "and it seems ridiculous to me that we would propose paying them their benefits on the one hand and then withdraw a good portion of those benefits on the other hand.

"With inflation racing away and many senior citizens living on fixed incomes, such as social security," Boschwitz said, "it would be unfair to further burden them by taxing that fixed income or any portion of it.

"Social security benefits are exempt from taxation by regulation now," Boschwitz said. "However, they are not excluded by federal law. This measure would make it federal law that the benefits can never be taxed."

OSHA Impact Negative Says Gov't. Bureau

This is the tale of two approaches to the same problem: What is the most effective method of providing safe and healthy workplaces for the nation's millions of workers?

Congress set out in 1970 with the Occupational Safety and Health act to build a vast, new federal regulatory system to do the job. It set up a new agency named OSHA, which establishes standards that employers must follow, sends out compliance officers to inspect work premises and penalizes employers who violate the rules. In 1979 OSHA conducted nearly 50,000 inspections, and in more than 71 per cent of these cases inspectors failed to find even a single "serious" hazard.

This approach has earned OSHA the reputation of most disliked agency in Washington among U.S. business people.

Another approach is illustrated by the experience of Deere & Co., a nationally known manufacturer of farm and other heavy equipment. For the last five years Deere, which employs 51,000 in 11 manufacturing sites, has concentrated its safety programs on performance — in other words, not so much on OSHA's rules and regulations but on what Deere knows will work in its plants to cut down accidents and injuries.

What are the results of the two different approaches?

Deere & Co. is the winner easily, judging from several days of testimony before the Senate labor and human resources committee, which is studying possible reform of the act.

Sen. Richard S. Schweiker (R-Pa.), the leading reform advocate, cites data of the bureau of labor statistics showing that since inception of OSHA serious work injuries — those resulting in time off work — have risen by 25 per cent from 3.2 per 100 workers in 1972 to 4.0 per 100 workers in 1978. Rate for lost workdays due to injuries increased by 34 per cent.

"Despite imposing costs of more than $25 billion on American business and more than $1 billion on American taxpayers since its inception in 1971, OSHA has failed to achieve a significant impact on employee injury and illness rates," Dr. Richard L. Lesher, president of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, testified at the hearings, citing similar data.

What happened? OSHA was supposed to cut the accident rate in half by 1980, according to its most ardent congressional advocates. Why has it failed?

Although there are many reasons, Dr. Lesher believes the main reason lies in the fact that government decrees have their limitations. He quoted John Dunlop, the Harvard labor scholar, who observed: "Compliance cannot be compelled through a police effort in every workplace."

Fundamental reason for failure, Dr. Lesher declared, is that OSHA has encouraged "an atmosphere of confrontation, adversary relations and litigation, rather than persuasion, mutual accommodation and problem solving."

"It is clear that OSHA has assumed a combative posture towards business, to the disservice of the concept of worker protection."

A Deere safety official, Ted M. Wire, told the Senate committee of the company's approach. While following OSHA's rigid compliance rules from 1972 to 1974 worker injuries rose by 42 per cent.

Company concluded that reliance on this approach — rules that inflexibly specify physical working conditions, retrofitting of equipment, etc., — had failed. It began concentrating on the performance approach by eliminating injuries, identifying hazards by where and how they occurred, not by rules, and taking responsibility for employee protection in its own hands. By 1980, all injuries were reduced 74 per cent, serious injuries by 76 per cent, and days off the job declined by 89 per cent.

U.S. Chamber supports the Schweiker bill, which gives an incentive or reward to employers to turn in good safety records. Those with safe work premises would be exempt from routine safety inspections. Employers would thus be able to concentrate on preventing injuries, not preventing citations.

"OSHA's poor performance, as documented by nearly a decade of failures, raises a serious question for all Americans. Is it possible to turn a massive, misdirected government bureaucracy around? We soon may know the answer," Dr. Lesher said.

Traces Foreign Policy Problems To Languages

Current setbacks in U.S. foreign policy can be traced to lack of support for education, university of Minnesota president C. Peter Magrath said in a speech Friday in Omaha, Neb.

Lukewarm support of international education and foreign language study, among other things, make it "hardly surprising that we experience incredible difficulties in relating to, understanding and working with peoples of other nations," Magrath said.

Magrath made his remarks in a speech Friday night to outstanding high school students at a scholarship dinner sponsored by the Omaha World Herald.

"If you wonder how a huge mob could take over an American embassy with no advance warning, consider that only two of the more than 60 American embassy personnel in Teheran spoke Farsi, the language of Iran," Magrath said.

Recent inability of the United States to remain competitive on the world market can also be tied to language barriers, he said. "There are 10,000 Japanese salesmen in New York alone who speak perfect English. Very few of the 1,000 or so American salesmen in Tokyo speak Japanese."

Further, he said, misunderstandings by Americans of Soviets are linked to the "fact that there are more teachers of English in the USSR than there are students of Russian in the entire United States."

These examples pinpoint the problems caused by U.S. incompetence in foreign languages, but lack of support for other types of education can also harm foreign policy, he said.

"In many cases we are losing the battle in the drawing rooms and experimental laboratories of this nation," Magrath said. Early financial support for research in the 1950s and '60s dropped off after 1964, and as other countries spent more on research and development as a per centage of their gross national productions, the United States spent less. "Is it any surprise today that U.S. products are losing out in many markets to those offered by . . . other countries who decided that investment in research and development made sound domestic and foreign policy?"

Beyond its implications for foreign policy, support for education is the soundest domestic policy ever adopted in this country, Magrath said. Contrary to criticism, the nation has not been "duped" into producing an overeducated nation. In fact, he said, the payoff far exceeds the initial investment.

"Education has done as much to ensure the basic exercise of rights under the law as has the Declaration of Independence," he said. "Education has done more to liberate this nation's ghettos than have the Emancipation Proclamation, CETA programs, and professional basketball contracts combined."

Advances made in agricultural production over the past two centuries are the direct result of support for education, Magrath said. Education of the farmers themselves combined with research done in the laboratories of land-grant universities have made it possible for one farm worker to feed 60 people today, he said.

"Over the past 20 years, the return on agricultural research investments is on the order of 50 per cent annually," a fact that has made the United States the world's largest producer of food.

If worldwide hunger is to be eliminated, the American populace must be taught to understand the role agriculture plays in world stability, and funds for agricultural research must be increased, Magrath said.

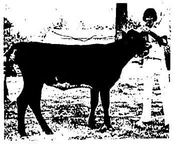
Similar stories can be told about industry, technology, health and business, where the input is educated people and the output is progress, he said.

Likewise, inflation will only be licked through education, he said. "If we are able to cure the problem of double-digit inflation, we must wage a campaign against one of its primary causes — U.S. dependence on expensive foreign oil."

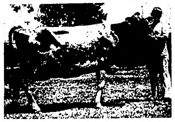
That dependence will only be eliminated through research on alternative energy sources, he said.

Magrath criticized the presidential candidates for "lack of attention" to education as a national policy and as "a proven winner."

An executive order issued by Congress on March 31, 1840 by President Van Buren established a 10-hour day for federal employees on public works without reduction in pay, according to a U.S. Department of Labor publication, "Important Events in American Labor History."



MILKING SHORTHORN entry by Mark Erie, 17, was this grade calf which won the breed championship award. The calf was shown by Jeff Stormo because Mark was unable to attend the show. Mark is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Erie of Gonvick.



GUERNSEY breed champion at Northwest Dairy day in Thief River Falls Tuesday was this four-year-old grade shown by Kathy Carlson, 17, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Carlson of Clearbrook. It was Kathy's third breed championship in her fourth year of showing at Northwest Dairy day. Last year she showed the reserve champion of the entire show.

More Learned About Treating Asthma Cases

Asthma has been known for at least 3,500 years. The ancient Egyptians prescribed for it. Hippocrates described it some 2,400 years ago.

Only in this century has the true nature of asthma been uncovered. And only in recent years has research taught us much more about the causes and treatment of asthma, say physicians at a St. Paul hospital.

In the United States alone there are an estimated nine million asthmatics of all ages. About five per cent of children are diagnosed asthmatic at some time during childhood.

Bronchial asthma is a condition marked by periodic difficulty in breathing with coughing and wheezing.

Asthma attacks may begin suddenly or gradually; their duration may be brief or may last weeks. Asthma may appear at any age from infancy to old age.

Symptoms are produced by obstruction of the bronchial airways caused by spasm and contraction of the tiny muscles around the bronchial tubes, swelling of the membranes lining the tubes and increased secretions of mucous and consequent plugging of the tubes.

"Most cases of asthma are triggered by upper respiratory viral infections and allergens," says Paul Kubic, M.D. Allergens are substances that some individuals are sensitive to, but that are harmless to most other people. Allergens include pollen, dust, molds, feathers, animal danders, foods and other substances.

Other factors that can trigger asthma are nonspecific irritants such as smoke and odors, physical factors such as changes in weather, temperature and humidity. Many suffer from exercise-induced asthma.

Physicians advise parents to get help for their child, because untreated asthma, they say, could get progressively worse.

There often are no symptoms between attacks in the early stages, but, as the child's disease progresses, wheezing may become almost continuous. Without proper medical care the child with asthma can develop other complications such as chronic bronchitis.

A wide variety of medical treatments are available for the proper care of asthma. Doctors may make use of some or all of them, depending on the child's case.

Care should begin with a complete medical and personal history and a thorough physical examination. The child's doctor also might take samples of blood and sputum for laboratory analysis, do chest x-rays, examine the nasal and bronchial passages and do lung function tests. If an allergy is the suspected cause of the asthma, the physician might want to do skin tests.

After diagnosis of asthma is established, several treatments are available, including: Control of the environment to reduce exposure to allergens and non-specific irritants; medications to loosen secretions, reduce inflamation and relieve muscle spasm, which causes wheezing; and for asthma caused by allergies, a series of injections can be given to help build up the body's resistance to allergens.

Supportive measures such as a regular program of breathing exercise, physical activities, diet and relaxation therapy help the child with asthma to maintain good physical and emotional well-being.

Children's hospital physicians caution parents of the child with asthma to remember that asthma is a chronic illness, one that persists for life and one that does not respond promptly to treatment.

However, proper treatment, particularly if it is begun early, can minimize its effects, prevent many of the attacks and make life easier for the child with asthma.

Father's Day Golf Tournament

Annual Father's Day shortstop golf tournament will be played Sunday at the Thief River Country Club course and as usual a wide-open race is expected for the top finish in the championship flight.

Bemidji State University golfer Tom Zieman is expected to be on hand in an attempt to defend his 1979 title, but the one-time Lincoln high school golfer who graduated from International Falls high school, faces a challenge to repeat his championship performance.

Records are incomplete, but dating back to 1971, only Scott Harris of Roseau has been able to come up with back-to-back Father's Day tournament wins here. He accomplished the feat in 1976 and 1977.

Key Softball Match Is Friday

Softball fans are looking forward to Friday's Thief River Falls men's slow pitch schedule that matches the top two teams in the American League West Division, McDonald's-Dallmann and the American Legion Raiders, against each other at 6:20 p.m. on Field 2 at the slow pitch complex on highway 1, east.

McDonald's-Dallmann is 7-0 and the only unbeaten squad in the 32-team men's slow pitch softball association. But the American League West Division leaders found themselves down 7-1 going into the sixth inning against Terry's Mobil Tuesday before they rallied to win 11-8.

And the American Legion Raiders benefited when the association's board of directors upheld a protest they filed last week that turned a 12-7 Wednesday night loss to Furuseth-Nelson into a 9-8 victory last night. Resumed in the fourth inning when the protested play occurred, the Raiders still waited until the bottom of the seventh to score two runs and pull out the decision that made them 5-1 in league play instead of 4-2.

Miscellaneous

+ A reminder that Minnesota North Stars defenseman Gary Sargent will be at the Thief River Falls Racquetball and Exercise Club Saturday afternoon for an autograph and photo session as part of the open house at the club. A former Bemidji high school athletic star in football, hockey and baseball, Sargent is called "one of the eight best defensemen in the NHL," by Minnesota general manager Lou Nanne. Sargent played three years with the Los Angeles Kings of the NHL before signing as a free agent with Minnesota for the 1978-79 season.

+ How close is close? Grand Rapids, a 8-5 winner over Thief River Falls during the regular season, bowed to Bloomington Kennedy in first round Class AA state tournament play last weekend 4-3. But it went right down to the wire for the Indians, Region 7AA champions for the fourth straight year. They led Kennedy 3-1 going into the top of the seventh, fell behind 4-3 and nearly pulled it out in the bottom of the inning when they loaded the bases with two outs and batter Bruce LaRoque enjoyed a 3-0 count. But on a full-county pitch he grounded the ball back to the mound for a game-ending out.

+ Detroit Lakes high school baseball coach Bob Hooper expects to have a strong ball club in 1981 when the Lakers will return all but five seniors off this's 10-8 team. Six sophomores lettered with the Lakers this spring and Hooper said, "I've told those coming back that our 1981 team has an excellent change of beating the 14-4 overall record of our 1970 team, and they can do it if they really want it because the talent is there."

+ Jim Heckroth, owner-operator of the Marshallton Gun Club, site of the weekly Thief River Falls trap league competition, won top overall honors at the Billy Fawcett trap shoot Sunday at the Minneapolis gun club in Prior Lake. Heckroth, a former Nevada state champion, finished with a 678 out of a possible 700.

TRF Legion Is 10-2 Winner At Crookston

Northwest American Legion baseball league season opener for Thief River Falls Tuesday at Crookston produced a 10-2 win for the unbeaten visitors, now 5-0 overall.

Winning pitcher Jeff Ulrich was backed by eight Thief River Falls base hits that went along with seven Crookston errors. He limited Crookston to five base hits.

Thief River Falls never trailed after opening with a 2-0 lead in the top of the first inning. After the first two batters struck out, Scott McKeever singled, Ulrich walked and both runners ended up scoring on an outfield error on a ball hit by Jeff Cwikla.

There were two outs again in the third when Thief River Falls turned a 2-1 game into a 4-1 contest as Ulrich and Cwikla hit back-to-back doubles and Mark Schmitke followed with a single.

Thief River Falls added two runs in the fourth and four in the seventh to sew up the victory.

Thief River Falls will host Newfolden Thursday in a 7 p.m. Northwest League game and will entertain Fergus Falls Friday in a 6 p.m. nonconference doubleheader.

Far North Event Slated For Sunday

A balanced field, featuring a pair of Grand Forks finalists from a year ago, will be the attraction Sunday in the 18th annual Far North fast pitch softball tournament in Thief River Falls.

Pairings have not yet been announced for the proposed 16-team event, but already indicating they will be here are Bonanza and Molstad Excavating, who met in the 1979 Far North championship game. Bonanza, then Red River Cement, won that game 9-7 and finished the year as the North Dakota Class A state champions.

Another strong Grand Forks entry will be Duckstad Contracting, a finalist last Sunday in a tournament at Grand Forks. Duckstad Contracting features the tournament's top performer — Alex Cooley, who stars both as a pitcher and a batter.

Devils Lake's Knights of Columbus, along with Northland Pro, Coca-Cola and Action Realty of Thief River Falls are also mentioned as Far North championship contenders. Those three Thief River Falls entries all turned in solid performances in Grand Forks, with Northland Pro taking consolation honors.

First round games will start at 9 a.m. on four fairgrounds diamonds. Championship game is expected to start at about 5 p.m.

Kim Swanson and Jodi Helt hit two home runs apiece and Arlene Walseth added a single homer as Walseth Construction defeated The Barbers 13-7.

Karen Berggren pitched a shutout as Roseau Transport blanked the American Legion 10-0.

Bicycle Trails Are Developed By State DNR

Department of Natural Resources reminded bicycling enthusiasts that the DNR has developed four recreational trails in the state for their pleasure and convenience.

In the Twin Cities metro area there are the Luce line and the Countryview bicycle trails.

The Luce line, which originates in Plymouth and extends westward 104 miles, is a multi purpose recreational trail with 18 miles constructed for bicycle use.

The Countryview trail spans 22 miles, from Lake Phalen on the east side of St. Paul to Stillwater.

In the southeast, the Douglas trail between Rochester and Pine Island has 11 miles developed for bibycles.

South central Minnesota is the site of the Sakatah Singing Hills trail, a 48 mile multi use trail between Fairbault and Mankato with eight miles set aside for bicyclers.

The Heartland Trail between Walker and Park Rapids affords 28 miles of hard surface riding.

Additional information on the trails can be obtained from the DNR Trails and Waterways Unit, Space Center Building, St. Paul. Phone 612-296-4822.

Dave Lee Pitches Second Shutout In Slow Pitch

Dave Lee, who earlier this spring pitched a two-hitter, came up with a one-hit shutout Monday to lead Hardees past winless Lon's 13-0 in the Thief River Falls men's slow pitch softball association.

Phil Fore homered and went 4-for-4 at the plate for the winners, who took over sole possession of first place in the National League West Division standings when First Federal, involved in a first place tie with Hardees when the night began, dropped a 16-12 ten-inning decision to IWA.

Reid Fore also homered for Hardees and Lee, in addition to his pitching, went 3-for-3 at the plate.

Geat Northwest Agency and Consumer's Co-op kept pace with each other in the National League East Division standings Monday as Great Northwest Agency beat Wilson Brothers 5-1 and Consumer's Co-op knocked off the E.T. Bees 10-2 for 6-2 records.

Elsewhere Monday, Dave Hanson doubled home the winning run as Sound Level-Holthusen out-scored The Club 11-10, Bob Fleming hit a three-run home run as Schumacher's Tireland handled Lon's 20-7, the TRF Aggies defeated Sparby-Johnson 8-1 and Thorp-KKAQ beat First Northwestern Insurance Agency.

Tuesday's American League action produced a new East Division leader as the TRF Merchants defeated Wagon Wheel 20-8 to move ahead of idle Popplers-Action Realty.

John Nelson hit a two-run inside-the-park home run in the first inning and finished 3-for-3 at the plate to lead Furuseth-Nelson to a 9-4 win over Coca-Cola.

McDonald's-Dallmann remained unbeaten with an 11-8 come-from-behind victory over Terry's Mobil, scoring six runs in the top of the seventh inning to win it.

Given a reprieve on a protest call, the American Legion Raiders turned what had been a 12-7 defeat a week earlier into a 9-8 win over Furuseth-Nelson.

Elsewhere Tuesday, Swenson Plumbing doubled the St. Hilaire Bears 4-2, Tony Dorn dropped Hobo Haus 5-1, the American Legion Raiders out-scored Bridgeman 11-7 and Home Lumber picked up a forfeit win over Arnold Realty.

Tornado capital of the world, the U.S. has the unfortunate distinction of being struck by far more twisters than any other country — between 600 and 1,200 yearly. This map shows the average number of tornadoes that have hit each state annually during the past 25 years. The figures in parentheses are the average number of tornado-related deaths each year during the same period. As these statistics show, the greatest potential for casualties is not necessarily where the largest number of storms occur. Mississippi, for instance, has had the second highest number of deaths in recent years, even though nearly a dozen other states have been hit by more twisters. The chart at right depicts when tornadoes are most likely to strike.

Twisters In Midwest Make U.S. Tornado Capital Of The World

It's tornado season in the U.S., especially in a five-state area known as "tornado alley," and if 1980 is an average year, some 600 to 1,200 tornadoes will kill about 120 Americans before it's over, according to the current issue of National Wildlife magazine.

Tornado alley extends from Texas north through Oklahoma, Kansas, Nebraska and Missouri, the National Wildlife Federation bimonthly reports, and although tornadoes have occurred in all 50 states, the frequency of twisters in that area has given the U.S. the unfortunate distinction of being the "tornado capital of the world."

In that "alley," from April through June, warm air flowing northward from the Gulf of Mexico collides with cold, dry winds blowing south from Canada, the report explains, and these "discordant elements" give birth to the violent thunderstorms that spawn tornadoes.

A tornado (from tornada, the Spanish word for thunderstorms) is a rotating column of air spinning around a vacuum. "Erupting from a cumulonimbus, or thunder cloud, this funnel is made of condensed water; in effect it is a cloud itself," says National Wildlife. When the "cloud" reaches the ground, it picks up dirt and debris which makes it turn black in color. Its great destructive power comes from the high, twisting velocity of its winds, which can churn at more than 400 miles per hour.

Scientists do not know why tornadoes form in some clouds and not in others. Because most twisters are short-lived and seldom travel more than 15 miles, they are extremely difficult to study. T. Theodore Fujita, a University of Chicago meteorologist who is considered the nation's leading authority on twisters, told National Wildlife, "If you look at a world map for places that are likely to have tornadoes, you look for areas where warm moisture can move inland onto a continent from tropical waters, uninterrupted by mountains."

Usually, twisters spin in a counterclockwise rotation, traveling northeasterly at about 40 miles per hour. Most of them fizzle out in less than half an hour, "but occasionally," reports National Wildlife, "twisters come in bunches over a longer period of time." In this century this has happened three times:

•On March 18, 1925, seven tornadoes ripped across a 437-mile area of Missouri, Illinois and Indiana. The largest of them covered more than 200 miles and killed nearly 700 people.

•On March 18, 1965, a massive siege of 37 twisters covered 853 miles in six states. Some 800 people died and property damage surpassed $300 million.

•On April 3 and 4, 1974, the greatest tornado eruption in the nation's history occurred. In a 16-hour period, no fewer than 148 twisters gouged through 13 states east of the Mississippi river, covering 2,000 miles and killing about 300 people. The damage amounted to more than a half billion dollars.

The worst tornado of last year struck the north Texas town of Wichita Falls on April 10, 1979 — a day local citizens now call "Terrible Tuesday." For 20 minutes in the late afternoon the city of 100,000 people was struck by a violent tornado whose winds rotated at more than 200 miles per hour, killing 45 people and destroying about $400 million worth of property. Wichita Falls is on the southern tip of tornado alley.

Meteorologists predict that in the heart of tornado alley, chances are that a specific location might be struck by a twister about once every 250 years. "But tornado patterns do not fit mathematical models," explains National Wildlife. Oklahoma City has been hit by twisters 32 times since 1892. And the community of Codell, Kansas, amazingly, was hit three years in a row — 1916, 1917 and 1918 — on the same day, May 20.

Researchers may never be able to prevent tornadoes, although Fujita has been able to break up scaled-down twisters in his laboratory. Fortunately, advances have been made in tornado detection. In Norman, Okla., a 30-foot dome houses a radar system operated by the National Severe Storms Laboratory. A year ago, the system picked up almost every twister in the area, and enabled weathermen to locate some tornadoes a half an hour before they hit.

If a tornado approaches your area, National Wildlife offers this advice: "Go to the basement or innermost room of the house or building, away from windows.

Chemical Use In Lakes Calls For Caution

Use of copper sulphate and other chemicals for treatment of algae and vegetation in lakes can be done safely — if it is done correctly, the Department of Natural Resources said.

Howard Krosch of the DNR's ecological service section said the department does not promote the use of chemicals in lakes but recognized that serious nuisance conditions occur.

"Use of the chemicals is allowed providing their use will improve recreation and so long as no significant damage is done to the lake's fish and wildlife populations," he said.

"Chemicals, like other tools, are safe if used correctly but can be dangerous and destructive if used improperly," he emphasized.

Use of any chemicals in Minnesota lakes and streams requires a permit from the Department of Natural Resources. When an application for chemical use is received, several pages of instructional material are sent along to the applicant.

One of the most commonly applied for permits is for use of copper sulphate to control algae. Detailed instructions are provided by the DNR regarding the correct method of applying this chemical so as to achieve the desired result without damaging fish life.

"Most problems resulting from chemical application occur because the person using the chemical does not read the label on its container and is careless when applying it," said Krosch. He added that use of any pesticide-chemical in a manner inconsistent with label instructions is a violation of federal law.

In Loving Memory

In loving memory of our dear son and brother David Nordhagen who left us June 11, 1960.

"God loaned us for a little while
A child so sweet and good
To Teach him what we knew of life
And love him while we could.
He brought his charms to gladden us
And, though his stay was brief,
We have undying memories so solace for our grief.
Though God's angels came to call for him
Much sooner than we'd planned,
We've braved the bitter grief that came
And tried to understand.
For God did so much love him and so longingly He yearned.
For the little boy He loaned us
With life's lessons so well learned.'

Missed by his parents, brothers, Les, Bruce, Rick, Steve and sister Shirley. 1t47p

Card of Thanks

We wish to thank our children, grandchildren, relatives and friends for the cards, gifts, flowers, and for helping us to celebrate our 45th anniversary. A special thanks to Father Bernauer for celebrating Mass at our home.
